Miscellaneous.

For the Patriot

Reminiscences First Church in Quincy.

About three years after Mr. Wheelright's removal from this town, the relics of his Society petitioned the Court for a prominent organization. In Governor Winthrop's Journal, under date of September 17th, 1639, the following account of the petition is mentioned:

"Mount Wollaston had been formerly laid to Boston; but many poor men having lots assigned them there; and not able to use those lands and dwell still in Boston, they petitioned the town first, to have a minister there, and after, to have leave to establish a church there, which the town at length, (upon some small composition) gave way unto. So this day they gathered a church after the usual manner, and chose one Mr. Tompson (whose name is spelt without an h) a very gracious and sincere man, and Mr. Flynt, a godly man also, their ministers."

It was the custom in the early days of New England, to settle two ministers; one as their pastor, and the other as their teacher. It seems somewhat singular that they were able to support two ministers at this period, as the parishes were small, and comparatively poor, when at the present time they have much difficulty in sustaining one.

The following six individuals are the members who subscribed to the Covenant, together with the pastor and teacher, which constituted the small church then gathered in this place: George Rose, Stephen Kinsley, (Elder) John Dasset, William Potter, Martin Saunders, and Gregory Belcher. Not one, at the present time, by the name of the original six, who signed the Covenant, are to be found in the Parish or Society. All have become extinct as far as this Church is concerned; such have been the ravages of time. Eight days after the organization of the Church, Mr. Tompson was ordained, viz. November 19, 1639, and Mr. Flynt, seven months after. The reason of this delay on the part of Mr. Flynt was, that he had become tainted with the doctrine of Mr. Wheelright, and was put on probation, no doubt, to afford him liberal opportunity for his reformation. In the order of time, in which the churches were organized in the Massachusetts Colony, this was the fifteenth.

Nearly a year after the Society was organized, July 12th, 1640, Mr. Samuel Bass became their first Deacon, having been dismissed and recommended to them from the first church, Roxbury, and Mr. Alexander Winchester, by a desire of the Braintree church, was recommended and dismissed from the first church, in Boston, unto them, July 12th, 1640. In 1642, July 21st, Mr. Richard Brackett, was ordained Deacon from the first church, Boston. Mr. Stephen Kinsley, of Dorchester, now Milton, was chosen first Ruling-Elder, Oct. 12, 1634. By the old record, it appears that Deacon Brackett, received eighteen votes for Elder, Mr. Bass fifteen, and Mr. Kinsley eight. The probability is, that Mr. Brackett and Mr. Bass declined, and the lot fell upon Mr. Kinsley.

Mr. Tompson was a native of Lancashire, England. Before leaving England, he was classed among the first ministers in point of talent. He was educated at Oxford University, and preached in the North of England; which is summed up by Cotton Mather in his peculiar poetic fancy:

"Oxford this light with Tongues and Art doth trim
And then his Northern town doth challenge him;
His time and strength he centered there in this;
To do good works, and be what now he is.
His fulgent virtues there, and learned strains,
Till, comely presence, life unsullied with stains,
Things most on Wollstone, in their stories wit,
Did him to move in words of service fit."

There is some uncertainty where Mr. Tompson was born, whether at Lawton or Winwick, in the county of Lancashire. The following statement may throw some light on this disputed point.

"In 1644 was published A Modest and Brotherly Answer to Mr. Charles Herle, his book, against the Independency of Churches, &c. This was the joint production of Mr. Richard Mather and Mr. William Tompson. In the preface to this work, occurs this passage: 'So in special manner, in love to yourself, and our dear Countrymen and friends, as in other places of Lancashire, so in your Parish of Winwick, wherein one of us was born, and the other was for sundry years together an unworthy Minister of the Gospel of Christ.'"

Drake in his Antiquities of Boston, states that he was born at Winwick, but afterwards makes the following correction in the Antiquarian Journal.

"From this passage, and the direct statement in the life of Richard Mather, in his 'Life and Death,' published under the sanction of his son, increase, we stated elsewhere; reasoning that Mather wrote the Preface above referred to, as his name is the first of the signers to it, and that the words, 'unworthy Minister,' would not be applied to him, Mr. Tompson, knowing also, that Mr. Mather, was born at Lowton. Now, Lowton, is in the parish of Winwick, and it does not appear that he preached in that parish 'sundry years.' Hence it may be inferred that Mr. Tompson was the preacher there, but was born elsewhere."

The time of Mr. Tompson's arrival in the country cannot be determined with certainty. Farmer says, he came in the year 1637, but does not give his reasons. Johnson in his "Wonder Working Providence," and Josselyn, in his "Chronological Observations," give 1638, as the year of his emigration. After his arrival in New England, he went to Dorchester to reside, and there joined the church in the year 1638. Winthrop says in his Journal, that Mr. Tompson, a very holy man, who had been an instrument of much good, at Acomenticus was ordained minister at Braintree. This was the original name of York, in what is now the State of Maine.

Under date of the 27th of the 11th month, 1639, a grant of one hundred and twenty acres of land at Mount Wollaston was made to Mr. Tompson, free from the rate of 3s. per acre, which charge was one of the conditions annexed by the town of Boston to the permission they gave the inhabitants at the Mount to become a town by themselves. There was at the same time a grant made of eighty acres, free from the same rate, to Mr. Henry Flynt, teacher of the newly gathered church. And as late as the 29th of the 5th month, (July) 1644, the following grant is recorded:

"That parcel of Marsh that belongeth unto the town of Boston, in the Three Hill Marsh, Braintree, which was not formerly counted to belong to Mr. Wheelright's Marsh, together with the two Hillocks of Upland therein, is granted to be equally divided between William Tompson and Henry Flynt, Teacher of the Church of Braintree. The first mention of the pastor and teacher to be found in the Braintree Town Records, is the following:

"29th, 10th month, (December) 1645.—At a Town meeting, there being present Mr. Welde, James Penman, Martin Sanders, Thomas McKins, Samuel Bass, Peter Brackett. It is ordered that fourteen acres of Town Marsh shall be improved to the Elders use, Mr. Tompson and Mr. Flynt, till such time as the townsmen shall see fit to dispose of it. This is all the grants I have been able to find in the old records.

In 1642, Mr. Tompson was chosen with three others to go as a missionary to Virginia. A request being made from certain individuals in this remote Colony, that competent ministers of the Congregational order, should be sent to preach the Gospel to them, as they were under the control of the Episcopal Church. The historian gives the following account of this expedition:

"The three ministers which were sent to Virginia, viz. Mr. Tompson, Mr. Knolles and Mr. James from New Haven, (formerly the pastor of the church at Charlestown) departed the 8th of the 7th month, and were eleven weeks before they arrived. They lay wind-bound some time at Aquid; then, as they passed Hellgate, between Long Island and the rocks, so as she was near foundered upon they could run on the next shore. The Dutch governor gave them slender entertainment; but Mr. Alleton, of New Haven, being there, took great pains and care for them, and provided them a very good pineapple, and all things necessary. So they set out in the dead of winter, and had much foul weather, so as with great difficulty and danger they arrived safe in Virginia."

Mr. Tompson wrote back, that being a very melancholy man and of a crazy body, he found his health so much repaired, and his spirits so enlarged, that he had not been in the like condition since he came from England. But this was to strengthen him for a greater trial; for his wife, a godly young woman, and a comfortable help to him being left behind, with a company of small children, was taken away by death, and all his children scattered—but well disposed of among his godly friends. But their mission failed to accomplish much, as the civil officers of the county did not allow of their public preaching, because they did not conform to the ordinance of the Church of England—and the law-makers passed an order that all who did not conform to the discipline of the English Church, should depart the country by such a day; consequently, this mission was thus abruptly terminated. Not, however, without accomplishing some good, as several individuals, who had become impressed by their preaching, removed from Virginia to New England. Among whom, was a Mr. Gookins, who settled in Cambridge, and was Major General of the Massachusetts Colony, and author of the Historical Collection of the Indians of New England. Mr. Cotton Mather, in his quaint manner, gives the following descriptions of this unsuccessful mission:

"When Rev. Knowles and he, sailed hand in hand To Christ espousing the Virginia land, Upon a ledge of craggy rocks near staid, His Bible in his bosom thrusting staid, The Bible, the best cordial of his heart, Come floods come flames, cried he, we'll ne'er part, A constellation of great converts there, Shone around him, and his heavenly glory were, Gookins was one of these; by Tompson's pains, Christ and New England dear Gookins gains."

In 1645, war being anticipated with the Indians, Mr. Tompson was appointed to accompany the troops raised by the Colonies for their defence. The dangers that threatened the Colonies from this quarter were soon averted; therefore, there was no necessity for his absence from home. The second marriage of Mr. Tompson is supposed to have occurred in 1646 or 1647. He married for his second wife, Anne, the widow of Lyman Crosbie, of Cambridge, who survived him some ten years. A Synod was convened at Cambridge in 1648, of which Mr. Tompson was a member. The various individuals who composed the Convention assembled at the place and time specified, for the purpose of framing a new platform of Church Discipline for the Congregational Churches of the Colony. While Rev. Mr. Allen, of Dedham, was eloquently discoursing upon the fundamental doctrines to be embodied in these new regulations, the following singular, and to them wonderful phenomena happened:

"It fell out about the midst of his sermon, there came a snake into the seat, where many of the Elders sat, behind the preacher. It came in at the door where people stood thick upon the stairs. Divers of the Elders shifted from it but Mr. Tompson—one of the Elders of Braintree, a man of much faith—trode upon the head of it, and so held it with his foot and staff with a small pair of grains, until it was killed. This being so remarkable, and nothing falling out but by divine Providence, it is out of doubt, the Lord discovered somewhat of his mind in it. The serpent is the devil; the Synod the representative of the Churches of Christ in New England. The devil had formerly and lately attempted their disturbances and dissolution; but their faith in the seed of the woman overcame him, and crushed his head."

This incident, here so gravely related, together with the remarks made upon it by such a man as Mr. Winthrop, furnishes a singular illustration of the character of our Fathers.

His constitutional malady continued to increase upon him so much that several years before his death it destroyed his usefulness and happiness, and he was obliged to resign his labors as a preacher in 1659, about seven years before his death. He naturally being of a sensitive disposition, caused him to reflect so much upon what he considered the misfortunes of his life—such as being banished from England and also Virginia. His old friend, the historian, gives the following description of the effects of this disease upon Mr. Tompson:

"Satan, who has been, after an extraordinary manner, irritated by the evangelical labors of this holy man, obtained liberty to sift him; and hence, after this worthy man had served the Lord Jesus Christ in the Church of our New England Braintree, he fell into that baleful diabolical—a black melancholy—which for divers years, almost wholly disabled him for the exercise of his ministry."

He then goes on to remark, that, after the Devil has been duly resisted, he will flee from us, and that in the case of Mr. Tompson, he was resisted by the prayers of all the clergymen, so that, the end of that man was peace.

This ailment doubtless incapacitated him for the management of his temporal affairs, and caused him to become embarrassed, according to the Records of the Dorchester Church, the following public contribution was taken up for him.

"The 26th, 1st month, 1665, the day above said, at the motion of Mr. Mather, then was a contribution for Mr. Tompson at Braintree, unto which then was given in money £60s 9d, besides notes for corn and other things above 30s; and some more money was added afterwards to the value of 8s 3d."

Why Mr. Tompson became so extremely reduced in his circumstances is not easy to account for. Johnson says:

"This town of Braintree hath great store of land in tillage, and is at present in a very thriving condition for outward things, although some of Boston retain their farms from being of their town, yet do they lie within their bounds, and how it comes to pass I know not. Their officers have somewhat short allowance; they are well stored with cattle and corn, and as a people receive, so should they give. The Reverend Mr. Tompson is a man abounding in zeal for the propagation of the Gospel, and of an ardent affection, in so much that he is apt to forget himself in things that concern his own good."

And yet his salary was considerable for the times, about £55 yearly. Death at length came to deliver the pastor from his outward straits, and to relieve his mental disease. It is gratifying to be assured, that before his departure, the cloud, that settled upon him for years, lifted, and he enjoyed a brief season of peace. He died, December 10th, 1666, aged sixty-eight years, and the twenty-seventh of his pastorate. Cotton Mather embodies his character in a long piece of poetry, of which the following is an extract:

"With rare skill in hearts, this Doctor could Steal into them words, that should do them good, His balsams, from the Tree of Life distilled, Hearts cleanse'd and heal'd, and with rich comfort Bred."

But here's the own, Balsams, which others cur'd, Would in his own time, hardly be cur'd."

The unhappy differences between Mrs. Tompson and the officers of the Braintree Church, which had continued a long while, were finally, after his death settled by his widow petitioning the General Court, in 1668, who amicably arranged the amount of her claims.

It seems by the agreement between Mrs. Tompson and her children, which we have given below, that Mr. Tompson was not so poorly off as to worldly estate, as the author of that day makes it appear. At the present time, any one in possession of the same amount of property would be considered well to do in the world. Mr. Tompson's residence was upon Sea Street, where now stands the house occupied by Mr. Charles A. Cummings; his land included nearly the whole square. The meeting house in which he preached stood in the County road, which is now called Hancock street, or rather the road ran by it on each end, little north of where now stands the Trinitarian Congregational Church. This church was built of stone, without pews, as it was then the custom of our Fathers, excepting leave was granted to individuals to construct them at their own expense. No fire places, stoves or furnaces, were to be seen there to make them comfortable; nothing to warm them on a cold winter's Sabbath, but the fire of the Gospel, and their indomitable love of church worship; which at the present time would be considered rather poor fuel, and there would be more discoursing on returning from service upon cold feet and hands, than on the eloquence of the minister, or the great Christian and logical truths embraced in the sermon. But our ancestors seem to have been made of a more enduring material than their descendants, which enabled them to withstand the stern rigors of our severe New England winters.

* Rev. William Tompson's widow and children's agreement.

May 4, 1667. Agreement between Ann Tompson, widow of Mr. Wm. Tompson, of Braintree, on his estate, and Mr. Wm. Tompson's children, who died without will, upon the 10th of the 10th month, 1666.

ARTICLE 1st. That Mrs. Ann Tompson shall have all the moveable Estate to herself and assigns forever, and all debts and legacies due the Estate shall also pay, and any share of our Estate, And what she shall lay out for a comfortable subsistence during her life, our youngest sister Hannah Tompson shall have seventy [70] pounds paid out of the same, but if the Estate of Mr. Tompson's children, and an equal portion to the other children, excepting the heirs, Samuel Tompson, Joseph Tompson, Benjamin Tompson and William Very, children of Mr. Tompson, deceased, shall make their portion out of their own Estate. Also, that the House and Land, after our dear mother's decease, and improved during life, which, together with Orchard, pasture, so long as she liveth, and she may improve one lot, and then shall fall as an inheritance to Mr. Tompson's children—wit: To Samuel Tompson, Joseph Tompson, Benjamin Tompson, William Very, to be divided according to Law, allowing the heirs double portion to them and their heirs forever. And that Joseph Crosby, Mrs. Tompson's son, shall be security that, that part of the Estate which is to fall to the children, to wit: House, Orchard, Pasture, fencing, shall be in like condition now, it is excepting the causality by fire, to this last Article, the 2d, Joseph Crosby binds himself, his heirs, executors and assigns forever. Signed, 2d May, 1667.

Witness: Ann Tompson, Joseph Crosby, Joseph Arnold, Samuel Tompson, Joseph Belcher, Benjamin Tompson.

The Agreement between Mrs. Ann Tompson, Administratrix to the Estate of the late William Tompson to Samuel Tompson, the eldest son in behalf of the rest and Joseph Crosby, son of the late Simon Crosby and Ann his wife.

It is said that this house afterwards was owned by a Mr. Tompson, a descendant of the minister, who was by trade, a tailor. Of which the following anecdote has been related, and also, of a certain lady, then distinguished in the town for her hatred of all fashions, which she termed useless foppery and finery. The anecdote may seem to explain his being afterwards called "Petticoat Tompson."

One of those days wore rich broadcloth petticoats; often trimmed with still richer gold lace. This good lady came to Tompson, to have a petticoat made, trimmed with very rich gold lace. The garment was finished, but when the lady called for it, much to her chagrin, she found the wily tailor had sewed the fine gold embroidered figures upon the inside. How is this, Mr. Tompson? enquired the astonished lady. Oh, said the wiggish tailor; I knew your finery for the vanities of the world, which leadeth astray, and I dishevelled orders, save your ladyship from future remorse and mortification! But this ancient dame was not thus to be reasoned with—a secret vanity had taken possession of her soul, and she was determined it should be gratified, and the petticoat had to be altered according to previous instructions.

How to Keep an Umbrella.

Dr. Buckland, like many other less celebrated persons, suffered from the incapability of the human mind to understand the right property in connection with umbrellas. He could not bear to lose his umbrella, and he was not very good ones of their kind, still he preferred to keep them. He had three in one way or another, and he had inscribed, in conspicuous characters, the hands of a new one bought from "Stolen from Dr. Buckland," and never lost. It was fairly worn to shreds through long and faithful service, till it became so very shabby that he often would ed somebody would steal it; but the large label, "Stolen from Dr. Buckland," kept away everybody; nobody even offered to "borrow" it on the wettest of wet days, although it often invitingly stood by itself, in solitary glory, in the umbrella-stand in the hall.

A Time to Pay.

Reader, now is the time to pay your debt. Good resolutions are very good as far as they go, but, in the opinion of your creditors, don't pay either the butcher, the doctor, or merchant. We beg of you, therefore, to pay your attention to the following practical marks. They are not intended, we will privately, for either of your neighbors, specially for yourself.

The teaching of the Good Book is that there is a time and season for all things, "a time to plant and a time to pluck, a time to keep and a time to cast away, a time to weep and a time to laugh, a time to dance and a time to dance."

Now it is well known that during the few years there has been a good time for paying into debt, and the present moment, most people, at the North especially, who the crops have been good, is regarded as a first-rate time to "pay up." Those who don't pay now will be set down as "unpaid" gone by the board, "fizzled out," and mind how much you are reputed to be or how you stand on the assessor's books, you don't "go into liquidation" now, soon call on every creditor and settle your reputation won't be worth a brass farthing. Your time, therefore, has at length come. You can't postpone it on account of crops, neither can you complain of prices. No, sir, your mouth must now be closed these matters. Indeed, all your old, typid, whining excuses are now unavailing. They won't pass anywhere. And in regard to the long face you have worn during whole time you have been running into debt, we will say plainly that such a dodge goes down, now, at all. Please dispense with any such demonstration, therefore, or you will be called a lunatic, once, just for the novelty of it, and consequences follow, then "blossom" a capital asset that will be.

Now, lest we shall be misunderstood, we will "take aim and fire" directly in paying up, therefore, please—

Don't delay that Christian debt, such especially be ever prompt.

Pay your taxes—yes, pay, though the impression extends that procrastination in that quite so bad as theft or robbery.

Pay your store and grocery bills, pay up, and never again run up what you eat, drink, or wear for time in that "direction" want of brains, and if continuing should demand the services, see if you are not dead—

Pay your physician—faithfully, patiently watched by your dear departed, never delaying to give your anxious summing to this Christian duty.

Pay your debts to the which no verbal or written given. Public improvement, Your town or village, and you, and this you a science.

Pay up! a dent.

For the Patriot.
The New Year.

BY LINDA LINDAN.

Now another year has ended,
Passed—forever past away,
In Time's mighty ocean blended,
With the things of yesterday.

One year ago, with us how many Ushered in the new-born year,
Who, within its fleeting hours
Have sought a holier, happier sphere.

Little thought they that so early,
They must slumber with the dead;
But their freed and happy spirits
To eternity have fled.

Truly are God's ways mysterious,
Far surpassing human ken;
Wisely is the future hidden
From the view of mortal men.

Then let us strive through all afflictions,
Heaven's mandates to obey,
And perform with cheerful spirits,
Every duty, day by day.

Then each new year we may welcome,
And with gratitude and love,
Still pursue our onward journey
To a better world above.

Heavenly Father, be Thou with us
Through the year that's just begun;
Be our Guide and our Protector,
Till earth's toilsome march is done.

Louis, Illinois, Jan. 1861.

Pictures of Memory.

"Of all the beautiful pictures
That hang on Memory's wall,"
The one of the old home-parlor
I love the best of all.

Not for the dark old wainscot
Where the ancient portraits hang;
Not for the low deep window
Where the dark green ivy clung.

Not for the high carved arches
The mantel-piece beside—
Not for the low deep window
Not for the heart-stone wide:

Not for the tall old fashioned vase,
Nor the lounge where I used to rest,
Nor the old arm-chair nor sofa—
It seemeth to me the best.

But I once had an aged mother
With eyes that were blue and mild,
And in this old home-parlor
She, dying, blest her child.

Her silvery hair like a halo
Upon her forehead lay,
Betokening the white spring blossoms
Of an eternal day.

Gently her pale hands folded
As a glory lay her face—
I knew she was gently sinking
In the angel's soft embrace.

And when the arrows of sunset
Fell on the curtain's crimson fold,
She passed in her saint-like beauty
Through the gates of pearl and gold.

"Therefore, of all the pictures
That hang on Memory's wall,"
The one of the old home-parlor
I love the best of all.

Matrimony.

The following argument for matrimony was written in the olden time:

Like to a ring without a finger,
Or like a bell without a singer,
Or like a horse that's never ridden,
Or like a feast and no guest bidden,
Or like a rose and no one plucked it,—
Just such as those,
May she be said,
That time doth lose,
And dyes a maid.
The woeing if worse
The finger decketh,
The bell if rung
Good music maketh;
The horse doth ease
If he be ridden,
The feast doth please
If guests be bidden;
The water for thee,
The rose then pluckt
Is then most worthy:
So is the maiden
In love eyes
Who loves and marries
Ere she dyes.

Anecdotes.

A carpenter had been for some time repairing a dwelling, whose mistress is a reputed trollop. Listening to her, as she vented her wrath on her good natured old man, Shavings turned to her and seriously said:

"If I had such a wife as that, I'd point her funeral to-morrow, at two o'clock, and by J-o-o-k-s the corpse would be ready!"

Pat you fool, why do you steal after that rabbit in that manner, when your gun has no lock on it?

Hoosh! ye spalpeen—be jabbers, the rabbit don't know that!

Stop that abominable noise, said a commanding officer to a horrid trumpeter in the midst of a battle; we can stand fire, but we can't stand that air!

You would be very pretty, indeed, said a gentleman patronizing to a young lady, if your eyes were only a little larger.

My eyes may be very small, sir, but such people as you don't fill them.

private the most expressive words of other languages, and after a while to incorporate them into our own; thus the word Cephalic, which is from the Greek, signifying "for the head," is now becoming popularized in connection with Mr. Spalding's great Headache remedy, but it will soon be used in a more general way and the word Cephalic will become as common as Electrotone and many others whose distinction as foreign words has been worn away by common usage, until they seem "native and to the manor born."

'ardly Realized.

Hi 'ad 'n 'ardly 'eadache this hafternoon, hand I stepped into the apothecaries hand says hi to the man, "Can you hearse me an 'eadache?" "Does it hache 'ard," says 'e. "Hexcendingly," says hi, hand upon that 'e gave me a Cephalic Pill, hand 'pon me 'onor it cured me so quick that I 'ardly realized I 'ad an 'eadache

HEADACHE is the favorite sign by which nature makes known any deviation whatever from the natural state of the brain, and viewed in this light it may be looked on as a safeguard intended to give notice of disease which might otherwise escape attention, and which should be remedied, and its indications should never be neglected. Headaches may be classified under two names, viz: Symptomatic and Idiopathic. Symptomatic Headache is exceedingly common and is the precursor of a great variety of diseases, among which are Apoplexy, Gout, Rheumatism and all febrile diseases. In its nervous form it is a sympathetic disease of the stomach, constituting SICK HEADACHE, of hepatic disease constituting BILIOUS HEADACHE, of worms, constipation and other disorders of the bowels, as well as renal and uterine affections. Diseases of the heart are very frequently attended with headaches; Anemia and plethora are also affections which frequently occasion headache. Idiopathic Headache is also very common, being usually distinguished by the name of SERRAS HEADACHE, sometimes coming on suddenly in a state of apparently sound health, and prostrating at once the mental and physical energies, and in other instances it comes on slowly, heralded by depression of spirits or acerbity of temper. In most instances the pain is in the front of the head, over one or both eyes, and sometimes provoking vomiting; under this class may also be named NEURALGIA.

For the treatment of either class of Headache the Cephalic Pills have been found a sure and safe remedy, relieving the most acute pains in a few minutes, and by its subtle power eradicating the diseases of which Headache is the unerring index.

BRIDGET.—Missus wants you to send her a box of Cephalic Pills, no, a bottle of Prepared Pills,—but I'm thinking that's not just it nather; but perhaps ye'll be after knowing what it is. Ye see she's nigh dead and gone with the Sick Headache, and wants some of that same as related her before.

DRUGGIST.—You must mean Spalding's Cephalic Pills.

BRIDGET.—Och! sure now and you've sed it, here's the quarther and give me the Pills and they'll be all day about it aither.

GREAT DISCOVERY. Among the most important of all the great medical discoveries of this age may be considered the system of vaccination for protection from Small Pox, the Cephalic Pill for relief of Headache, and the use of Quinine for the prevention of Fevers, either of which is a sure specific, whose benefits will be experienced by suffering humanity long after their discoverers are forgotten.

Cephalic Pills

CURE SICK HEADACHE
CURE NERVOUS HEADACHE
CURE ALL KINDS OF HEADACHE.

By the use of these Pills the periodic attacks of Nervous or Sick Headache may be prevented; and if taken at the commencement of an attack, immediate relief from pain and sickness will be obtained.

They seldom fail in removing the Nausea and Headache to which females are so subject.

They act gently upon the bowels,—removing costiveness.

For Literary Men, Students, Delicate Females and all persons of sedentary habits, they are valuable as a Laxative, immediately improving the appetite, giving tone and vigor to the digestive organs, and restoring the natural elasticity and strength of the whole system.

The CEPHALIC PILLS are the result of long investigation and carefully conducted experiments, having been in use many years, during which time they have prevented and relieved a vast amount of pain and suffering from headache, either originating in the nervous system or from a deranged state of the stomach.

They are entirely vegetable in their composition, and may be taken at all times with perfect safety without making any change of diet, and the absence of any disagreeable taste renders it easy to administer them to children.

BININGER'S OLD KENTUCKY BOURBON
"1849 RESERVE"

THE Established popularity of this Choice OLD BOURBON as a medicinal agent, renders it superfluous to mention in detail the characteristics which distinguish it from the ordinary grade of Kentucky Whiskeys.

Being distilled in 1849, and manufactured expressly for us with great care, it can be relied upon as a strictly pure stimulant, and peculiarly effective for the treatment of Lung Complaints, Dyspepsia, Derangements of the Stomach, Nervousness, &c.

As a curative agent it has a tendency to recreate and strengthen; while age having contributed its genial charm and enriched it with a delicious flavor and an oily body, it affords a pleasant incentive to the preservation or recovery of health, through the agreeable medium of a well pleased palate.

Put up in a variety of attractive forms, in iron bound cases of one or two dozen bottles each, and sold by all prominent druggists, grocers and town agents.

DR. M'LANE'S
CELEBRATED
FOR THE CURE OF
Hepatitis or Liver Complaint,
DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increase on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

Address all orders to

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? Take Ayer's Pills, and you will be cured. These pills are often the prelude to serious illness. Some fit of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humor—purify the blood, and let the fluids circulate again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. These, if not relieved, result upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and death. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangement, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many purgative effect, expels them. Caused by deranged functions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are equally, and more so, caused by the same causes. Some who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons, are published in the following form:

From a Flourishing Merchant of St. Louis, Mo., 1856.
Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the purgative of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of a severe case of cholera, and have saved her from a long and painful illness. My mother has been long and grievously afflicted with biliousness and flatulency, and has been cured by your Pills. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and nervous? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings oppressed? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some of the most common ailments, such as constipation, indigestion, and headache, are cured by the use of Ayer's Pills. These pills are made of pure and healthy ingredients, and are adapted to the natural action of the system, and will in the most delicate and healthy manner, remove all the impurities from the system, and restore the system to its natural state of health and vigor.

It is the duty of every citizen of each place to contribute something towards improving and strengthening the local press. He may do it by subscribing and paying for his paper, by advertising in it, by recommending it to others, or in all of these ways. Were the country press as liberally patronized and as well supported as it should be, the country would not be so flooded with the worthless trash, in the shape of "love-and-murder stories," as it now is, which poison and vitiate the minds of the young. There is usually more integrity and circumspection manifested by editors of the country press than by those in large cities, and a more healthy tone of mind and morals will generally be found to pervade them. They are more free from the reports of degraded vices and crimes, and are never opened with that feeling of suspicion which attaches to the common "flash" literature of the day.

The country press may be improved. Each individual residing within the limits of its sphere and circulation may aid in its improvement. He may be on the "look-out" for interesting information, and when this is obtained, communicate it to the editor. He may bring his own business before the public by an appropriate advertisement, or, if he has beef, pork, or grain to sell, he may announce it through his local press. He may give historical sketches of the past, and show the progress and changes going on at present. He may help to make his local paper a source of interest to strangers, and of entertainment to his neighbors. Is he a manufacturer? Let him invite capital and influence by setting forth such natural advantages as the place may possess, and indicate the routes by which it may be reached, its accessibility to markets, etc. There is no estimating the advantages to any town or village of a live local journal, and we doubt if there is to be found at the present time an editor who gets fully paid for the services he performs, and the responsibility where it belongs—namely, on the people, whose business and duty it is, first of all, to support handsomely their own local paper.—Life Illustrated.

I have been afflicted with this complaint for many years, and have tried every remedy, but have never found one so effective as your Pills. They have cured me of this complaint, and I feel that your Pills are the best medicine I have ever used.

Miscellaneous.

Fanny Clifton's Elopement.

Fannie, said Judge Clifton to his daughter, one morning, laying down the paper, over the top of which he had been for some time regarding her, come hither my child.
Fannie very dutifully did as she was bidden. As she stood by his side, the Judge took both of her small hands in one of his, and, smoothing caressingly with the other her soft, shining hair, looked tenderly into her face.

You are a woman now, Fannie, he said. Eighteen last Christmas, papa, returned Fannie, demurely, trying to assume the dignity and gravity which belong to that mature age; though, to tell the truth, they looked strangely out of keeping with her slight form and her girlish face; and, in spite of all her efforts, the rosy mouth would dimple with smiles, and her eyes would arch, saucy expression that was natural to them.

Can it be possible! exclaimed the old gentleman, hearing a deep sigh. How time does go, to be sure! You are year older than your mother was, when I married her. Well, well, he resumed, after a pause, taking off his spectacles, wiping them carefully, and re-adjusting them upon his nose, I suppose I must come to it, some time, and it may as well be first as last. All fathers have to lose their daughters, and I suppose I shall have to make up my mind to lose you.

Loss, ex-papa! exclaimed Fannie, opening her eyes in astonishment. Why, what do you mean? I hope I am not going to die yet awhile.

You know well enough what I mean, you jade. I mean that like all the rest of the silly young girls, who never know when they are well off, you will be getting married.

For shame, papa, said Fannie, blushing and laughing. I shall do no such thing. Of course not, returned the Judge, dryly. Never had such an idea during the whole course of your life, I dare say. Couldn't be persuaded to do any thing so highly improper.

But what put that idea in your head this morning? persisted Fannie, whose curiosity was aroused.

The visit of a certain young gentleman who has requested permission to pay his addresses to you.

That homely and disagreeable Major Sinclair, I suppose, said Fannie, scornfully. No, my dear, it was not. It was that handsome and very agreeable Mr. Charles Ray. What do you think of that?

To her father's surprise, Fannie's countenance fell; her rose-bud lips showed a very perceptible pout, and a frown actually gathered on her smooth forehead.

Think! she repeated, with a disdainful toss of the head, I think he came on a fool's errand—that is what I think.

Hoity, toity! exclaimed the old gentleman, with a puzzled air, what has come over you now? It seems that you have changed your opinion very suddenly.

As Mr. Ray never took the trouble to ask my opinion, it can matter very little to him if I have, retorted Fannie.

Oh, there is where the shoe pinches, is it? said Judge Clifton, laughing. Well, never mind, my dear; he is coming here, some time to-day, to talk with you about it. I have given him my full permission.

Without which, he would have staid away, I suppose, said Fannie, in an undertone.

What is that, my dear? enquired the Judge; who was a little deaf.

I said that it will not be convenient for me to see Mr. Ray, said Fannie, in a louder voice. He may come if he chooses, but I cannot be at home.

Fannie, said Judge Clifton, sternly, what is the meaning of this folly? Of course you will receive him. Mr. Ray is a worthy and honorable man, and I shall insist that he be treated civilly.

I suppose the next thing you will be insisting on my having him for a husband, she returned, her eyes filling with this unwonted hardness in her indulgent father.

My dear child, said the Judge, kindly, touched by the evident grief of his daughter; though unable to understand the cause, I shall insist on no such thing. I really supposed you had a partiality for the young man, and I was glad of it, for I entertain a very high opinion of him. But if it is not so, well, say no more about it. Only remember that I desire you to see him this evening, and tell him so yourself.

But it so happened that business of a very pressing nature called Fannie over to her sister's that evening, much to her lover's disappointment, and her father's chagrin, who was quite mystified at his daughter's conduct.

Only think, Mary, said Fannie, as she drew a chair up to the table where her sister was sewing, that Charles Ray has asked papa's permission to visit me.

Well, it is just what I expected, replied Mary, quietly.

What! without a word to me about it? I suppose he was pretty well informed of your sentiments in regard to him, said her sister smiling.

Well, he will find himself mistaken if he thinks he is going to marry me, said the little lady, with dignity. I have no idea of being bargained for like a piece of merchandise.

Why, Fannie! I really thought that you liked Charles. I am sure it was very proper and honorable in him to ask papa's permission before speaking to you.

Very proper, I dare say, said Fannie, scornfully. But I can't abide these proper people that always do every thing by rule. I suppose if papa had refused, he would have walked away as meek as a whipped spaniel, and never come near me.

How ridiculous, Fannie. Papa thinks a great deal of Mr. Ray. I heard him say, only the other day, that he would rather have him for a son-in-law than any one he knew.

He thinks a great deal more of him than I do, then, was Fannie's scornful rejoinder. I have no idea of having a husband picked out for me. I can make my own selection. And I would rather never marry than to have for my husband, such a tame, spiritless man, as Charles Ray.

Fannie was as good as her word. She took every opportunity of avoiding her suitor, for whom she had hitherto exhibited a preference which would, no doubt, in time, have ripened into a warmer feeling; never giving him a chance of seeing or speaking with her alone.

This obvious change in her deportment quite disheartened poor Charles, who was sincerely attached to her, and was a source of much annoyance to her father, who had set his heart on the match.

My child, said the Judge to Fannie, one morning, a few days after, I quite agree with you in your opinion of Mr. Ray. He is an insufferable puppy.

Who? Charles Ray? said Fannie, in astonishment.

you like, but always taking a fresh hair from the mane, as the one that has been once used will have no further effect." This phenomenon is ascribed to mesmerism, or, perhaps, may depend on the physiology of the hair, based on the microscopic anatomy of the same.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

Snug Harbor Fair.

There has rarely been known a more remarkable charitable enterprise than the fair at the Music Hall in Boston, in behalf of the asylum for poor old sailors at Germantown. At a time of unprecedented panic in politics and pressure in finance, an enormous sum of money has been realized from a sale of articles, largely made and contributed by the ladies alone of a few towns. And it should be a source of honest pride and congratulation to the people of Quincy that the table which represented the energy, skill and liberality of our town should have challenged comparison with any in the hall, and succeeded in a measure far exceeding the comparative wealth and population of the town of which it was the exponent. The warmest thanks are due to the generous women who gave so lavishly of their time, their labor, their means and their energy to the old sailor. We learn that our ladies realized thirteen hundred and twenty-five dollars, which, together with the one hundred and fifty which the sailors earned themselves by their own table, makes a very snug little sum to the credit of Quincy, and places the good old name fourth in the list of noble donors. Let it not be forgotten that this is due solely to the untiring industry, hearty liberality and comprehensive charity of the matrons and maids of Quincy.

GENERAL COURT. The Representative from this town, Charles Marsh, Esq., has been placed on the important committee on Banking institutions.

A petition has been presented from William S. Morton and others, for a Horse Railroad from this town to connect in Dorchester.

Jeffrey R. Brackett, and 157 others, legal voters of Quincy, have petitioned in aid of the petition of Francis Williams, who contests the seat of Charles Marsh, the sitting member from this town.

E. S. Beals and 84 others, of Weymouth, have petitioned for further legislation in relation to laying out Hingham and Quincy Turnpike as a public highway;—Geo. Venzie, 2d, and 47 others of this town, in aid of the petition of E. S. Beals and others.

Our distinguished friend, John D. Bradley, Esq. of Milton, the efficient Deputy Sheriff, in that town, wants "more light," and has with others, petitioned for incorporation as the Milton Gas Light Company. Recorded!

DISOBEDIENCE OF ORDERS. The Braintree Light Infantry appeared in review, on the 18th of October last, in a uniform different from that which the superior officer had specified, for which disobedience of orders Capt. Bumpus was placed under arrest.

By a special order, the Commander-in-Chief has given consideration to the mitigating circumstances in this case, and is disposed to regard them with leniency, especially as Capt. Bumpus, and his command have hitherto sustained a high position in the active militia of the Commonwealth.

The Commander-in-Chief would also impress upon Officers implicit obedience to superiors, knowing it to be the first duty of a soldier, yet he forgives this offence, and trusts that it will not recur again. Therefore, after full consideration, he directs that Capt. Bumpus be discharged from arrest.

SLEIGHING. We are enjoying that pleasant and exciting amusement to our heart's content. The snow which fell on Thursday and Friday last, came very level, and sufficiently moist to tread well, laying the foundation, it would seem, if such weather as we are having, continues, for weeks of excellent sleighing. There is but one sentiment with our people, on this subject, to make the most of the Union while it lasts.

BOOTS AND SHOES. During these hard times it is the interest of most of us to call on those that keep good articles at low prices; and we are happy to say that David B. Stetson is one of the dealers that sells boots and shoes at very reasonable prices. He can be found at his old residence, over C. Harris' store, Washington street.

A CUTS BOY. In one of our suburban schools, notorious for his pranks and the consequent chastisements which his teacher rewards him for them, has supplied himself with a box of Redding's Russia Salve, the best remedy in the world for all kinds of cuts, wounds, bruises, etc. Sold everywhere for 25 cents a box.

Boston Correspondence.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JAN. 9, 1861.

The attitude of affairs at the South, is the absorbing topic in all circles here. An intense interest is kept up to hear the news. Newspaper publishers are driving a brisk business, and many of them are making money. To the moment of my writing, no intelligence had been received of the arrival at Charleston of the steamer Star of the West, with reinforcements for Major Anderson, at Fort Sumter. Expectation is on a tip-toe, to learn what reception she will meet with by the rebels. The whole matter is in a nutshell. If she lands the troops unopposed, the war with the "Republic of South Carolina" is at an end, without bloodshed. The people of Charleston have threatened with great wrath to prevent their reaching terra firma. It is expected that the steamer will be sunk if the traitors have force enough to accomplish it; but there will be doubtless a hard fight, not only from the military aboard the steamer, but from the garrison under Major Anderson. Such is the climax of matters at the present moment. If collision and bloodshed occur at Charleston, the civil war will commence in good earnest, and the whole South go out of the Union. But we hope for better things. The General Government is now taking the right stand to preserve the Union. A Message was sent to the House, this morning, by President Buchanan, calling the attention of Congress to the dangers to which the Union was exposed, and recommending measures for relief to tranquility and save the country from the perils in which it is heedlessly and unfortunately placed. He says that matters, instead of improving, are worse, and his hope that tranquility would be restored has diminished. Alluding to South Carolina, he says, he has no other alternative but to collect the revenue and protect the public property. His duty is to execute the laws and the right to use the military and naval force in their execution is indisputably set forth by the law. This will bring our National troubles fair and square before Congress, and decisive measures will at once be adopted to put down insurrection from any quarter, and to "conquer" a more perfect union among the States by a grand appeal to arms. The crisis has arrived: all concessions are unavailable; argument is wasted to the idle wind, and the time has arrived for prompt action. Disunionists are traitors to their country. Any violation of the United States laws, should be punished, and the rebels hanged.

By the way, a long article, of nearly three columns, appeared in the Daily Atlas and Bee of this morning, headed "Charles Francis Adams' propositions," said to be from the pen of a legal gentleman, well known in Norfolk County. It is an attack upon the course of Mr. Adams in the submission of his views for conciliation as one of the Committee of Thirty-Three. The writer infers that Mr. Adams has stepped down from the principles of the Chicago Platform in yielding too much to the South, on proposed measures for the settlement of the slavery question. In other words, that he has dared to sink party lines, by a partial conflict with the Chicago Resolutions, that the Union might be saved from dismemberment. We have full confidence to believe that while Mr. Adams is willing to identify himself with the Republican party, his paramount love as a public man is for his country, superior to any partisan predilections. Like his father, in great emergencies, he will rise above all party distinctions, and go for his country, regardless of all consequences of offense from narrow politicians. It requires no prophet to say, that as a union, conservative man, he will always be sustained by a majority of his constituents, when a candidate for Congress in the Norfolk District.

The aspect of things at Washington and the South, show clearly that without some compromise, concocted by the present Congress, and adopted by the people of the several States, the Union is shattered to pieces. The basis of any conciliation should be obedience to the Constitution and laws, and an abandonment forever of the dogma of secession. As Mr. Adams proposes, the South should take the initiative in the matter of compromise. The offence of Mr. Adams to certain members of his party, appears, if we rightly understood the matter to be:

First: He proposed in Committee, that all future propositions for amendments of the Federal Constitution, should emanate from the slave holding States, to be ratified by all the States before adoption. Where is the injustice to any man or to the cause of freedom in this proposition?

Second: That New Mexico may come in as a State hereafter, with or without slavery, as she pleases.

This is in conformity with the antecedents of admission of all the twenty new States into the Confederacy. Congress requiring only a Republican form of State government for their admission, leaving the matter of domestic slavery untouched. The second proposition is therefore founded on correct theory always practised by Congress, and is a sacrifice of no just party principles. Every patriot of our country will sustain Mr. Adams in every honorable effort to preserve the union of the States. The difference between certain intense politicians of the Republican party in our Congressional District, No. 3, (and you have a large sprinkling of them) and Mr. Adams, appears to be this—while they go for the inviolability of the Chicago Platform even if disunion follow—the highest earthly loyalty of Mr. Adams is to his country; party considerations are secondary with him. x.

For the Patriot. Obituary.

Departed this life, after a short illness, from typhoid fever, on the 10th of November last, at Benecia, California, Joseph W. Sanborn, Jr., aged twenty-two years.

The deceased left Quincy in July, 1859, to join his honored father, and a younger brother, residents of Benecia. He went thither full of buoyant hope, with an ardent wish to lay the foundation of a life of usefulness in that distant land. We painfully recall to mind the day that he bid an adieu to his mother, sister and friends, now in our midst.

It was a beautiful morning, on the birthday of our National Independence. His countenance, the picture of good health, was cheerful and happy; and as he was about to pass from the home of his childhood on which the bright sunshine of his early days had been undimmed by care; he expressed a hope that during the present year, he should return on a visit to "sweet home."

As a member for many years of the North District School, of Quincy, he took the first rank for scholarship and discipline among its pupils. He was endeared to the teachers; his school-mates loved him, and not without reason; for he was kind and affectionate to all. He was classed among the good and diligent scholars in the rural District School of North Quincy.

His disposition was manly and noble, and his generous heart was ever alive to a high sense of honor and integrity in his daily intercourse with his beloved school-mates.

How many there of his youthful companions that now, when his early departure from earth is known to them, bring home in mind to their young hearts his many virtues, and in tears, sorrow that they shall never see his face more. His last school days were spent at Middleboro', (Mass.) under that excellent man, Professor Jenks, of Middleboro' Academy. On a visit there, we remember calling upon him. He was deeply engaged in Mathematical studies and in acquiring a knowledge of surveying. He expected to make California his home, and was fitting himself as a teacher of youth and surveyor, in that golden land. He reached Benecia, and soon became an instructor of one of its schools. His prospects were bright, and his youthful heart was full of hope for the future. He prospered—for his abilities as a teacher were good, and his fidelity to his pupils unwavering. But the angel of sorrow and death was near him. During the past summer, his only and younger brother, was stricken down by disease, and the subject of this article, left his school, and with a brother's love, watched for many weeks over his dying pillow. The young brother was removed from this earthly tabernacle, on the ninth of September last. Two months after, Joseph followed him from the same disease to the unseen world; and they sleep side by side, until the last trumpet shall sound to awake the countless numbers of the dead to resurrection and to life.

So THEY GO IT. Sleights are busily plying to and fro, and the people rushing hither and thither. Some go here, some there, but the most appear to call at the extensive Dry Goods and Furniture establishment, opposite our office. Undoubtedly good bargains are daily received at C. Packard's elegant and well-managed store, as the proprietor understands the art of buying and selling cheap.

A PATROL IN MARYLAND. The Baltimore Patriot, through a private source, has received intelligence that men are patrolling Hartford County, from Havre de Grace, (thirty miles this side of Baltimore) every hour in the day and night, to the Pennsylvania line. Each man has a distance of one mile to walk back and forward. It is reported that they are paid by the Governor. This timely precaution, it is said, is taken, to watch the movements of the disturbers of the peace.

ERRATA. In the article under the head of "Reminiscences of the First Church in Quincy," which appeared in our paper of Dec. 29—for "Newton," read Newtown.

THE SAVINGS BANKS IN MASSACHUSETTS. By the annual report of the Bank Commissioners, it appears that there was deposited in the Saving Institutions of this Commonwealth, on the last Saturday in October, 1860, forty-five millions, fifty-four thousand, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Pretty good for the "mudsills" of Northern society.

BUSINESS IN ABINGTON. We learn from a traveller, that the business prospects in Abington look auspicious, a new grocery store having been opened to meet the wants of additional trade, but the old stand of H. A. Ransom, is prepared for any emergency, and will sell from his large stock of well-selected goods, either for cash or approved credit, as low as can be bought in that town or in Boston.

THE EIGHTH OF JANUARY. Gov. Andrew of this State, caused a salute of one hundred guns to be fired in Boston, and a national salute in fifteen other cities and towns in this Commonwealth, in "commemoration of the defence of New Orleans, Jan. 8, 1815, by the brave deceased patriot, Gen. Andrew Jackson, and in honor of the gallant conduct and wise foresight of Major Robert Anderson, now in command of Fort Sumter, in the State of South Carolina." We believe this notice to be the first observance of the day by State authority. The memory of the "old hero" still lives in the hearts of his countrymen.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

All the Electoral votes have been sent to Washington City, those of Illinois being last received, and completing the returns. According to law the vote is to be counted by the Vice President in the presence of both Houses of Congress on a day appointed in February.

The total population of the United States, as indicated by full returns of the census received at Washington City is 31,000,000, an increase since the census of 1850, of upwards of 7,900,000 persons.

Lieut. Gen. Winfield Scott is the largest man in the American service. He is six feet six inches tall, and weighs two hundred and sixty pounds. He is seventy-four years old, yet his health is good, and his whole system is apparently vigorous—much of which is owing doubtless to his very temperate habits.

The Newburyport (Mass.) School Committee have passed resolutions expressing their disapprobation of the custom of the various schools of making presents to their respective teachers, as one tending to the disadvantage or chagrin of many of the scholars.

Hon. Samuel May has resigned the Governorship of Kansas, making the tenth incumbent of that place who, by one means and another, have ended their career.

The number of voters registered in New York City, previous to the late election, was 116,891, almost as many as the number cast in this State. In Boston the number of registered voters was upwards of 26,000.

There are, according to the census of 1860, in South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas—the States which are threatening secession—only 148,400 slaveholders all told.

Poetry.

The Game of Life.

With eager hand Hope softly weaves
The mantles that our pride would don,
While busy finger'd Care unguages
The garments as we put them on.
We rear our palace of joy,
And tread them with exulting shout,
Till, crumbling round, 'tis plainly found
Some corner-stones have been left out.
And thus we play the game of Life,
Shadow and substance ever blending;
Mid flowers of Peace and tears of Strife
Gaily beginning—sadly ending.

The maiden greets her swain to-day,
They joy to-morrow and she flouts him;
Now she believes what'er he'll say,
A month has gone—alas! she doubts him;
The lover hangs upon a glance,
With glowing trust and earnest suing;
Next year he rouses from his trance,
And scorns the one he late was wooing.
And thus we play the game of Life,
Our dreams dispell'd, our plans defeated,
And when we've lost with pain and cost,
Still stand, as ready to be cheated.

The cooing infant's rosy mouth
Aply receives the sweeten'd potion;
When waves are calm, and winds are south,
None see the death-rocks in the ocean.
The rich man toils to "gather up,"
Meaning to hoard in Fortune's clover,
And while he pours into his cup,
Perceives not it is running over.
And thus we play the game of Life,
Now simply snared, now wisely brooding,
Now bribed by smiles, now spreading wiles,
Living deluded and deluding.

The Poet prattles to the stars,
Philosophers dissect the thunder,
Both are stopped by crystal bars,
And stand outside to watch and wonder.
We moralize on battle plains,
Where blood has poured, and fame was won,
We turn and see the baby's gleam
Over his mimic sword and gun.
And thus we play the game of Life,
'Tis but a play of thought and deed,
Some only stay at work and pray,
And some but live for Crime and Creed.

Our feet of clay trip up each other,
Our wings of ether seek the sky;
We breathe—we are—child-follows mother,
Yet none can tell us How? or Why?
Our hearts, like clocks, keep ticking fast,
We clink and jangle, we fall and weep,
Till tired of guessing, at the last,
We solve the riddle in a sleep.
And thus we play the game of Life,
In motley garbs of Grief and Pleasure,
Till we are drest in that green vest,
For which the sexton takes our measure.

A Talk for the Girls.

Did you ever see a lassie
Flirt into an old man's chair,
And, unheeding age or honor,
Let him stand—no matter where?

Never see the stage coach emptied
For some fidget in her pride,
And the weary man of business
Tumbled out to ride out side?

Never go to hear a lecture
When some fashionable dear,
Would come in and make bustle
When you most desired to hear.

Rotting half the congregation,
And disturbing all the rest,
As if she were all creation,
Being fashionably dressed?

Now, dear girls, if you're so thankful,
So exacting, and so free,
Time will come when gentle, will answer
"Ma'am, this seat belongs to me."

Never, girls, disturb a lecture,
Church, or hall; where'er you go
Still respect the rights of others—
This is woman's "rights," you know.

Never ask a man abruptly
To resign his chosen place;
If 'tis offered thank him kindly,
With a smile upon your face.

If the way is long and weary,
And he cannot help another,
Bid him share the comfort with you,
As you share it with a brother.

Thus may you receive forever,
Given with a spirit free,
True respect, and love, and kindness,
Better far than gallantry.

Sorrow and Sunshine.

Shadow's never far from sunshine,
Night is never far from day,
Pain trends in the steps of pleasure,
Never is the whole year May.

Sunshine's never far from shadow,
Day is never far from night,
Pain is followed still by pleasure,
Snow makes not the whole year white.

Mog's perpetual sighing tires me,
Meg's eternal smile as bad;
Give me Moll, who's always changing,
Not long merry, not long sad.

Anecdotes.

An Irishman who had lain sick a long time, was one day met by the parish priest, when the following conversation took place—
Well, Patrick, I am glad you have recovered—but were you not afraid to meet your God?

Och! no, your reverence, it was the meetin'
of t'other chap I was afeard uv, replied Pat.

A country parson was addicted to using the phrase, "I flatter myself," instead of "I believe."
Having occasion to exhort his congregation during a revival, he "flattered himself" that more than one-half of them would be damed.

A boy entered a stationery store the other day, and asked the proprietor what kind of pens he sold.
All kinds, was the reply.
Well, then, said the boy, I'll take three cents worth of pig pens.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE AMALGAMATION OF LANGUAGES. There is a growing tendency in this age to appropriate the most expressive words of other languages, and after a while to incorporate them into our own; thus the word Cephalic, which is from the Greek, signifying "for the head," is now becoming popularized in connection with Mr. Spalding's great Headache remedy, but it will soon be used in a more general way and the word Cephalic will become as common as Electrotone and many others whose distinction as foreign words has been worn away by common usage, until they seem "native and to the manner born."

Hardly Realized.

Hi 'ad 'n 'orrible 'eadache this hafternoon, hand I stepped into the haphoceries hand says hi to the man, "Can you hease me of an 'eadache?" "Does it hache 'ard," says the "Hexedgedly," says hi, hand upon that 'e gave me a Cephalic Pill, hand pon me 'enor it cured me so quick that I 'ardly realized I 'ad an 'eadache

HEADACHE is the favorite sign by which nature makes known any deviation whatever from the natural state of the brain, and a safeguard intended to give notice of disease which might otherwise escape attention, till too late to be remedied; and its indications should never be neglected. Headaches may be classified under two names, viz: Symptomatic and Idiopathic. Symptomatic Headache is exceedingly common and is the precursor of a great variety of diseases, among which are Apoplexy, Gout, Rheumatism and all febrile diseases. In its nervous form it is symptomatic of disease of the stomach constituting SICK HEADACHE, of hepatic disease constituting BILIOUS HEADACHE, of worms, constipation and other disorders of the bowels, as well as renal and uterine affections. Diseases of the heart are very frequently attended with headaches; Anemia and plethora are also affections which frequently occasion headache. Idiopathic Headache is also very common, being usually distinguished by the name of NERVOUS HEADACHE, sometimes coming on suddenly in a state of apparently sound health, and prostrating at once the mental and physical energies, and in other instances it comes on slowly, heralded by depression of spirits or nervousness of temper. In most instances the pain is in the front of the head, over one or both eyes, and sometimes provoking vomiting; under this class may also be named NEURALGIA.

For the treatment of either class of Headache the Cephalic Pills have been found a sure and speedy remedy, relieving the most acute pains in a few minutes, and by its subtle power eradicating the diseases of which Headache is the unerring index.

BRIDGET—Missus wants you to send her a box of Cephalic Pills, no, a bottle of Prepared Pills,—but I'm thinking that's not just it neither, but perhaps ye'll be ather knowing what it is. Ye see she's high dead and gone with the Sick Headache, and wants some of that same as relieved her before.

DAVID—You must mean Spalding's Cephalic Pills.

BRIDGET—Och! sure now and you've sed it, here's the quarter and give me the Pills and don't be all day about it aither.

GREAT DISCOVERY. Among the most important of all the great medical discoveries of this age may be considered the system of vaccination for protection from Small Pox, and the use of Quinine for the prevention of Fevers, either of which is a sure specific, whose benefits will be experienced by suffering humanity long after their discoverers are forgotten.

CURE
All kinds of Headache

By the use of these Pills the periodic attacks of Nervous or Sick Headache may be prevented; and if taken at the commencement of an attack, immediate relief from pain and sickness will be obtained.

They seldom fail in removing the Nausea and Headache to which females are so subject.

They act gently upon the bowels,—removing costiveness.

For Literary Men, Students, Delicate Females and all persons of sedentary habits, they are valuable as a laxative, immediately improving the appetite, giving tone and vigor to the digestive organs, and restoring the natural elasticity and strength of the whole system.

The CEPHALIC PILLS are the result of long investigation and carefully conducted experiments, having been in use many years, during which time they have prevented and relieved a vast amount of pain and suffering from headache, whether originating in the nervous system or from a deranged state of the stomach.

They are entirely vegetable in their composition, and may be taken at all times with perfect safety without making any change of diet, and the absence of any disagreeable taste renders it easy to administer them to children.

Cognac Brandy

The infamous practice of adulterating Bran-dies having become so common that a genuine article is the exception; it is of vital importance to those requiring it for Family use and Invalids, that it should be of undoubted purity and efficacy.

With a view to meeting the popular demand for a reliable Brandy in its natural state, free from alcoholic flavor and impurities, and fully appreciating the fact that it is often recommended by the Medical Faculty, as a sustaining stimulant, when all other remedies fail, we are now bottling and selling at reasonable rates, a Brandy of our own importation, from one of the most responsible houses in France, and known as

"Bininger's Genuine Cognac Brandy."

It is mild, delicate and fruity, and is designed to be always uniform in quality and in cases containing two dozen pints and one dozen quarts, and is sold by all prominent druggists, grocers and town agents.

The above is also for sale in original packages, viz: Eighties and Quarter Cases.

PACKARD'S Great Regenerator for the HUMAN HAIR.

IS now too well known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet to satisfy the most credulous, I will publish the following testimony.

Harrison Sq., Dorchester, Mar. 30, 1859.

MR. PACKARD—Sir:—I have given your Regenerator a fair trial and find it all you claim for it. My hair was very gray; it is now restored to perfect color. All the humor is removed from the scalp. In short, I have now a perfect head of hair. I am willing to go before any Justice of the Peace and make oath to the above, if you wish it.

E. HIRD.

What it has done for him it will do for everybody that will use it.

mittal verdict, "Died from causes unknown," if not more impudently stating, "Died by the visitation of God."

Let any reader who follows an inactive life for the most part, try the experiment for a week, of eating absolutely nothing after a two o'clock dinner, and see if a sounder sleep and a more vigorous appetite for breakfast and a hearty dinner, are not the pleasurable results, to say nothing of the happy deliverance from that disagreeable fullness, weight, oppression, or acidity, which attends over-eating. The greater renovation and vivacity which a long, delicious, and connected sleep imparts, both to body and mind, will of themselves more than compensate for the certainly short and rather dubious pleasure, of eating a supper with no special relish.—Hall's Journal of Health.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 26th, 1861.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

NORFOLK COUNTY IMPROVEMENT. We find a statement in the papers, that the Court House in Dedham is being enlarged at an expense of forty thousand dollars, so that accommodations will be furnished for all the Courts and County offices under the same roof. The edifice will be a solid fire proof structure, in the form of a Latin cross, of which the original building forms one wing at the south end, and an enlargement to the north forms a second wing, the remaining two wings are added to the east and west sides of the original building. The rear or south portico of the original building remains, and the north portico thereof is rebuilt in front of the enlargement to the north of the same.—The sides and ends of the building to the east and west are finished in pilasters and entablatures and pediments, preserving the Greek architecture of the original structure. The whole building is surrounded by a dome of iron and stone, located over the intersection of the four wings.

LEVEE. How swiftly the time flies. Another year has passed and we once more take pleasure in reminding our readers that the annual Festival, given by the Universalists of this town, will take place the coming week. This makes the fourteenth given by this Society; and, as they have all been largely attended and happily received, we consider it useless to say a word in their praise. May their Levee on Wednesday evening next be as pleasant and agreeable as on all former occasions.

O. C. and F. R. RAILROAD. The seventh annual report of this corporation has made its appearance, showing the receipts and expenses for the year ending Nov. 30, 1860, and the condition of the affairs of the company.—From that document the following facts are gleaned:—

Receipts for 1860, $655,440.39; Expenses, 340,148.16; Net Earnings for the year 1860, $315,292.14. Increase in Receipts for 1860, $6,747.78. Decrease in expenses in 1860, 10,525.55. Increase in net earnings in 1860, 19,200.33.

Earnings.—Balance of income on hand, after deducting dividend for January 1860, $567,321.08; and net earnings for 1860, 315,292.14—$882,613.22; deduct dividends July 1860, Jan. 1861, 180,906.00; leaves a credit of earnings, 701,707.22.

Debt.—The debt of the Company, Nov. 30, 1859, was 195,400.00; Nov. 30, 1860, 183,500.00; decrease of indebtedness, 11,900.00.

Stock on hand, Nov. 30, 1860, $135,938.00.

Property not required for the use of the Road.—Estimated at the sum of $204,240.00.

Sinking Funds.—3,601 shares Old Colony and Fall River Railroad stock, for investment, at cost, $271,214.16.

UNION or NO UNION. The sale of Dry Goods at Caleb Packard's is going on with great enthusiasm. Everybody is astonished upon seeing so many beautiful goods sold for such low prices, and as the money market tightens the prices of his large stock will grow less—so for sell he will and there's no "ifs and ands" about it. There is a great quantity of Prints, Delaines, Alpaca, Tibets, Flannels, Cassimeres, Tickings, Sheetings, Hosiery and Gloves, which will be sold for about one-half price. All who have a dollar to spend for Dry Goods should go to Packard's, and get two dollars' worth for one. No. 77 Hancock st.

HOLDEN & BULLARD, No. 49 and 51, Faneuil Hall, Boston. In passing down the main avenue of this great mart of the wealth and products of our State, there is none but will observe the prominent niche occupied by this firm, whose stalls stand out in bold relief, by the rare and choice meats with which they are stocked. They are old connoisseurs in such matters; and enjoy an extensive trade with some of the first houses in Boston; no article, except it is pronounced No. 1, ever passes through their hands. To our suburban friends, who prefer supplying their wants in the city, than elsewhere, we would recommend an acquaintance; once formed it will always be lasting. From a long intimacy with this gentlemanly firm, we can truly say, they are the first in their line and the first in the affections of their patrons.

SLEIGHING. Excellent! Never was better. Since the third of January, we have had an uninterrupted run. The first snow then fell—followed by others, in such quantities and qualities, as to knead well together—forming a basis as solid as the frozen lake—and which promises to endure until spring. The excitement has added new life to the community; all classes are out, in every style and fashion, and like snow birds, are skimming the smooth surface with the swiftness of the wind.

EARLY VISITORS. Our contemporary at Waltham, says, that one day last week, the fields in that vicinity were visited by numerous flocks of robins; and adds, that they probably left their comfortable quarters at the South, for our cold, and inhospitable climate, thus early, on account of their disgust at the secession movement. Quite likely; and further—if we would cultivate a good understanding with these interesting songsters, upon the broad national platform of our benevolence, we must countenance no more John Brown raids, or they may leave us "in disgust."

GODEY'S FOR FEBRUARY. We are in receipt of this number: it is a splendid one. There are so many good things, we hardly know which to take hold of first. In the family circle,—happy man,—Godey's reigns supreme; he is their mentor, guide and instructor; his loss would be seriously felt in the female world. His monthly issues furnish a repast, at which every appetite, even the most fastidious, may find something congenial. He scatters freely the good seed of social comfort and happiness, and reaps a rich reward in the benignant smiles of approval from a multitude of friends. The January number commenced a volume, and is therefore, a most excellent time to subscribe. C. Gill & Co. are the agents for this town.

THE UNION MEMORIAL. This petition to Congress, having received the signatures of over fourteen thousand citizens of Boston, has been forwarded to Washington City, under the charge of Messrs Edward Everett, Robert C. Winthrop, Edward S. Tobey, Amos A. Lawrence, and Charles L. Woodbury.

Boston Correspondence

THURSDAY EVENING, JAN. 24, 1861.

A careful review of the week, so far as it concerns Southern matters, increases the hopes of the friends of the Union, that all is not yet lost. Two parties certainly exist throughout our common country; unionists and disunionists—one or the other is to prevail. In common with every reader of your paper, we give our adhesion to that cause which is for the Union, and the maintenance of the Constitution and the enforcement of the Federal Laws. We are not to go into antecedents for the causes of our National troubles. Crimination and re-crimination will not heal the breach. It is clear that a compromise is demanded, and must be adopted by the North and South, else the Union is dissolved.

The prominent olive branch of peace before Congress, is the well known "Crittenden Resolutions." Their spirit is non-intervention by Congress hereafter, on domestic slavery wherever it exists within our borders. The thirty years agitation of this vexed question, in or out of the Halls of National Legislation, has, we humbly think, worked no good for the cause of freedom or philanthropy. We hope Senator Crittenden's proposed measures to restore harmony among the several States, will soon be submitted by Congress to the people; who, in their sovereign capacity can speak their opinion at the ballot box—that great and sacred palladium of their liberties.

Indications are strong that the popular vote of Massachusetts would adopt them. Sensation news from Washington is growing less and less daily. The public mind here is calm, and business is resuming its usual way; with some branches it is active for winter. Prices are advancing, and the financial market is easy. Our city is remarkably healthy, and in most circles, there is a return of that cheerfulness for which Boston has been long characteristic. There was some commotion, here to-day growing out of the proceedings of the annual anti-slavery meeting, held at Music Hall. The Abolitionists, headed by Wendell Phillips, Edmund Quincy and others, said many hard things. But as they openly avowed disunion, their influence is small, and is growing less upon public sentiment. It appears these rabid Abolitionists have strong sympathizers in our State Legislature, judging from the anti-slavery speeches at the Senate Board this week, growing out of an effort to take the appointing power of the police from the city of Boston, and referring it upon the State authorities. With the extreme Republicans it is decidedly a political move; but there is good reason to believe, the matter of appointing its own Municipal officers, will still be left where it rightfully belongs—to the city government of Boston. The repeal of the Personal Liberty Bill is now under full consideration before the Select Committee. A large portion of your delegation from Norfolk County, is known to be favorable for its repeal, but its fate is very uncertain.

We are advised that the name of Hon. Charles Francis Adams is strongly pressed by Mr. Seward and his friends for a seat in the Lincoln Cabinet. Notwithstanding the rumors the contrary, we believe New England will be represented in the next Cabinet, and that the place will be offered to Mr. Adams. This gentleman is soon to make a speech in Congress on the great political issues of the day. He will be found as ever, on the side of the Constitution and Union. In favor of sustaining at all hazards, that glorious Confederation, with whom the name of Adams are identified with so much lustre from the days of Washington to our own times.

For the Patriot.
The Times

MR. EDITOR:—Your correspondent "Y," in his endeavors to excuse the South, seems to have entirely forgotten the history of the country for the last three months. That there are persons at the North, who have made their hatred of Slavery a monomania, no one denies except those individuals themselves; but that the people of the South should make this madness an excuse for their recent treason, is both foolish, and criminal, and merits the condemnation of all good men, and if they carry out their designs to a successful issue, they, and their abettors, will deserve and assuredly receive the execrations of posterity.

Why should the constitutional election of Mr. Lincoln, be the cause of a rebellion at the South? Must a majority submit to a fraction of a minority? What would your correspondent say, what would the world say, if Massachusetts seceded after Mr. Polk was elected?

Your correspondent speaks of the South asking nothing but her constitutional rights, what are they? Has she a constitutional right to the possession of Fort Sumter? Has she a constitutional right to collect a national revenue—to open the mails—to fire upon an American ship; why if these things took place in Liverpool, or Havre, a tempest of indignation would arise which would shake the earth. The South has acted like a great overgrown baby, that has lost its plaything, and is crying without knowing the reason.

It is useless now to be speculating on the causes of our present troubles, the important question is how can they be remedied? It is unquestionably the duty of Congress to settle the slave question definitely, and quickly.—The manner in which Congress settles it, is of very little practical importance; whether Crittenden's plan, the Report of the Committee of thirty-three, or that suggested by Mr. Adams, is adopted, the Slavery question has settled itself practically long ago. There was not the least chance of Kansas becoming a slave state, and if Texas was divided, there is not much doubt but it would be still slave territory, notwithstanding Mr. Sumner's speech on the Barbarism of Slavery.

"Y" is deservedly severe on those youthful Hotspur's who are so anxious to march South to reduce the rebels; but he ought to keep some of his indignation for those young bloods who were so anxious to get a shot at the Star of the West the other day.

If the South were disposed to unite the North against them, and ultimately abolish Slavery by force, their worst enemies could not wish for a better course to do so, than southern politicians have adopted last year. The leading secessionists act as if they were in the pay of foreign intriguers, and disposed to sell their country to the highest bidder.

No doubt England, or France, may say diplomatically, they would not feel much sorrow at the dissolution of the American Union. Their action seems the result of one vast conspiracy, of which the secession at Charleston was the opening chapter.

The conduct of Mr. Buchanan, and his satellites for the last two years, ought to convince any reasonable man, that they had ulterior objects. He finds now that he has gone too far, and endeavors to counteract the mischief he has created; but he acts with the consciousness of a man who has his hands tied, and all his actions bear the stamp of irresolution, and imbecility.

The South cannot hold their present course without creating civil war, and this is the worst possible solution of the question for all parties. No true patriot will leave any means untried to prevent it, it is only towards North, and South, who bluster and talk big; if war should come they would soon find their proper level; it is those men who are moderate and conciliating now, who would have to do the fighting—they can do the talking.

A DEMOCRAT.

FALLING WEATHER. The fore part of the week was particularly so. The streets from constant use had become very smooth, admitting of a high polish; and numbers of pedestrians, although cautious in their movements, were unable to keep their feet, and were brought down heavily upon their narrow bones. We have heard of no accident, which we consider fortunate. The ladies get round these difficulties much easier. We saw one case, however, a giddy young Miss, not very careful, spread her whole proportions, in no graceful way, over the sidewalk; she soon regained the perpendicular, without any serious damage, except a slight derangement of her crinoline. The merry laugh she sent forth, satisfied us that she enjoyed the adventure.

On Thursday noon, we were visited by a snow storm, which fell several inches, but at nightfall it turned into a soft rain, which set the water in our streets running again.

THE MOURNFUL CATASTROPHE in Lawrence, (the falling and burning of the Pemberton Mill,) caused a great demand for Redding's Russia Salve, which is universally acknowledged the best remedy for cuts, burns, wounds, bruises, scalds, corns, etc., ever offered the public. Only 25 cents a box. See advertisement.

The Crisis.

Every day brings with it fresh proof of the perfidy of those who have assumed the privilege of being our leaders. Happily, the people are awakening to a sense of their danger, and are preparing themselves to meet in a spirit of patriotism and fraternal feeling, the exciting causes, which have led to the unhappy condition in our National affairs. They are settling down into the conviction, that a vast foreign influence is at work, both North and South, to undermine our institutions and dismember the Union. By a reference to the past compared with the present, there can be little doubt that such is the case. In 1812, the same scenes were enacted that we are witnessing to-day. In the midst of a fierce and cruel war with a rival power, a party arose at the North, which withheld its sympathy from the country, and shared it in common with the enemy. They in unmeasured terms denounced the war as unjust, an encroachment of their rights, and in no wise called for; they were anxious to make it appear, that the American Government was in the wrong, and the enemy entirely blameless. The pulpit and the press—then as now—were in their service, which labored in season and out of season to scatter the seeds of discord and disaffection among the people. The party grew in importance as the disaffection spread, and ultimately they threw off their disguise, declaring openly for the foe, by timely assistance rendered, and holding an uninterrupted correspondence with them*. At last boiling over with the intensity of their passions, they broke out into open rebellion. Commissioners were sent to Washington, to demand a separation of the Union—in view of forming a Northern Confederacy, comprising the New England States; which scheme, John Quincy Adams said was only frustrated by the timely arrival of the news of peace. This was the first serious attempt, we believe, to destroy the Confederacy—which signally failed—much to the chagrin of our trans-Atlantic neighbors, who had taken so active a part in it. The party then went into a long repose, and it was hoped never to awake; but it was subsequently revived. In the year 1825, the first Abolition society was formed in London, which held its meetings at Exeter Hall; and the year following, a branch was established in Boston, whose officers made annual pilgrimages to the parent society, for council and aid, to carry on an indiscriminate warfare with the domestic institutions of the South; and from that day forth, the work has been prosecuted with care and devotion, deserving a better cause. Incendiary documents were widely circulated, inciting the slaves to insurrection and murder; itinerant lecturers roamed the country up and down to stir up the bitter waters of sectional strife and hatred. Books, of a libellous character, reflecting on the people of the South, were published, which found special favor with the fanatics of the East and English aristocracy; members of the British Parliament were despatched to our shores when the country was reeling under the mad excitement of partisan strife, to fan the flame, and if possible to bring about a rupture; the Canadas were thrown open to the vile and abandoned, who after committing depredations in the States, found there a safe asylum; her emissaries were active during the Kansas troubles, who unblushingly declared that their object was to oppose every peaceable overture of the Government, and to precipitate a revolution; the invasion of Virginia—murdering the inhabitants—sacking the town—taking possession of United States property, with the intention of holding it, was no doubt through her connivance—as the prime mover in that drama was hourly expecting reinforcements from the British Provinces; we repeat, that we have no doubt that her hand directed these movements—for it is but part of a grand scheme which she has long cherished of subjugating this country. A civil war, with the hot blood raging in the wedge she knows will split the Union—and she trusts to her friends here to drive it home. Then she will step in, over a fallen and prostrate people—who, in the pride of their strength, dared to contest with her the supremacy of the seas, and the right to self-government. The country will never know peace so long as she owns a foot of soil on this Continent.

* Commodore Dracutt in command of a United States vessel was then lying in Boston harbor, endeavoring to get out—but was prevented by his intentions being made known to the enemy by signal.

There is not a church bell in the city of Lawrence, (Mass.) The bells of the factory bells at the regular meeting hours have been made to answer the purpose of church bells.

The fact that Stephen A. Douglas has a larger popular vote than Col. John C. Fremont secured, and yet has only twelve Electoral votes, while the Colonel had one hundred and fourteen such votes, shows how unequal our mode of choosing a President operates.

It is noticed as a singular fact that the three most rampant disunion journals north of Richmond, (Va.) are edited or owned by foreigners. The Constitution is edited by an Irishman; the Baltimore Sun by an Englishman, and the New York Herald by a Scotchman.

Marriages.

In this town, on the 9th inst. by Rev. J. D. Wells, Mr. Noah H. Marston of Chelsea, to Miss Ruth L., daughter of Mr. Joseph Crane.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 18th inst., Mr. William F. Dyer, aged 39 years.
On the 18th inst. Mrs. Charlotte, widow of the late James Adams of Milton, aged 72 years.

On the 20th inst. Willie P., son of Mr. Liba and Mrs. Winett Litchfield, aged 7 years and 10 months.

We laid him there, with many a sigh,
And felt when all was o'er,
Our home had lost a BRIGHT ANGEL less,
And heaven one angel more.

God's gracious, wondrous, and most precious boon,
Immortal and unutterably dear,
Why must he be resumed to heaven so soon?
Why was he not spared to us longer here?

What rapture to have trained his little tongue,
And clasped his little hands in childish prayer,
Lulled his sweet slumbers with the angel's song,
And made his heavenly life his earliest care!

But, parents, see! when peace and glory reign,
Thy child, a seraph, in the school of heaven!
There, all thy treasures lost thou shalt regain,
Not lost, but kindly kept as they were given.

Then with this trial take the song of praise;
Thou hast a little one at home with God,
And in the glory of thy Saviour's face,
Shalt know him thine, in that divine abode.

Perhaps on his guardian spirit wings,
Perhaps breathes comfort o'er thy troubled breast,
Perhaps will be the first at glory's gates,
To sing thy welcome to eternal rest.

Poetry.

Epitaph on an Old Maid.

Rest, gentle traveller, on life's toilsome way;
Pause here awhile; yet o'er this lifeless clay
No weeping, but a joyful tribute pay.

For this green nook, by sun and showers made warm,
Gives welcome rest to an overworn form,
Whose mortal life knew many a wintry storm.

Yet, ere the spirit gained a full release
From earth, she had attained that land of peace,
Where seldom clouds obscure, and tempests cease.

No chosen spot of ground she called her own;
She reaped no harvest in her spring time sown;
Yet always in her path some flowers were shown.

No dear ones were her own peculiar care,
So was her bounty felt on every air;
For every claim she had enough to spare.

And loving more the heart to give than lend,
Though oft deceived in many a trusty friend,
She hoped, believed, and trusted to the end.

She had her joys; 'twas joy to live, to love,
To labor in the world with God above,
And tender hearts that ever near did move.

She had her griefs; but why recount them here?
The heart-sick loneliness, the looking fear,
The days of desolation, dark and drear.

Since every agony left peace behind,
And healing came on every stormy wind,
And with pure brightness every cloud was lined,

And every loss subdued some low desire,
And every sorrow helped her to aspire,
Till waiting angels bade her go up higher!

Never Mind.

Be thou lovely, Friend and Brother!
In the strife of mind with mind,
Not too proud to yield, but only
Just too proud to wrong your kind;
Never let the world add you
With its troubles—it is blind.
And if loopy people scorn you,
Never mind.

Never mind your neighbor's palace
Towering grandly towards the sky;
Have no idle splendours, only
Let your thoughts be grand and high;
And if, where palatial glories
Rise above you, you but find Thoughts to top their highest stories,
Never mind.

Never mind how much derided,
Still hate glory, station, gold;
Keep your whole heart undivided,
And your spotless soul unsold;
One high-reaching thought, if tender,
Is more worth than Earth can find—
If you thus outshine her splendor,
Never mind.

Build be thou, Friend and Brother!
With your thoughts, build all alone,
In the Unapparent Yonder,
Castles grander than of stone;
Truth and Goodness—these are masons
Will build for you if they find Steady occupation—patience,
Never mind.

The Wind and the Sea.

The Sea is a jovial comrade,
He laughs wherever he goes;
His merman shines in the dimpling lines
That wrinkle his idle repose.
He lays himself down at the feet of the sun,
And shakes all over with glee,
And the broad-backed billows fall faint on the shore,
In the mirth of the mighty Sea.

But the Wind is sad and restless,
And cursed with an inward pain;
You may mark as you will, by valley or hill,
But you will hear him still complain.
He wails on the barren mountains,
And shrieks on the wintry sea;
He sobs in the cedar and moans in the pine,
And slanders all over the aspen tree.

Welcome are both their voices,
And I know not which is best;
The laughter that slips from the Ocean's lips,
Or the comfortless Wind's unrest.
There's a pang in all rejoicing,
A joy in the heart of pain,
And the Wind that saddens the Sea that glads,
Are angling the self-same strain.

Sorrow's Discipline.

The quickened seed o'erpowered the thorn,
The weed, the worm, the blight;
While vigorous leaf and ripening corn,
Successful, harvested the sight.
What gave so soon the harvest pride
To life's unfolding years?
The heavenly husbandman replied,
"The seed was steeped in tears!"

Anerdates.

A bevy of children were telling their father what they got at school. The eldest got reading, spelling and definition.
And what do you get little Peter? said the father to a rosy checked little fellow, who at the time was shy driving a temporary nail into the door panel.
Me? Oh, I gets readin', spellin' and spunkin'.

John asked Julia if she would have him.
No, said she, I will not have you; but before John could recover from the shock, she archly put in, but you may have me.

Are those bells ringing for fire? inquired
Simon of Tiberius.
No, indeed, answered Tibe; dey ab got plenty of fire, and de bells are now ringing for water!

Didn't you tell me, sir, that you could hold the plough? said a farmer to a green Irishman whom he had taken to town.
Arrah, be say, now! said Pat; how the dewee can I hold it, an' two horses drawing it away from me! But give it to me in the barn, an' be jabers I'll hold it with anybody.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE AMALGAMATION OF LANGUAGES. There is a growing tendency in this age to appropriate the most expressive words of other languages, and after a while to incorporate them into our own; thus the word Cephalic, which is from the Greek, signifying 'for the head,' is now becoming popularized in connection with Mr. Spalding's great Headache remedy, but it will soon be used in a more general way and the word Cephalic will become as common as Electrotypy and many others whose distinction as foreign words has been worn away by common usage, until they seem 'native and to the manner born.'

'ardly Realized.

Hi 'ad 'n' 'orrible 'eadache this afternoon, hand I stepped into the hypochondriac hand says hi to the man. "Can you hease me 'n' 'eadache?" "Does it haave 'ard," says 'e. "Hexedingly," says hi, hand upon that 'e gave me a Cephalic Pill, hand 'pon me 'onor it cured me so quick that I 'ardly realized I 'ad an 'eadache.

HEADACHE is the favorite sign by which nature makes known any deviation whatever from the natural state of the brain, and viewed in this light it may be looked on as a safeguard intended to give notice of disease which might otherwise escape attention, till too late to be remedied; and its indications should never be neglected. Headaches may be classified under two names, viz: Symptomatic and Idiopathic. Symptomatic Headache is exceedingly common and is the precursor of a great variety of diseases, among which are Apoplexy, Gout, Rheumatism and all febrile diseases. In its nervous form it is sympathetic of disease of the stomach constituting BILIOUS HEADACHE, of worms, constipation and other disorders of the bowels, as well as renal and uterine affections.

Headaches are very frequently attended with headach; Anemia and plethora are also affections which frequently occasion headache. Idiopathic Headache is also very common, being usually distinguished by the name of NERVOUS HEADACHE, sometimes coming on suddenly in a state of apparently sound health, and protrating at once the mental and physical energies, and in other instances it comes on slowly, heralded by depression of spirits or acerbity of temper. In most instances the pain is in the front of the head, over one or both eyes, and sometimes provoking vomiting; under this class may also be named NEURALGIA.

For the treatment of either class of Headache the Cephalic Pills have been found a sure and safe remedy, relieving the most acute pains in a few minutes, and by its subtle power eradicating the diseases of which Headache is the unerring index.

BRIDGET—Missus wants you to send her a box of Cephalic Glue, no, a bottle of Prepared Pills, but I'm thinking that's not just it neither; but perhaps ye'll be ather knowing what it is. Ye see she's nigh dead and gone with the Sick Headache, and wants some of that same as relieved her before.

DRUGGIST—You must mean Spalding's Cephalic Pill.

BRIDGET—Och! sure now and ye've sed it, here's the quarter and give me the Pills and don't be all day about it aither.

GREAT DISCOVERY. Among the most important of all the great medical discoveries of this age may be considered the system of vaccination for protection from Small Pox, the Cephalic Pill for relief of Headache, and the use of Quinine for the prevention of Fevers, either of which is a sure specific, whose benefits will be experienced by suffering humanity long after their discoverers are forgotten.

Sick Headache
CURE
Nervous Headache
CURE
All kinds of Headache.

By the use of these Pills the periodic attacks of Nervous or Sick Headache may be prevented, and if taken at the commencement of an attack, immediate relief from pain and sickness will be obtained.

They seldom fail in removing the Nausea and Headache to which females are so subject. They act gently upon the bowels, removing costiveness.

For Literary Men, Students, Delicate Females and all persons of sedentary habits, they are valuable as a Laxative, immediately improving the appetite, giving tone and vigor to the digestive organs, and restoring the natural elasticity and strength of the whole system.

THE CEPHALIC PILLS are the result of long investigation and carefully conducted experiments, having been in use many years, during which time they have prevented and relieved a vast amount of pain and suffering from headache, whether originating in the nervous system or from a deranged state of the stomach.

They are entirely vegetable in their composition, and may be taken at all times with perfect safety without making any change of diet, and the absence of any disagreeable taste renders it easy to administer them to children.

BININGER'S
GENUINE
Cognac Brandy

The infamous practice of adulterating Brandy having become so common that a genuine article is the exception; it is of vital importance to those requiring it for Family use and Invalids, that it should be of un-doubted purity and efficacy.

With a view to meeting the popular demand for a reliable Brandy in its natural state, free from alcoholic flavor and impurities, and fully appreciating the fact that it is often recommended by the Medical Faculty, as a STIMULANT, when all other remedies fail, we are now bottling and selling at reasonable rates, a Brandy of our own importation, from one of the most responsible houses in France, and known as

It is mild, delicate and pure, and is designed to be always uniform in quality and character. Put up in pint and quart bottles, in cases containing two dozen pints and one dozen quarts, and is sold by all prominent druggists, grocers and town agents.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomforable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some of the most common ailments are caused by a timely use of the right remedy. Ayer's Cathartic Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health again. They stimulate the functions of the system, and with the vigorous action of the system, make the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. If not relieved, it spreads itself, and the surrounding organs, producing general prostration, and the victim of disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangement, take Ayer's Pills, and see how soon you are restored to a natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trial and common complaint, is also true in many of the most dangerous and dangerous disorders. The same purgative effect applies to the system of the whole body, and the derangement of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them cured, by the same means. Those who know the value of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

From a Farming Merchant of St. Louis, Mo. 4, 1855.
DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of a dangerous case upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with hysterical and pimpling eruptions on her face and hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

For the Patriot Coming Home.

BY LINDA LINDAN.

Over the dark blue seas they come,
Toward the rising sun and home,—
Home, where friends and kindred dwell,
Friends whose hearts with joy will swell,
Once again to welcome home
Those who've crossed the ocean's foam;
Crossed the ocean broad and deep,
'Neath whose waves in dreamless sleep,
Slumber those as dear as they
For whose safety now we pray.
Father, at whose sovereign will,
Surging waves lie calm and still,
To thy kind protecting care
We commend them; let them share
In thy mercies rich and free,
Bring them, if thy will it be,
Safely o'er the treacherous main,
To their home and friends again,
O what rapture, pure and sweet,
Thrills the soul when loved ones meet;
O what pleasure in the grasp
Of the hand we longed to clasp;
O what joy the lips to press,
And return the food of care
Of the dear one's Thou didst give,
In our homes and hearts to live.
For these heart-felt pleasures given,
We would lift our souls to heaven,
Thanking Thee that here below,
We so much of bliss may know.
But should the sad, and tidings come,
That those we wait to welcome home,
Have found beneath the angry wave,
Where millions sleep, their nameless graves,
Oh! Father, grant each stricken one
May meekly say "Thy will be done,"
And praise Thee for the sweet hope given,
That they have found a home in heaven.
Loam, Ill., Jan. 1861.

A Voice of the Loyal North.

BY OLIVER W. HOLMES.

We sing "Our Country's" song to night
With saddened voice and eye;
Her banner drops in clouded light
Beneath the wintry sky.
We'll pledge her once in golden wine
Before her stars have set;
Though dim one reddening orb may shine,
We have a Country yet.
"Twere vain to sigh o'er errors past,
The fault of time is ours;
Our soldier hears the threatening blast
And spurs his useless gun;
He saw the star-wreathed ensign fall
By mad invaders torn;
But saw it from the bastioned wall
That laughed their rage to scorn!
What though their angry cry is flung
Across the howling wave,
They smite the air with idle tongue
The gathering storm who brave;
Enough of speech! the trumpet rings;
Be silent, patriot, calm—
God help them if the tempest swings
The pine against the palm!
Our toilsome years have made us tame;
Our strength has slept unfeeling;
The furnace fire is slow to flame
That bids our ploughshares meet;
'Tis hard to lose the bread they win
In spite of Nature's frowns—
To drop the iron threads we spin
That weave our web of towns.
To see the rustling turbines stand
Before the emptied flumes,
To fold the arms that flood the land
With rivers from their looms—
But harder still for those who learn
The truth forgot so long:
When once their slumbering passions burn,
The peaceful are the strong!
The Lord have mercy on the weak,
And calm their frenzied ire,
And save our brothers ere they shrink:
"We played with northern fire!"
The eagle hold his mountain height—
The tiger pace his den!
Give all their country, each his right!
God keep us all! Amen!
National Fast, Jan. 4th, 1861.

Treason.

Remember him, the villain, righteous heaven,
In thy great day of vengeance, and blast the traitor.
And his pernicious counsel, who, for wealth,
For power, the pride of greatness, or revenge,
Would place his native land in civil war!

Is there not some chosen curse,
Some hidden thunder in the stores of Heaven,
Red with uncomman wrath, to blast the man
Who owes his greatness to his country's ruin!
ADDISON.

Anecdotes.

I think I must be guilty, said a defendant who was arraigned for an assault, because the plaintiff and I were the only ones in the room
—the first thing I knew I was standing up, and he was doubled over the table. You'd better call it guilty.

Pa, said a young urchin of tender years, to his parent, does the Lord take the papers?
Why do you ask such a question?
Because our preacher, when he prays, is so long telling Him everything, I thought he wasn't posted.

I say, Cuffy, why you don't come and see a feller? If he lib as close to you as you me, I'd come to see you twice a week.
O, kase my wife patch my trouser-locks
so all to pieces, I too shamed to go nowhar.

Sally, said a young girl, preparing to take a snooze, if any one calls tell them I'm gone.
Gone where, sir?
Gone to sleep.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE AMALGAMATION OF LANGUAGES. There is a growing tendency in this age to appropriate the most expressive words of other languages, and after a while to incorporate them into our own; thus the word Cephalic, which is from the Greek, signifying "for the head," is now becoming popularized, and in connection with Mr. Spalding's great Headache remedy, but it will soon be used in a more general way and the word Cephalic will become as common as Electrotypic and many others whose distinction as foreign words has been worn away by common usage, until they seem "native and to the manor born."

'ardly Realized.

Hi 'ad 'n 'orrible 'eadache this afternoon, and I stepped into the apothecaries hand says hi to the man, "Can you hease me of an 'eadache?" "Does it hache 'ard," says
e. "Hexcendingly," says hi, hand upon me
'e gave me a Cephalic Pill, hand 'pon me
'onor it cured me so quick that I 'ardly realized I 'ad an 'eadache

HEADACHE is the favorite sign by which nature makes known any deviation whatever from the natural state of the brain, and viewed in this light it may be looked on as a safeguard intended to give notice of disease which might otherwise escape attention, and to lead to its remedial measures. Its indications should never be neglected. Headaches may be classified under two names, viz: Symptomatic and Idiopathic. Symptomatic Headache is exceedingly common and is the precursor of a great variety of diseases, among which, are Apoplexy, Gout, Rheumatism and all febrile diseases. In its nervous form it is sympathetic disease of the stomach, constituting SICK HEADACHE, of hepatic disease constituting MILD HEADACHE, of worms, constipation and other disorders of the bowels, as well as renal and uterine affections. Diseases of the heart are very frequently attended with headaches; Anemia and plethora are also affections which frequently occasion headache. Idiopathic Headache is also very common, being usually distinguished by the name of NERVOUS HEADACHE, sometimes coming on suddenly in a state of apparently sound health, and prostrating at once the mental and physical energies, and in other instances it comes on slowly, heralded by depression of spirits or acerbity of temper. In most instances the pain is in the front of the head, over one or both eyes, and sometimes provoking vomiting; under this class may also be named NEURALGIA.

For the treatment of either class of Headache the Cephalic Pills have been found a sure and safe remedy, relieving the most acute pains in a few minutes, and by its use, the or eradicating the diseases of which Headache is the unerring index.

BRIDGET—Missus wants you to send her a box of Cephalic Pills, she's got a headache, but I'm thinking that's not just it naiter-ly; but perhaps ye'll be ather knowing what it is. Ye see she's nigh dead and gone with the Sick Headache, and wants some of that same as relieved her before.

DEUGST—You must mean Spalding's
Cephalic Pills.
BRIDGET—Och! sure now and ye've sed
it, here's the quarter and give me the Pills and don't be all day about it aither.

GREAT DISCOVERY. Among the most important of all the great medical discoveries of this age may be considered the system of vaccination for protection from Small Pox, and the Cephalic Pills for the prevention of Be-perts, either of which is a sure specific, whose benefits will be experienced by suffering humanity long after their discoverers are forgotten.

CURE
CURE
All kinds of Headache.

By the use of these Pills the periodic attacks of Nervous or Sick Headache may be prevented;
and if taken at the commencement of an attack, immediate relief from pain and sickness will be obtained.

They seldom fail in removing the Nausea and they act gently on the bowels, removing costiveness.

For Literary Men, Students, Delicate Females and all persons of sedentary habits, they are valuable as a Laxative, immediately improving the appetite, giving tone and vigor to the digestive organs, and restoring the natural elasticity and strength of the whole system.

THE CEPHALIC PILLS are the result of long investigation and carefully conducted experiments, having been in use many years, during which time they have prevented and relieved a vast amount of pain and suffering from headache, whether originating in the nervous system or from a deranged state of the stomach.

They are entirely vegetable in their composition, and may be taken at all times with perfect safety without making any change of diet, and the absence of any disagreeable taste renders it easy to administer them to children.

the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin;
his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Feb. 9th, 1861.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

ST. VALENTINE. With what transports of joy, in the bright visions of the future, is the return of this day welcomed, by the numerous devotees at the shrine of Cupid; and with what a palpitating heart, is the seal of the mysterious missive broken, by the coy maid, which is to unfold to her, in glowing accents, a new world of happiness, in pledges of never ending affection. Next Thursday St. Valentine yields his scepter. May his reign be triumphant—until every son and daughter of Adam, who are travelling the gloomy paths of celibacy, be brought within its happy influence.

FAMILY GATHERING. On Friday, the 18th of January, 1861, the children, grand-children, and great grand-children of Wm. J. J. Spear of this town, to the number of fifty, paid a visit to the maternal mansion.

Mrs. Spear is now eighty-three years of age, and enjoys a comfortable share of health. She has been the mother of twelve children, ten of whom survive. Her eldest child is sixty-four and the youngest thirty-nine years of age. The oldest grand child is forty, and the oldest great grand-child is sixteen. Her grand children number fifty-five, forty-seven are now living; and of thirty-three great grand-children, twenty-seven now living.

After the company had assembled, the ages ranging from three to eighty-three, remarks were made by one of her children, and then an appropriate prayer was offered by another, after which all sat around the festive board and partook of an excellent collation. Mutual greetings were interchanged, kind and cordial wishes tenderly expressed for the aged matron, and thus passed several hours of interest and pleasure to all who participated. May this gathering, a year hence, be as happily enjoyed, kind Providence permitting.

INTERESTING LECTURE. By the published correspondence, we learn that the Rev. Henry Giles, a resident of this town, has been invited by a committee of the citizens of Boston, to deliver a lecture with reference to these discordant times, as illustrated by truly great men—luminaries of patriotism and genius for all time. Mr. Giles, in his reply of acceptance, says:—

"The subject which I select is 'John Philpot Curran,' and the date the evening of Feb. 22nd. It will not be inappropriate to discourse on the merits and the genius of a great National Patriot—on the anniversary of the birth of the greatest Patriot that ever lived—whom all nations, and men of all Parties, have with spontaneous unanimity of consent called—'The Father of his Country.'"

The acknowledged talents of Mr. Giles as an eloquent and interesting speaker, with his well-stored fund of choice and valuable information, cannot fail to well repay the auditory, who may fortunately hear his address at the Tremont Temple.

NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE. We have received the sixteenth number of the first volume—"Stanislaus Index"—published at Knight's Ferry, California, by Messrs. S. J. Garrison and Harvey Field. The paper presents a fine appearance in every department, and we hope the publishers will reap a rich reward. The junior member of the firm is a native of this town, being a son of Mr. John Whitcher, and acquired his first knowledge of the printing art, in our office several years ago. He was steady and industrious while an apprentice, and now that he has started in business we extend the offer of friendship and wish him God-speed.

RECOVERING. We are pleased to learn, that S. B. Phinney, Esq., editor of that most excellent paper, the Barnstable Patriot, is recovering from a severe rheumatic attack. We can truly sympathize with our afflicted friend, as we have been a sufferer at periods for several years with this painful complaint.

THE MACKEREL CATCH FOR 1860. The returns received from the various fishing ports in this State, show that the whole number of barrels of mackerel caught and inspected for the year 1860, was about 230,000, against 99,315 the previous year. The Hingham Journal says that the catch off the Cape and the South Shore generally, has doubled the present year, while the fleet engaged in the business was not materially larger than the year before.

DOGS. At the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen of Boston, the following order was passed:

"The Chief of Police was ordered to cause all dogs to be killed which may go abroad unlicensed, and uncollared until April 1, 1861.

MILITARY. At meetings recently held by the Hancock Light Guard in accordance with Gov. Andrew's Order No. 4, it appears that there is but a small company ready to fight their neighbors of the South. Out of some thirty-five members only twenty-seven answered yes.

GENERAL COURT. The Legislature has voted to invite President Lincoln to visit Massachusetts on his way to Washington.

One hundred thousand dollars have been placed at the disposal of the Governor to be used in case of emergency.

Elias Richards of Weymouth has petitioned, praying to be relieved from the custody of certain intoxicating liquors deposited with him five years since, and asking compensation for his trouble.

Daniel Baxter and 180 others of this town, have petitioned in aid of the petition of the Old Colony Railroad Company, to extend their track to the Rhode Island line.

Joseph G. Brackett and 54 others of this town, have petitioned in aid of E. S. Beas and others of Weymouth, to free the Bridges and Turnpike between this town and Hingham.

The Committee on Elections, through Mr. Mason of Dartmouth, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of Francis Williams to occupy the seat now held by Charles Marsh of this town, and this report was accepted.

HON. C. F. ADAMS. The editor of the Norfolk County Journal, (Roxbury,) speaks truly of the Representative in Congress from this District:—

"We look upon Mr. Adams's course as wise and statesmanlike, and believe him to be the last man who will really concede anything practical affecting the question of free territory and the rights of the North."

FARMING IN QUINCY. It is understood that the forthcoming publication—"Transactions of the Norfolk Agricultural Society for 1860"—will contain extracts from the Report of the Supervisory Committee; and among the number the subjoined one relative to Horatio N. Glover, Esq., of this town, a worthy gentleman, who gives much time and attention to agriculture and its kindred branches:

"The farm of H. N. Glover, Quincy, both in regard to the condition and arrangement of the buildings, and the division and cultivation of the land, presents a good example of ORDER AND NEATNESS, those fundamental principles of good farming."

"He invited us to look at a piece of Marsh land, from which he had shut out the sea by a substantial dike. Below the dike are sluices, fitted with gates, which allow the water from the reclaimed land to escape but prevent the inward flow of the tide. When the improvement of this land was commenced, it was, in most respects, like ordinary salt marsh, and had been so from the earliest account to be had of it; yet it is filled with the stumps of various species of trees. No one has any knowledge in regard to the time when these trees were standing; but it is evident that they grew when the ground was free from the action of salt water. From the appearance of the surrounding land, it seems probable that a high bar formerly protected the marsh from the sea, but that by some unusual force the waves broke through, destroyed the trees, and changed the general character of the vegetation. Although this was done, perhaps, hundreds of years ago, the roots of the trees imbedded in the marsh are still perfectly sound."

"In the fall of 1859, Mr. G. planted cranberries on a portion of the reclaimed marsh. Of course, there has not been sufficient time for the plants to establish themselves. At present there is nothing discouraging in their appearance, and the public will be interested in the progress and result of this attempt to convert a salt marsh into a cranberry meadow."

For the Patriot.

Fourth of March.

THE INAUGURATION. Much fear is expressed on a portion of the groundless—of a determination, from a certain quarter, to resist, by violence, the peaceable inauguration of Mr. Lincoln, on the 4th of March. We are assured, that General Scott has all the elements around him to preserve the peace,—what necessity is there then, of sending abroad for assistance? We are opposed to all military demonstrations, for coercion, on every idle rumor; it is not in accordance with the spirit of our institutions, and is a rebuke to the good sense and patriotism of the people.

Where is your President? was the enquiry once made by a stranger, of a citizen of Washington.

There! was the response, turning the attention of the enquirer, to a plain dressed man, without attendants.

No! but where is his guard? Those are his guards, said the citizen, exultingly, pointing to the populace, who were tendering their congratulations to the Chief Magistrate.

This is Democratic. In a republic, where the people rule, the highest as well as the most humble of her citizens, have equal guards and protection.

The spirit of sectional warfare which is now rampant in the land, to our mind, is reprehensible. To kiss a gun, is a harmless affair; but after it has been thus consecrated, to turn it against our countrymen, is criminal. There is more danger to be apprehended from a military despotism, which is ready at every pretext to draw the sword, to silence murmurs and complaints, than the momentary ebullitions of an erratic and insignificant rabble. If our citizen Soldiers should compromise their dignity, by favoring the fanatical designs of political demagogues, their days are numbered. The same breath that made them, can unmake them.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. In communing with our readers a few weeks since, in relation to railroads, etc., we then stated that important improvements, which the wants of the community appeared to demand, were soon to be made at the Station House of the Old Colony Railroad of this place, and at a favorable opportunity we should again revert to the subject. That time has now arrived; the contemplated improvements, have, in every instance been admirably and satisfactorily carried out.

The Ticket Office, (which has heretofore been the source of much complaint) is now removed to the most eligible side of the track, a neat and convenient room having been fitted up for the purpose; this arrangement brings the Depot Master back again to the right place—he is now one of us. In connection, a spacious, lofty, well-lighted apartment,—vastly superior to the old one—has been put through a course of repairs; two entrances, on each side, has been opened; and a centre table modestly spread out, which will answer the double purpose of a writing stand, or the receptacle for valises or light packages; in fact, every thing appears to have been done with a single eye to neatness, convenience, and comfort. At the head of the room, is located the Ticket Office—the "SANCTUM" of the Depot Master—which overlooks all; although separated by a solid partition from a close proximity with his friends; still, his countenance is not entirely shut out—there are two communications through which he may be reached, by those who may wish to consult him on business, to receive his affectionate advice, or to have their favors discounted.

Taken in all its parts; the attentions received, the comforts enjoyed—whether in winter or summer—we repeat the assertion which we have before made, that we do not believe there is a people, either on this road or on any other leading out of Boston, who can claim the same accommodations, as the citizens of Quincy. They have Depots at every available point—and it is surmised there is one soon to be erected near the ruins of the old one, at the south part of the town, as Mr. Mitchell has been notified to move.

In looking over the Annual Report of this road, we find that Quincy figures somewhat conspicuously; the sum total for passengers, for 1860, amounted to $26,079.46; passengers and freight $27,060.26, this does not include the three small stations, viz: South Quincy, Wollaston and Atlantic, which give the sum of $1,115.52. We are gratified to hear of the increased prosperity of this road, and the prospect of its extension to Newport; the completion of this object, must, we think add to its popularity. The Company, we learn, from the same source, have already obtained a permit from the Rhode Island Legislature; all that is now required is a grant from Massachusetts to construct less than three-fourths of a mile through her territory to form the connecting link to Newport. Surely she will accede to this. Will not our Representative press it upon the notice of the Legislature? His constituents are interested in the matter.

Correspondence.

EAST BRAINTREE, Feb. 6, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—It is very seldom that I intrude upon your columns, as you well know, but having visited your town recently, I could not help writing a few words at this time.

It being excellent sleighing I was urged on Tuesday last, by the ladies of the house, to take them to Quincy; there to do a little shopping and visit some old acquaintances. So, soon after dinner, the horses and sleigh were at the door and we started for your village.

While stopping with our friends we learned of the many improvements—Gas, Horse Railroad, &c.—either complete or soon to be, in your midst; at which I was surprised. It showed clearly that your citizens were up and doing—ready for all good improvements. At first, I could not think of the cause of so much activity with you, when everything is so stationary with us; but after reasoning a few moments, I came to the conclusion that it was owing to the good old Quincy Patriot; and I guess your readers will say I am about right.

Before returning we called at the extensive Dry Goods Establishment kept by Mr. Caleb Packard—being advised so to do. The ladies were highly delighted with their visit, and your writer would have been, if they had not drawn so heavily upon his wallet—I did my best to keep it from discounting but it was of no use. They said the goods were much cheaper than they were in East Braintree, and they must have them.

It was near sunset when we arrived home, well pleased with our ride, visit and purchases.

Yours, &c., C. N. B.

GRAND CONCERT. The Polyhymnian Choir will give one of their musical entertainments at the Town Hall on Tuesday evening next. This Choir has strong claims on the musical world for a cordial reception. Their performances are highly spoken of elsewhere. The entertainments for the evening, we should judge, from looking over the programme, must furnish a rich treat to those who have souls alive for good music.

"THE WIDE WORLD." We have received a copy of this paper recently established in Boston, by Messrs. J. H. Brigham & Co., editors and proprietors. It is quite neat in mechanical appearance, and the editorial department evinces taste and talent. Its selections are interesting and judicious, and well calculated to enhance the value of this literary journal.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, February 6, 1861.

Our National sorrows continue the theme of speculation and excitement in all circles. There is no mistaking the fact that we are approaching a grand climacteric. The stability of the Union is to be tested. That some compromise must be soon adopted, to perpetuate the Union, is self-evident to all. In the hour of gloom and doubt and darkness, there is still a gleam of light. The immense union meeting at Faneuil Hall, yesterday, was a noble gathering. The people assembled by thousands in the Cradle of Liberty, old and young, poor and rich, to lay upon the altar of patriotism, all party distinctions, and unite in one common cause for the preservation of our whole country. We lingered in the hall after the meeting was closed. The same paintings adorn its consecrated walls, that we saw suspended there, in our school-boy days, Washington, Hancock, Adams, Knox and other patriots—bright and glorious emblems of our country's jewels. They advocated liberty and union at the hazard of their lives, fortunes and sacred honors; and their pictures, looking down upon this loyal assemblage of freemen, seemed to speak to the meeting of yesterday, to stand by, at all hazards, the priceless inheritance they have transmitted to their sons; a country of liberty and freedom in the widest sense of the term.

The Southern news of the week may be summed up in a few words. Forts Sumter and Pickens are not yet attacked, and though the Southern feeling in the Cotton States is threatening for civil war, no collision has yet taken place; nor will there be while the General Government withhold reinforcements without their borders. The war spirit is evidently on the wane.

The Monizomery Convention of the six seceding States is in secret session. That a Southern Confederacy will be formed there is little doubt.

The Peace Convention embracing Commissioners from several States are also in secret session at Washington. Their proceedings will be regarded with great interest throughout the country. The Pacific Railroad Bill is likely to be tipped over by the President's veto.

The Massachusetts Legislature after a warm discussion decided last evening to send seven Commissioners to the Border State Convention at Washington.

The act to incorporate the Quincy Horse Railroad is composed of fourteen sections. It gives the Corporation power to build the Railway with double or single tracks and turnouts from such point or points in the town of Quincy upon and over the streets and highways therein to Dorchester as shall from time to time be fixed by vote of the Selectmen, and assented to by said Corporation; and thence upon and over either side of the Neponset Turnpike to Neponset Bridge. The location of the Railroad over the Bridge to be subject in alterations to the approval of the County Commissioners, while it continues a County road. Its course through Dorchester, from the corner of Glover's Corner, as the Railroad Commissioners and Selectmen of Dorchester may agree. The right is given to the Quincy Horse Railroad Company, to connect with the Dorchester Avenue Horse Railroad, and any other Railroad now connecting with the city of Boston upon suitable terms. The new Company to keep and maintain in repair such portion of the streets and highways in said towns and over said Neponset Bridge, as shall be used for its tracks. Capital stock to be $100,000 in shares of $100 each. To be operated by horse power only; the rate of speed and the mode of use of the tracks over the highway and streets to be under the direction of the Selectmen. The Corporation to have power to hold real and personal estate, and fix the rates of compensation for transportation of persons and property as they think expedient; and shall be subject to all general laws which have been or may hereafter be enacted relating to Horse Railroads. They are also authorized to issue bonds to the amount of $100,000 to build said road. The act to take effect from and after its passage. It will be perceived that the Selectmen have great powers in the matter of constructing Horse Railroads through their respective towns.

COMMISSIONERS TO WASHINGTON. In accordance with the resolves passed by the Legislature of this State, Gov. Andrew and Council have appointed the following gentlemen as Delegates in the peace Congress now in session at Washington City, of which Ex-President John Tyler is the presiding officer: JOHN Z. GOODRICH, of Stockbridge, CHARLES ALLEN, of Worcester, GEORGE S. RUTWELL, of Groton, JOHN M. FORBES, of Milton, FRANCIS B. CROWNSHIELD, of Boston, THEOPHILUS P. CHANDLER, of Brookline, RICHARD P. WATERS, of Beverly.

Only one week more of the chance to buy boots, shoes, hats, caps, &c., at C. Gill & Co.'s, at wholesale prices for cash. Improve the opportunity while it lasts, for we are sure nobody can really afford to retail at such low prices, for any length of time.

ACCIDENT. Mr. Frank W. Thinton, an elderly gentleman, of Dorchester, was returning to his home from this place, on Thursday evening, over the Neponset Turnpike, and when near that part of the road, known as Leuchars Avenue, it is thought that his horse took fright, throwing him from his sleigh, inflicting a severe injury on the head, producing, probably, insensibility, and in that helpless and exposed condition, perished from the severity of the weather. When discovered the next morning, he was a frozen corpse.

A CARD. At a regular meeting of the Firemen's Aid, Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1, held Feb. 4th, it was voted that the thanks of this Company be presented to Wymann Abercrombie, Esq., for the use of his new and commodious Hall, on the evening of Jan. 7th, 1861. Also to the members of the Niagara Engine Company for the use of their Hall on that evening. Such favors will long be remembered; and the venerable Steward of the Niagara Engine Company will not soon be forgotten.

J. H. EDWARDS, Foreman, Quincy, Feb 9

THE CONCERT. The Union Choral Society, consisting of the best musical talent of Weymouth and adjoining towns, gave one of their concerts in the Town Hall, in our village on Sunday evening last. The vocal department comprised nearly a hundred voices, and the instrumental twenty odd. Some three hundred improved the opportunity of hearing their grand chorus and fine solo singing, which excelled everything that has been offered to our citizens for many a day.

WINTHROP COFFEE HOUSE. This is an exceedingly neat and agreeable place of resort, recently opened at the mansion house, No. 18 Winthrop Place, Boston, by F. A. Boyden, (late of Barton's in Congress Street), a gentleman whose genial feelings well become him as a caterer or "mine host." The location is on the usual route from the Depot to State Street, and the public when "weary and hungry" are invited to call and enjoy the hospitable treatment of friend Boyden.

THE BACKBONE OF WINTER. On Friday morning last, at sunrise, the thermometer was down to twenty degrees below zero; the coldest day within the remembrance of the oldest inhabitant. On the day previous, at noon, it was forty above—a change of sixty degrees in less than twenty-four hours.

The recent census of New York City shows a negro population of nearly eleven thousand, amongst which are thirty families consisting of negro husbands with white wives.

The United States census of the Territory of New Mexico, gives that Territory a population of 80,000.

Poetry.

Zion's Bank.

I knew a never-failing Bank,
Well filled with golden store;
No other Bank contains as much
That can enrich the poor.

Should all the banks of Europe break,
And that of England fail,
Fear not that Zion's glorious bank
Her discounts will curtail.

Sure all the wealth this world contains May never be compared
With that the grace of God's dear Son
Hath for our souls prepared.

Thousands of ransom'd sinners fear
They have no note at all,
Because they feel their misery
And ruin by the fall.

Though thousands note, lie scattered round,
All sign'd and seal'd and free,
Yet many a doubting soul will say,
Ah! they are not for me.

Proud unbeliever cannot admit
Such tidings to be true;
And yet I tell each bankrupt soul,
These notes belong to you!

Some fear to go because they feel
Their present wants are small;
Some stay away because they think
They have no wants at all.

Some fear they write so had a hand
Their notes will be rejected,
But always humble souls obtain
Much more than they expected.

I, too, right at the door have been
With painful doubts molested,
Knowing if Moses keeps the bank,
My notes must be protested.

And there was one, indeed, rejected,
Who died in wealth abundant,
For in the banker's register
His name could not be found.

His note was drawn with care, but when
Before the banker's eye it fell
He saw it wanted on its face
The name, Emanuel.

And should you bring a forged note,
Signed by an angel's hand,
It could not bear the searching glance
With which it would be scanned.

The notes that are accepted there,
With blood must all be signed;
All others, bear what name they may,
Are utterly declined.

Whenever all my money's spent,
And I'm in utter need,
Straight to my bank I always go,
For generous aid to plead.

Some tradesmen find themselves compelled Continually to borrow,
But I to-day own all I need,
And then I draw to-morrow.

I've been a thousand times before,
And never was rejected;
No notes can ever be refused,
That are by grace accepted.

Should all the bankers close their doors,
My bank stands open wide
To all the chosen of the Lord,
For whom the Saviour died.

Sometimes my banker smiling says:
Why don't you offer more?
And when I draw a little bill,
Why not a larger sum?

Why live forever in such want,
When I'm in wealth abound?
Why come and draw some paltry pence,
When you may have a pound?

A leper had a little note,
Lord, if thou wilt thou can,
The banker paid that little note,
And saved that wretched man.

Once, too, there hung a dying thief,
Right by the banker's side,
The crown of life he got, when—Lord,
Remember me, he cried.

Richer and richer still I grow,
As poorer I became;
And thus continually will be
Till I arrive at home.

With angels then, and princes too,
I shall forever dwell,
And to the praise of sovereign grace,
My grateful anthems swell.

Life's Harvest.

Twilight had gathered in the sheaves of day,
Which Time had scattered thickly here and there;
And night, pale night, had bound them one by one,
With the long braid of her own raven hair.
Silent and still, an angel floated down,
And bore the sheaves, the gathered sheaves, away;
And some were golden with the ripened grain,
And some were black and blasted with decay.
Yes, day by day, we sow, and twilight comes,
And gathers in the full sheaves, one by one;
And by and by, life's evening hour will come,
And we shall see the work our hands have done.

Anecdotes.

A preacher asked for lodgings at a house in the country, but was refused. Knowing her to be a church member, he quoted Paul, hoping she would take the hint that he was a preacher. He had hardly got to "for thereby some have entertained angels unawares" when she said—
But angels, sir, would not come with tobacco in their mouths.
The preacher left without ceremony.

You always lose your temper in my company said an individual of doubtful reputation to a gentleman.

True, sir, replied the other, and I shouldn't wonder if I lost everything I have about me.

A marquis said to a financier, I would have you to know that I am a man of quality. And I, replied the financier, am a man of quantity.

My dear girl, will you share my lot for life? How many acres is your lot, sir?

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE AMALGAMATION OF LANGUAGES. There is a growing tendency in this age to appropriate the most expressive words of other languages, and after a while to incorporate them into our own; thus the word Cephalic, which is from the Greek, signifying "for the head," is now becoming popularized in connection with Mr. Spalding's great Headache remedy, but it will soon be used in a more general way and the word Cephalic will become as common as Electrotyp and many others whose distinction as foreign words has been worn away by common usage, until they seem "native and to the manor born."

Hardly Realized. Hi ad 'n' 'orrible 'eadache this hafternoon, hand I stepped into the haphothecaries hand say hi to the man, "Can you hease me of an 'eadache?" "Does it hache 'ard," says 'e. "Hexcedingly," says hi, hand upon that 'e gave me a Cephalic Pill, hand 'pon me 'enior it cured me so quick that I 'ardly realized I ad an 'eadache

HEADACHE is the favorite sign by which nature makes known any deviation whatever from the natural state of the brain, and viewed in this light it may be looked on as a safeguard intended to give notice of disease which might otherwise escape attention, till too late to be remedied; and its indications should never be neglected. Headaches may be classified under two names, viz. Symptomatic and Idiopathic. Symptomatic Headache is exceedingly common and is the precursor of a great variety of diseases, among which are Apoplexy, Gout, Rheumatism and all febrile diseases. In its nervous form it is sympathetic of disease of the stomach, constituting SICK HEADACHE, of hepatic disease, constituting BILIOUS HEADACHE, of worms, constituting SICK HEADACHE, of the bowels, as well as renal and uterine affections. Disordered states of the stomach, stomachic and cerebral, Anemia and plethora are also affections which frequently occasion headache. Idiopathic Headache is also very common, being usually distinguished by the name of NEURALGIC HEADACHE, sometimes coming on suddenly in a state of apparently sound health, and prostrating at once the mental and physical energies, and in other instances it comes on slowly, heralded by depression of spirits or acerbity of temper. In most instances it is seated in the front of the head, over one or both eyes, and sometimes provoking vomiting; under this class may also be named NEURALGIA.

For the treatment of either class of Headache the Cephalic Pills have been found a sure and safe remedy, relieving the most acute pains in a few minutes, and by its subtle power eradicating the diseases of which Headache is the unerring index.

BRIDGE.—Missus wants you to send her a box of Cephalic Pills, no, a bottle of Prepared Pills, but I'm thinking that's not just it neither; but perhaps ye'll be a better knowing what it is. Ye see she's a high dead and gone with the Sick Headache, and wants some of that same as related her before.

DRUGGIST.—You must mean Spalding's Cephalic Pills.

BURR.—Och! sure now and ye've sed it, here's the quarter and give me the Pills and don't be all day about it aither.

GREAT DISCOVERY. ## PACKARD'S Great Regenerator for the HUMAN HAIR.

IT is now too well known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet to satisfy the most credulous, I will publish the following testimony.

Harrison Sq., Dorchester, Mar. 30, 1859. MR. PACKARD—Sir:—I have given your Regenerator a fair trial and find it all you claim for it. My hair was very gray; it is now restored to perfect color. All the humor is removed from the scalp. In short, I have now a perfect head of hair. I am willing to go before any Justice of the Peace and make oath to the above, if you wish it.

What it has done for him it will do for everybody that will use it. MRS. E. HAYDEN, Agent for Quincy. Also, for sale by C. C. JOHNSON. July 16. 1y study in much less time than would be necessary to one of half his years.

Dryden, in his sixty-eighth year, commenced the translation of the Iliad; and his most pleasing productions were written in his old age.

We could go on and cite thousands of examples of men who commenced a new study and struck out into an entirely new pursuit, either for livelihood or amusement, at an advanced age. But every one familiar with the biography of distinguished men will recollect individual cases enough to convince him that none but the sick and indolent will ever say I am too old to study.

The Granite Business of Quincy.

"The Supervisory Committee of the Norfolk Agricultural Society, on their visit to this town, elicited the following intelligence in regard to the origin and importance of the quarrying of granite from Messrs. George Penniman and Thomas Hollis, which will be published in their Report connected with the annual transactions of said Society:—

The first building of note for which the Quincy granite was used, was King's Chapel, in Boston, erected in 1749, the stone of which it was built having been "picked up" in the woods. It was not quarried—the splitting of stone by wedges being then unknown or not practised here. Boulders were broken by hammers to such an extent as was practicable for obtaining pieces of the desired size. The first quarrying was in procuring the stone of which the State Prison at Charlestown was built, in 1813? About this time the light-colored granite from Chelmsford, Concord, N. H., &c., began to be used for building in Boston to considerable extent. In 1817, the old Dedham jail was built of Quincy granite, and this may be taken as the date of the commencement of the quarrying business. Fashion turned from the light-colored in favor of what is called the blue granite. The Leverett Street Jail, Boston, was built of it in 1830, and a large demand for the article soon sprang up. In 1825, the Granite Railway Company, Col. Thomas H. Perkins, President, was incorporated. This association built, in 1826, the railroad leading from the quarry to tide water, for the purpose of taking stone to boats and larger crafts. This was the first railroad in New England, and probably the first on which iron rails were laid in the United States. The Bunker Hill Monument Association owned what was called the Bunker Hill Quarry, to which the railroad was extended, and from which the stone for the first forty feet of the monument was taken. This quarry is now owned by the Granite Railway Company, which is still extensively engaged in quarrying and dressing stone. No less than eight other companies are now similarly engaged in this town. They give employment to six hundred men, in quarrying, hammering, &c., whose average wages are five hundred dollars a year—making an aggregate annual disbursement of $300,000. Probably the sum which has been paid for labor at the quarries during the last ten years, has not been less than $5,000,000. If this amount had been obtained for gold or silver, it would have produced an excitement in the country. The supply of stone is apparently inexhaustible. It is valued in the quarry at one cent per cubic foot. When the Granite Railway Company purchased their land here, they paid about forty dollars an acre for the greater part; but for the quarry proper, they paid one thousand dollars an acre. The deeper the quarry is worked the better is the quality of the stone.

"Among the noted buildings which have been built of the Quincy granite, are the Custom House, Merchants' Exchange, and Court House, Boston; Custom Houses of New Orleans, Mobile, Providence and Portland; Exchange and Astor House, New York. The celebrated Fort Sumter in Charleston harbor was also built of this stone. The noble rows of stores on Commercial street, Franklin street, and in other parts of Boston, built of this material, attract the attention of every visitor to the city, and are acknowledged to be unsurpassed in appearance in this or any other country. Some trials which have lately been made in sculpturing the Quincy granite, shows that it is susceptible of being worked with good effect. Monuments of ornamental character have been wrought from it, and the success which has attended the attempts to use it for such purposes, has been such that arrangements have been made to carry on this branch to considerable extent.

"The Granite Railway Company employ five or six yoke of oxen in work about the quarries. They are of the largest size that can be obtained, though it is necessary that they should unite a good degree of activity and energy with great strength. We have never seen finer oxen of this class. They cost from one hundred and fifty dollars to two hundred dollars per yoke; are so well fed that they would make good beef at any time; are worked about three years on the average, when with a little additional feeding and a short term of rest, they are sold to the butcher for about the amount of the first cost. They are fed chiefly with Indian corn meal and hay."

Mr. Seward's Speech. The Speech of this gentleman, recently delivered in the Senate of the United States, on the impending crisis, has, during the week, been freely distributed among our citizens. The Premier of the incoming Administration has spoken, but we venture to say, not to the understanding of but very few. We all know the blessings of peace, the advantages of union, and the calamities of civil war. But how to avert these evils, and secure such priceless privileges, is still a question. A few words, spoken in a matter-of-fact way, in solution of this difficulty, would, at this time, save a world of doubt, and be of incalculable service.

The Quincy Election Case.

Before the Committee of the House of Representatives on Elections, Jan. 24th, 1861, consisting of the following gentlemen:—Mason of Dartmouth, Chairman, Abercrombie of Deerfield, Cutler of Boston, Sears of Yarmouth, Andrews of Ashburham, Morse of Ware, Jenkins of Abington.

Francis Williams, petitioner; Chas. Marsh, sitting member.

Leverett Saltonstall, Esq., appeared for the petitioner, and Richard H. Dana, Jr., Esq. for Mr. Marsh.

It was agreed that the votes, at the election, were as follows:—

Whole number of votes,	906
Charles Marsh,	413
Francis Williams,	410
Frank Williams,	1
Franklin Williams,	4
Scattering,	78

The Selectmen allowed the vote for Frank Williams to Francis Williams, but rejected those of Franklin Williams.

There was evidence to show that there was no man in the town, eligible, by the name of Franklin Williams.

Mr. Saltonstall offered to prove by the voters, who cast the votes for Franklin Williams, that they intended to vote for Francis Williams. Mr. Dana objected to this, as incompetent and dangerous, but it was agreed that the evidence should be heard, subject to the opinion of the Committee, as to its competency.

The Selectmen and Town Clerk, identified the four ballots for Franklin Williams. They were all written in pencil, and three of them were on Douglas tickets, and one on the Republican ticket, the printed names being erased. Mr. Williams was the Bell and Everett candidate.

Warren Higgins, identified the Republican vote as his. He voted the Republican ticket. Had been requested by his employer the day before to vote for Mr. Williams. On the day, met his employer at the polls, and was again requested to vote for Williams. His employer gave him his pencil, and he erased Mr. Marsh's name and wrote Franklin Williams. Was not sure at the time that was Mr. Williams' first name. Was told before putting in the ballot that that was not his name, or that it was not sure. Made no inquiry or effort to ascertain whether Franklin was or was not his real name. Know no man but Francis Williams and intended to vote for him. Know no Franklin Williams. He is usually called Frank.

William Boyd. (Irishman) Voted the regular Douglas ticket, for Mr. Jameson, and distributed votes for him. Finding he was not to be elected, distributed votes with Franklin Williams, written in pencil, in place of Jameson. I wrote the three ballots shown to me. After a while I heard that his name was Francis, and distributed ballots with Francis. Cannot recognize the persons to whom I gave the one or the other of these.

Richard Stanton. (Irishman) Intended to vote the regular ticket. Mr. Boyd gave me a printed ticket, and told me it was the regular ticket, only it had Mr. Williams' name on it, instead of our man, and he said it was all right. I cannot read. Cannot read the ballot shown me. Don't know as it is the one I voted. Do not know what was on my ballot, except what I was told. Mr. Boyd did not tell me what Christian name was on the ballot; whether it was Francis or Frank, or Franklin, or what it was. Don't know for what office I voted for Mr. Williams. I did not vote for any such man as Mr. Saltonstall to go to Washington. I voted for Douglas to go to Washington. So they told me. I did not think Mr. Williams was to go to Washington. They told me he would not go beyond Boston.

Michael Costello. (Irishman) Can read. Mr. Boyd gave me the regular Douglas Democratic ticket, and asked me if I would vote for Mr. Williams. I said yes. He wrote something on it, with a pencil, and I took it and put it in. I did not see what name it was, whether Francis, Frank, or Franklin. Cannot identify my ballot. Cannot swear whether I voted the Douglas or the Breckinridge ticket. I intended to vote the Douglas, but did not examine it particularly. I took Mr. Boyd's word for it.

John Murphy. (Irishman) I voted the regular Douglas ticket. Mr. Boyd said it had Mr. Williams' name on it. He said it was the right ticket. I cannot tell which is my vote. A name was written on it, in pencil, but did not see what name it was. Do not know what first name was on it. I intended to vote for Mr. Williams, the petitioner. Don't know whether my ballot was written Francis, Frank, or Franklin, or what it was. Mr. Boyd said it was the right ticket.

Mr. Boyd, re-called. I cannot swear that I gave ballots to these witnesses. Do not remember them among so many. Both the sets that I distributed, those with Francis, and those with Franklin, were written in pencil. If I gave any to these witnesses, cannot tell which I gave them. I only know that the three ballots here were written by me. I distributed some six or eight with Franklin on them, the rest with Francis.

At the argument, Mr. Saltonstall admitted that the proof that these witnesses put in the rejected ballots had failed; and he contended that the Committee ought to count the ballots for Franklin Williams to Francis, as there was no Franklin Williams eligible, and the names are so near alike, and have a common abbreviation Frank, which led to the mistake. He cited several authorities.

Mr. Dana stated the rules regulating this subject, and cited numerous authorities. He admitted that recognized abbreviations, nicknames, or substitutes by which a man was generally known could be counted, and that immaterial, but contended that a separate and distinct name, neither an abbreviation, nor nickname, nor substitute, could not be received. So, liberal allowance is made for bad spelling and bad pronunciation of names. But this name was clearly and properly spelt. At least it could not be counted unless the voter could identify his ballot and swear to his mistake and real intention, which would be dangerous. The Committee could not be sure that the voter was not willing to have it count as scattering. Mr. Higgins was warned of the doubt before he voted, and would not take the trouble to ascertain the fact. Voters are often willing, or prefer to have their votes fail, where they are voting under influences. It is better a few mistakes should be made, than to establish a rule that after a result is known, voters may come forward and swear to what they intended by their votes, when the writing is clear and specific.

At the close of the hearing, the Committee adjourned to the following Tuesday, when upon assembling they immediately proceeded to a secret ballot without any consultation, and were unanimous in the following Report, viz:—That Mr. Williams have leave to withdraw; which Report was unanimously accepted by the House, Wednesday, Feb. 6.

Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12, 1861.
JOHN A. GREEN, Esq.—Dear Sir:—This city has never before seen such days as those which have just passed away, nor have scenes so pregnant with the fate of the Republic ever been enacted here. Secession was an old plot. It was not caused by any act of the Free States. With the other States, Personal Liberty Laws and all that twaddle was only an excuse for carefully premeditated treason. But with the border Slave States the case was widely different. They were hurried away by the violence of the extremists. For a long while the fate of the Republic trembled in the balance. No man dared to hope and all seemed lost. I say no man, but there was one, Mr. Seward. He saw the danger, the extreme necessity for action, and he chose his course at once.

If the Republicans folded their arms and refused all arbitration, the entire South would surely go, civil war was inevitable. The Cotton States would achieve what they would hail as the greatest triumph, and the Republicans in the moment of their success would find the sweet fruit of victory turn to ashes in the tumult. This must not be. The party must take a position in which it could embrace the North, divide the South and rescue all the fruits of victory to those who had fought the fight. Upon this policy Mr. Adams acted; and thanks to the statesmanlike men—the real issue is now joined upon which all good men at the North and many at the South can agree to withstand the violence of secession fanaticism. For strengthened by the cause of Messrs. Seward and Adams, Winter Davis could go into the fight against secession in Maryland, with some chance of success. To him, as much as to any man—to his heroic courage, sleepless energy and utter self-devotion, is due the turn in the tide which is now setting strongly for the Union. He wrote, he spoke, he persuaded. He met denunciation the most bitter, hatred the most intense, and a social proscription almost unparalleled, with a heroic calmness which should secure him the hearty admiration of every friend of the Constitution. Hardly less praise is due to the brave Eberidge, the noble Clemens, and the many men from the border States, who staked every thing upon their desperate defence of the Union. It is useless for men who sit quietly at home, to say that nothing should be conceded to such men as these. Nothing assuredly to South Carolina for her stern repudiation and contempt. But to Virginia, to Kentucky, to noble old Tennessee; shall we cruelly drive them in desperation into the arms of treason?

No large party at the North could possibly have sustained itself upon this ground. The Republicans therefore, wisely and generously offered a fair settlement of the question. New Mexico can no more be slave soil than Massachusetts can be—and for the same reason—it does not pay there; and the party concedes an abstraction with the hope of securing so substantial a good as the safety of the Union and the Constitution. They now join issue upon the basis Mr. Crittenden claims, that "Territory hereafter acquired" shall be dedicated to slavery. Mr. Adams and Mr. Davis say no; that far we never will go. Sooner than that "let the heavens fall." You claim this to insult us—not for a fair settlement—for that we offer you in the "Report of the Thirty Three." This is now the issue. Extreme men in the Republican party may for a time strive to struggle against the tide, but the great course of events has hurried us to that issue; will you support men who claim a bounty on filibustering, a premium on stealing; or will you not insist that a fair offer of settlement shall be fairly met. Do not deceive yourself; this is the real issue; all others are superannuated. Mr. Seward will never support the Crittenden Compromise; Mr. Adams denounces it as insulting to the North; but Mr. Lincoln, Mr. Seward, Mr. Adams, the Republican party and all good men must support the concessions of the Committee. Yours, CONCILIATOR.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, February 14, 1861.

A casual review of the great business interests of our country for some months past will show that the political events following the National election, were at one time threatening the most serious results for the future. But the panic of November, spreading its dark cloud over the land, has subsided, leaving and continuing to keep a portion of the banking community, dependent by daily labor for their bread, out of employ. These things cannot long continue. Before the last Presidential election, our country was in a high state of prosperity. Labor was in demand everywhere, and money easy to borrow; frequently loaned by capitalists below the legal rates of interest. But the sudden stringency of the financial market in November, put the screws to an alarming extent on rates of interest and exchanges—causing a demand of loans in that month to ten millions of dollars, while the discounts fell to six millions by means of payment under collections. Every body was frightened. Under this operation, the low rate of bills and the high rates of money, drew specie rapidly from Europe; ten millions of dollars coming over the Atlantic to us the first week of January; and like a prolific south-west rain, it has continued to come through this month. There are reasons for this. For many years past until 1860, the balance of European trade has been against us, causing our indebtedness to be large. Now, the tables are turned by our immense exports, and England becomes our debtor. And the great demand that must of necessity be made on us from foreign sources for the present, memorable year for food and cotton, both of which we have in abundance, will keep Johnny Bull on the debit side of the ledger.

Nothing can prevent a steady return to prosperity but our National troubles; these once settled and the Union safe—all branches of business will be good. For our country, now with railroads built and nearly paid for, and with its immense working capital, is in a position to develop trade and prosperity in a manner heretofore unexampled. But the question comes home, will National harmony be restored before it is too late? This dark problem to some extent will be solved before the idea of March next. If the Peace Convention now at Washington fails at a plan of compromise, the next results are likely to follow. The line of thirty-six degrees and thirty minutes, dividing the slavery question, is the essence of all plans for reconciliation so far.

When by an amendment of the Federal Constitution, Congress shall cease to have the power to legislate in reference to the subject of servitude every where except to aid in the execution of the provisions of the Constitution in reference to the return of fugitives from service, and to suppress the foreign slave trade, we shall be very likely to return to harmony, and not tell them. The slavery question on the floor of Congress, has been the proximate cause of the unhappy and distracted condition of the country.

We continue daily to have exciting rumors from Washington and the South; many of them are unreliable. It is said Major Anderson expects an immediate attack on Fort Sumter; and by the time your next paper goes to press, the deed will have been done. There are certainly fears of hostilities at Charleston. We are told that the Southern Convention, at Montgomery, Alabama, have agreed upon a Constitution and Provisional Government, strong and vigorous, with full powers and ample funds, and that no proposition for compromise or reconciliation will be entertained. These delegates are a hard set of boys, with plenty of backbone, and as impracticable as the polar star.

The Annual State Legislative Register has been issued. There are two hundred and eighty members, of whom two hundred and nineteen were born in Massachusetts, twenty-five in New Hampshire, and twenty-four in the other New England States combined; six were born in New York, three in Ireland, two in England, and one in Scotland. There are sixty farmers, twenty-nine mechanics, twenty-two lawyers, five editors, and but four calling themselves mechanics. Among the prominent members of the House, known for their much speaking, are Mr. Branning of Lee, and Pierce of Dorchester, radical anti-slavery men as appears by their daily speeches. The Union troubles would never be settled if the umpire was left to these men. Mr. Calhoun of Springfield, Davis of Greenfield, Parker of Worcester, and General Tyler of Boston, are more conservative, and we think more reasonable men, in the consideration of public matters. Mr. Banfield, a lawyer of West Roxbury, and who lived for some years in the Lincoln Village, Milton, is a young but very talented member of the House, and made a good impression. Mr. Smith of Boston, son of the late Capt. Smith, of Quincy Point, has made several good speeches the present Session, and is a friend to Union measures. The Senatorial Board do not appear to have a large display of oratorical talent as yet. x.

THE NEW REPUBLIC. Since our last, a new Republic has sprung into life; The six cotton States, viz: South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi and Louisiana, have resolved themselves out of the Union, and formed a new Confederacy. On the 4th of March, three weeks hence, Abraham Lincoln, will be inaugurated; he will be President of all, and more States than voted for him. If we cannot live peaceably together and must separate, we don't see why we need quarrel in settling the preliminaries—why we may not move in the different spheres which each has chosen without jostling each other. Perhaps the experiment won't work—and then, if we preserve our temper and good feelings, and a re-union shall be desired, there will be fewer obstacles in the way of its accomplishment.

Twenty-Second of February.

The one hundred and thirtieth anniversary of the birth day of the Father of his country—who was "First in war! first in peace!! and first in the hearts of his countrymen!!" In former years, there was but one mind, and one sentiment, which animated all classes in the observance of this day; none of the bitter feelings of local prejudice and passion had then corrupted the American heart—we were a band of brothers; proud of our country and its destinies. But even now—rent and torn asunder as we are by internal divisions, cannot we rise above the evil genius of the hour, and once more, even if it be for the last time, pay a merited tribute to the memory of the illustrious dead. The sons of his native soil, are now assembled at Washington, to lay before the Nation their grievances—to ask for a redress, and a guarantee in future, that they shall enjoy unimpaired their full rights under the Constitution. Virginia is making a last appeal to the patriotism of the country; if it is heeded, peace, with all its blessings, will once more visit the land; on the contrary—we then become a divided people. A line will be drawn, and Mount Vernon, with all its patriotic associations will be cut off from us forever.

Our gallant little band, the Hancock Light Guard, have taken the matter in hand, and will celebrate the occasion. They are to have a ball in the evening, at which the citizens are respectfully invited to participate.

POSTPONEMENT. The Concert by the Polyhymnic Choir, of Boston, which was to have taken place at the Town Hall on Tuesday evening last, was postponed to this evening, on account of the unfavorable state of the weather. The musical talent of this Choir is of the highest order; they have some of the finest voices—and enjoy a reputation that secures them a hearty welcome wherever they appear. They have our best wishes for a pleasant evening, a crowded house, and the smiles of an appreciating audience.

CRITTENDEN'S RESOLUTIONS. The Hon. Mr. Crittenden presented in the Senate of the United States, last Tuesday, a petition from over twenty-three thousand citizens of Massachusetts, (in addition to the sixteen thousand already submitted) in favor of his compromise for the preservation of the Union; about four hundred of them were the intelligent and solid men of this town—and yet Charles Sumner had the impudence to say that ignorance was their only excuse.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Slavery exists in Washington Territory.—The Indians in that territory owned native slaves a hundred years ago, and have continued to hold that sort of property up to the present time.

Three young men at Fitchburg, (Mass.) have been sentenced each to nine months in the House of Correction, for storing the cars of the Fitchburg Railroad Company.

They have just cast a gun at Pittsburg, (Pa.) with a twelve inch bore, which will throw a ball six miles. It is called the "Union."

Value the friendship of him who stands by you in the storm; swarms of insects will surround you in sunshine.

The depth of snow in New Hampshire is almost unparalleled. Measurements made of the quantity fallen up to the present time show that in all there has been about seventy inches. Travelling is greatly impeded.

A young lady in Janelville, (Wis.) while dressing for church, held a pin in her mouth, which descended and stuck in her windpipe, and would have choked her to death, but for the success of the dangerous operation of opening her throat and extracting the dangerous intruder.

VARIETY. Last week we were suffering the extremes of a Greenland winter. But a change has since come over the scene. A warm south wind set in on Sunday last, which swept over the land, with the devastating effects of a simoon; breaking up the foundations of winter—swelling in torrents our rivers—stripping the earth of its white mantle, and leaving it as naked as mid-summer. Last evening we had a thunder shower; the flashes of lightning were vivid, and the reverberations awful and sublime. It reminded us of spring.

PACKARD'S Great Regenerator for the HUMAN HAIR.

It is now too well known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet to satisfy the most credulous, I will publish the following testimony.

Harrison Sq., Dorchester, Mar. 30, 1859.
Mr. PACKARD—Sir: I have given your Regenerator a fair trial and find it all you claim for it. My hair was very gray; it is now restored to perfect color. All the humor is removed from the scalp. In short, I have now a perfect head of hair. I am willing to go before any Justice of the Peace and make oath to the above, if you wish it.

Miscellaneous.

Courtship and Cleaning House.

It was the most golden and glorious of September days. The veil of blue haze hanging like a canopy over the distant hills, seemed absolutely to quiver in the radiant glow of autumn sunshine, and the grapes, whose amethystine clusters blushed through the trelis of clinging leaves, grew deeper in color and more bloomy, as if they had stolen the imperial dye of a thousand purple sunsets and brilliant dawns, as the sun mounted higher, in the cloudless dome of heaven. No frescoed ceiling with jeweled pendants was ever more beautiful than this arbor of grape leaves where the light and shadow in fitful arabesques with every moving wind—and so thought Richard Mayfield, as he came slowly up the garden path that led to his brother's house.

The mansion itself, however, was far from presenting the gala aspect which prevailed all nature, and our hero's countenance underwent a ludicrous transformation, as he eyed the yawning windows and wide open doors.

By all the powers! said he to himself. If Isabel isn't cleaning house again! Well, women are the most unaccountable creatures! I do believe they delight in turning things upside down, and making themselves, and the rest of the world uncomfortable. What's the use of choking people with dust, and deluging 'em with soap and water twice a year? However let the dear enigmas have their own way. I'm sure I am the last person in the world to object!

With these philosophical reflections yet in his mind, Mr. Mayfield deftly threaded his way through a colony of white-wash pails and line kettles that surrounded the front door, and entered upon the scene of action.

It was quite plain from the shout with which the children greeted his appearance, that he was a general favorite.

Hallo, Uncle Dick, we're cleaning house! cried Master Henry Augustus Mayfield, who was mounted astride of a double up feather bed, castigating it fearfully with his mother's best silk parasol.

Ain't it splendid, Uncle Dick? exclaimed Miss Julia, who was endeavoring to "pry out" the principle of sound from a thirty dollar music box, by introducing a carving knife, into its interior works, while Mrs. Mayfield hid distracted by calls from divers directions, was totally unconscious of the mischief being wrought.

Dick, I am so puzzled and annoyed, she said. Here is John called to the city by a pressing law-suit, and the whole house upside down!

Thought that was what you ladies liked said Dick, perching himself upon the top of the dining-table, and rescuing a shell basket from the destructive grasp of the smallest Mayfield of all.

And my cook has gone, and the fire won't burn, and the wall papers haven't come this morning, and the parlor ceiling is half unfinished, and you know the sewing-society is to be here to-morrow night—and Dick what shall I do?

Don't fret! said Richard, soothingly, I'll make the fire burn, or I'll know the reason why; and I'll finish the ceiling for you.

Yes, me. Didn't I whiten my own room at college, when we boys smoked it into the color of an old snuff-box? And then I'll tack the carpet down and see about putting those dislocated bedsteads together.

But Dick, you must be too tired after dancing till twelve o'clock at the picnic last night.

Me tired? Fiddlestick! Where's the refractory stove?

The very fire was not proof against Dick's sunny determination. It broke into a cheerful blaze the moment he attacked its citadel, and Isabel's face brightened simultaneously.

The skill with which he next erected a canopy of white-wash pails and brushes was perfectly astounding, the more so, as his slender figure, rather pale complexion, aristocratically small feet and hands, conveyed the idea of one who was adapted only to Broadway pavements and glittering ball rooms.

I suppose the workmen didn't leave their wardrobe, when they went away last evening, Bell? he asked, when he had scaled the rather perilous height.

No, said his sister-in-law, laughing. Then just hand up that old sheet—and a piece of bed-cord yonder. Now, don't you admire my tout ensemble?

Uncle Dick looks like a ghost, said Master Henry Augustus.

No he don't—he looks like the old miller down at the pond, stuck in Miss Julia.

Upon my word, I don't know which is the most complimentary, observed Richard dryly. Now, then, clear the track, every soul of you, and give me a chance!

And he worked on, now pausing to survey his achievements, but oftentimes of all, relapsing into thoughts of the beautiful young damsel at the picnic last night who had been so studiously cold and reserved toward him. She won't like me, thought he, and I can't for the life of me, tell why. Well as I said before, women are unaccountable concerns!

Amy, said Miss Brownleigh to her pretty young cousin. I wish you would just run over to Mrs. Mayfield's with this note. The children are at school and I have no one to send.

Oh, no, said Amy, while a fresh tinge suffused her delicate cheek. I don't want to encounter that superfluous collegian.

Nonsense, he isn't there—he is staying with Harry Franklin.

Oh, then I will take the note, said Amy, rising, and looking round for her coquettish little gipsy hat.

You are the strangest girl, Amy, said her cousin. What can be the reason that you dislike Richard Mayfield? He is so handsome and so talented!

I don't fancy these merely ornamented people, said Amy demurely. My husband must be of some use in the world.

How do you know but that Mr. Mayfield is?

Can't be possible, said Amy, archly shaking her curls. His hands are too small for anything but lemon-colored kid gloves. I'll wager a new bonnet, Alice, that he never did anything more laborious than to carry a box of cigars in his life!

Miss Brownleigh laughed, and Amy passed out of the vine-wreathed porch, wondering within herself whether Mr. Richard Mayfield had been very much vexed because she had refused to dance with him the evening before.

Mrs. John Mayfield's house was at no very great distance, and as Amy was quite intimate with that lady, understood the domestic saturnalism that was at present transpiring within her domains, she did not think it necessary to knock, but opened the door and walked in without ceremony.

There stood Dick, the apex of a pyramidal scaffolding of boards, his fine broadcloth raiment obscured by a line-plashed sheet which was knotted around his waist by a ponderous girdle of rope, and his black curls overshadowed by a coarse old straw hat, working away as if for dear life. His back was toward the door, and supposing the step to be that of his sister-in-law, he said gaily, without turning his head—

What! is the carpet ready so soon, Bell? I'm just through here, and I'll come and tack it down in one minute!

Not receiving any answer, he threw down the brush and turned round.

Miss Brownleigh!

He never had looked so handsome in his life—and that was the first thought that rushed through Amy's mind, in the midst of all her embarrassment; for Dick had the advantage of the young lady in this respect—she was embarrassed, and he was not.

He sprang, laughingly, to the ground, and threw off his ghostly drapery.

You must think I have a curious taste in costume, said he archly, but the truth is Isabel has been disappointed in her hired help, and my mother is away from home, so I am helping her clean house!

I did not know—I thought you had no taste—stammered Amy, unconsciously speaking out her thoughts.

You supposed that I was nothing more than an ornamental piece of furniture? Ask Isabel about that, said Dick, half piqued, half smiling. But can I be of any use to you now?

I had a note from my cousin, for Mrs. Mayfield, said Amy, still speaking scarce above breath.

She has gone down to the farther orchard, said Dick. It is some distance, and not a very straight path. If you will wait until I remove a little of this lime, I shall be happy to escort you down there.

Half an hour ago Amy would have laughingly informed him it was quite unnecessary for her to trouble him—now she stood and waited.

It was a long walk, under the overspreading shadow of noble apple trees, bending with their weight of crimson and russet fruit, and through meadows ankle deep in purple and bloom, and nodding plumes of golden rod, yet for all that, Amy was quite surprised when Mrs. Mayfield came in sight carrying a little basket of rose-cheeked peaches from a pet tree beyond.

We believe it is one of woman's special and inconvertible privileges to change her mind—therefore nobody was much astonished when three months subsequently there was a rumor of the engagement of Mr. Mayfield and Miss Brownleigh! Still however, Dick always declared that it was an insoluble mystery to him that when serenades and schottisches, poetry and perfumes had all failed to win an entrance to the maiden's heart, a whitewash brush should have been the un-

Western Correspondence—Letter 1.

WINONA, MINNESOTA, JAN. 24, 1861.

FRIEND GREEN We are having fine weather for winter; and have now the best sleighing since 1856. Notwithstanding war and rumors of war, our people are busily engaged in carrying their grains to market on the great Mississippi; from whence it will be shipped to markets, south and east, when navigation opens.

Our Legislature is in session, making laws and spending money, for the dear people. With the exception of one vote, they last week passed resolves unanimously in favor of the Union, and offering the President men and material aid, for its support and defence.

This was well. However, this was merely re-enacting a resolve made by the people some time ago, at the family altars, in the fields and work shops; there is no discount in Minnesota as to patriotism. Our greatest fears now are, that the time of squaring up accounts with the rebels of the South, will be deferred for a few years longer. We never shall have so good a time again; our barns are full to overflowing; our warehouses are groaning with the weight of our products.

We should not take the advantage of the South because they are destitute of grain, but because they are overflowing with bad whiskey, and are in open rebellion against the General Government. The idea in this revolution is, liberty is progressive, and is moving southward with potential power, backed by the visible powers of the Almighty.

Three things are evident to the reflecting mind, of the decay of negro slavery, from this side: First, a want of confidence in the South by the civilized world in commercial affairs—the bad faith of their statesmen, in the Cabinet and various offices of public trust; second, their barbarities to unoffending Northern visitors and business men; third, the augmentation of strength to the Republican party in the great victory they are now achieving; not by the word of a statesman, but by the visible support of an overruling Providence. The whole civilized world is on their side, and whatever compromises are made will disappear like the dew before the sun.

Words are of no use now; heretofore we have conceded and sacrificed every thing, but our innate principles—for harmony. We have indulged them in everything; eye! and much, much to our shame. They have torn down the stars and stripes, emblems of peace, liberty and our harmony, and trodden them under foot. They are proclaiming that this is not the land of freedom, (our former vaunted boast), to the oppression of all lands—but it is soil dedicated to slavery. Aye! that slavery is a Divine institution; and prove it—how? by General Cushing, Charles O'Connor, Raphael, a Jewish minister, and the Old Testament: "Verily, verily; the first shall be last and the last first."

What are we coming to, when adopted citizens, under that flag which they have sworn to protect; that which gave them freedom; released them from bondage—say with all the effrontery of an Irish egotist, that slavery is a Divine institution and ought to be supported by the guns of America. Great God! if this is what Ireland has been fighting for, for hundreds of years, the majority of Irishmen better go back to "Fader der Land;" especially such ingrates as Cobb, Yancy, Rhett, Keitt and others of that ilk—too numerous to mention.

This picture is too revolting to contemplate. Speed! speed! revoled and avenging gods—and arrest and annihilate this insidious, stealthy, wicked monster, that seeks to establish the cruelties of an inquisition on the last hopes of freedom.

JAMES WHITE.

LETTER 2.

WINONA, MINNESOTA, FEB. 4.

ESTEEMED FRIEND: It becomes my painful duty to announce to your readers, the political death of William H. Seward; he breathed his last, as a statesman, on the 31st ult., in the Senate of the United States. A huge hearse is now bearing his very poor remains through the Border States to their last resting place, among the rubbish of compromise. The Northwest has been appointed administrator of the (es) States, and are now deliberating coolly and calmly on the distribution of what remains of patriotism in it.

From the western borders of New York, to the bounds of civilization, the Pacific, old Ben Wade, S. P. Chase, Bates of Massachusetts, Banks of Illinois, Aldrich of Minnesota, Baker of Oregon, Pattee of Wisconsin, and Trumbull of Illinois, will hereafter take charge of the civil government—Gen. Scott the military. We hope to have peace soon. The laws will be spoken by that ever faithful vindicator, on and after the 4th of March, by the cannon and clash of resounding arms.

Twenty men here of the Northwest, have lost their lives in the South, within two months, and we have living witnesses of the destruction of Government property; the stars and stripes, and scenes of horror that makes our blood run cold.

Our Post office here was robbed of one thousand dollars three nights since. Milwaukee Post Master is a defaulter for four thousand dollars. The authorities of the New Orleans Treasury, refuse to fork over; our commerce is impeded every where, and war is inevitable; our Representatives write home, "PREPARE FOR WAR"—liberty of speech is suppressed in Boston—these are the changes we propose to settle or die. Faithful to the best interests of the Union,

I remain, YOURS, J. T.

LETTER 3.

WINONA, MINNESOTA, FEB. 9.

DEAR SIR: To give your readers an idea of the general prosperity of the Western country, notwithstanding the gloom pervading certain parts of the Union, and imminence of civil war, I will give them a history of Winona for one day; that day too, when the thermometer indicated twenty degrees below zero.

Yesterday, the 8th, the sun rose with all its brilliancy, accompanied on either side with two gorgeous sun-dogs; sending their sparkling rays over the hills, surrounding and forming the vast amphitheatre occupied by the beautiful city of Winona. We call it city because it is the Odessa of Minnesota.

Mercury below zero, twenty degrees at sunrise. The cold seemed to hold the wind in sullen silence. The smoke from the different smoky chimneys shot straight upward, and disappeared in vapors, vibrating shadows. Before eight o'clock, one hundred teams, laden with wheat and hogs, were on the move to the market places, that had come in the eve before—after dark and business hours. Ere another hour, teams were pouring in from the back country, through the different avenues, leading to the market. The horses and men, especially the long haired and bewiskered were covered with snowy whiteness of frozen breath.

It was estimated that at least three hundred teams came in during the day, drawn by six hundred horses and oxen, depositing in the different warehouses, ten thousand bushels of wheat and at least thirty tons of pork.

It is a safe estimate, that three thousand dollars worth of lumber and merchandise was carried back to the interior by the returning caravans.

Men, women and children, with quick pace, were hurrying too and fro, all day long, purchasing the little wants, for family use; and not one could be seen seemingly distressed by cold or hunger. The clear bracing atmosphere, gave a glow to every thing, and ruddy countenances spoke plainly, that want of food was the least of their cares.

To look upon a little town but six years old, whose prominent inhabitants, are but three thousand five hundred—all intelligence, and no such thing known as poverty, sickness or distress, comparatively, makes one of a reflective mind, feel a thrill of pleasure and thankfulness. To realize one more see.

It is estimated that there will be in store here for shipment at the opening of navigation, 100,000 bushels of wheat, and before the next harvest, 1,300,000 bushels from the last harvest will have been shipped from Winona; more than treble that of any other point in the State.

Think of this reader! when up to the fall of 1858 we were importers of breadstuffs, now think that of all this vast country, tributary to Winona, not one hundredth part is cultivated.

Take these few items—consider them carefully; and it will give you an idea of Winona in twenty years from now. Your town of Quincy is upwards of two hundred years old, and yet you have not the force and vitality of a Western town of six years of age.

The farmers of Winona, adjacent to such towns, on the great National thoroughfare, are prosperous beyond all account. The pork market has trebled in a year. Horses have more than doubled; sheep quadrupled; and last but not least, schools to develop the human mind, is nearly on as good footing as in older States. Add to this the most magnificent grants of land for schools and internal improvements, and you must come to the conclusion that Winona of yesterday, indicates a future for Minnesota for wealth, and prosperity unparalleled on this Continent.

Hoping for the best good, out of our present National difficulties, I am satisfied that all of this prosperity to us, is owing to free labor and present free speech of our Minnesotians, and I trust not a little to your very humble correspondent.

J. S.

P. S. Allowing one hundred thousand inhabitants to Southern Minnesota, of which Winona is the central trading point, and our present, or 1860 crop—will give at fifty cents a bushel for wheat, and prices to other crops according, about fifty dollars a piece to every man, woman and child, over and above all expenses for the year 1860. What would a proportionate crop to Massachusetts inhabitants be over and above her expenses?

For the Patriot.

The Spiritual Body.

The idea seems to prevail throughout the world, (aside from the Spiritualist and Phenologist,) that it matters not what we do with our body as regards its effecting our life in the next world; it may be injured, deformed, the system may be impaired by improper living, yes we may use it in the worst possible manner, we will suffer from it only in this life; also it has long been an established idea, that when life in the body becomes extinct, that nothing enters the future world but the soul, a very small diamond encased within this massive body; such ideas I believe to be erroneous.

The Phenologists, what do they say, and their ideas most certainly ought to command ones careful attention, as man, his organization, his mind, is their whole study. Their belief is, that the form is the same when we enter the future world as here.

Our body, visible to the naked eye is somewhat as is the outer shell of a chestnut to its meat, the covering to the spirit, which extends to the very minutest part of our body, so fine is it that no mortal can perceive it, nor when it has left the body, except by spirit mediums. If any one doubts the fact of the spiritual body being the same form as the earth body, the Phenologist will ask her or him, perhaps, one question; explain the fact when a persons leg or arm is amputated—its paining him if it is injured in the least—the leg or arm being perhaps a mile or more from the main body. For instance, let one prick with a pin, a leg, severed from the body, (the person taken from, being some distance from it,) you will find he felt it instantly, though entirely ignorant of what you were about to do; he will feel it as sensitive, nearly, as if the leg had never been amputated. These are undeniable facts which often occur; you cannot explain it rightly in no other way, than that the spirit which is so closely connected with the earth form, had not entirely left it, the leg being amputated so speedily; if it is not the spirit why should there be any feeling in the leg when pricked, after its separation. The same form, the spirit leg remains, after the amputation of the earth leg, but is invisible.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Feb. 23d, 1861.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

MARCH MEETING. This day of all days, in every body corporate—when the citizens are called together to take a review of the past, make speeches for Buncombe, vote aye or nay on all questions presented by the Chairman, joke and laugh over past follies and political backslidings, and submit propositions for future amendment, is near at hand. A Warrant has been issued, requesting the citizens to lay aside for that day, all secular cares, and assemble, on Monday, March 4th, in their hall of legislation, to act on certain specifications, numbering fourteen, contained in said Warrant.

Articles 9 and 10, recommends the organizing of a Night Police, for the better security of the public, and the lighting of the streets and Engine Houses with gas.

A Night Police is not a new idea with our citizens by any means. They have long felt the necessity of such protection. Separated only by a few miles from the boundaries of a large city—they are brought almost into immediate contact with the hardened and depraved which usually infest such places.

To protect the community from the assaults of enemies without and those within—a feeling has taken possession of the minds of the people, that its security should no longer be disregarded. All good citizens, whatever their position in society may be, are more or less interested in such a reform; and Insurance Companies, certainly, ought to come down handsomely in support of this measure.

If it should be thought advisable to have our streets lighted with gas the effect would be highly pleasant and agreeable, and be a convenience that would be duly appreciated by those who are compelled to perambulate our thoroughfares of a dark night.

FIRE. On Monday morning last, about five o'clock, a fire was discovered in a barn owned by Seth Spear, of this town, situated on Canal street. It was temporarily occupied by Mr. Louis Cain, who had a horse and wagon in it at the time, which were removed without injury. The barn was entirely consumed; loss estimated at about a hundred dollars, as there was no insurance; the outbuildings of the house to which it was attached were slightly injured. This is the second time within a twelve month, that Mr. Spear has been a sufferer from the malicious acts of the incendiary.

OUR NEW DEPOT AGAIN. Happening down that way on Thursday evening, we were agreeably surprised to find the building brilliantly lit up with gas, and the Depot Master radiant with smiles, receiving the congratulations of the passengers as they stepped from the cars into his new sanctum. Surrounded as he now is, with every comfort and convenience, we are sure that he will dispense his favors with becoming munificence; and supported as he will be by an indulgent public, there is no doubt, with that new "Punch," (or standing apology) but that his efforts will be crowned with success and that he will make a striking impression.

THE CONCERT OF THE "POLYHARMONIA," at the Town Hall, on Saturday evening last, was well attended, and the performance throughout, appeared to give general satisfaction; many of the pieces were finely executed; a number of these vocalists have rare powers of voice and of much beauty. Master Nightingale, son of the late G. B. Nightingale, of this town, was among the group. This Choir is composed of young gentlemen, who have formed a musical association for their own amusement; and give Concerts as much for the pleasure derived, as for profit. We are gratified to learn that they were so well pleased with the reception extended to them, that at no distant day they will renew the visit.

FRUITFUL BEQUEST. Our esteemed fellow citizen, Nathaniel White, Esq., on School street, touched the bump of our gratitude, a few days since, by a handsome present, of a fine barrel of apples—from his prolific orchard. He has now, from seventy-five to an hundred barrels in his cellar, waiting the tide of human events, to bring them into market. Socially and politically, we have long been in sympathy with friend White. He is a gentleman of the old school; alive to the responsibilities of the hour; and we are satisfied, knowing his political affiliations, that whatever crisis our beloved country may have to pass through, the Union will not have a more loyal or devoted subject.

THE CLOSE OF WINTER. Spring time of year is at hand. One week more, by that infallible index, which marks our progress, the dial of Old Father Time, we shall have passed out of one season into another. Soon the buds will begin to unfold themselves; the earth be decked in a rich mantle of ever varying green, and the soft zephyrs from the South, will bring on its wings, our summer songsters, to add gaiety and music to the scene by their melody. But the first swallow, it is said, does not make summer; so winter may linger in the lap of spring, and defer our blossoming hopes.

Boston Correspondence

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 20, 1861.

"Watchman what of the night?" is a significant interrogation, in relation to National events of daily occurrence. Will the Union be permanently broken up, is the question. It is asked by every inquisitive mind; as the future success or failure of nearly all kinds of business depends upon the result. The remarks of the President elect on his journey to Washington, foreshadow the policy of his administration. The laws must be obeyed—the property of the United States seized by the recusant States must be given up, and the revenue laws carried out. It is by no means probable that Mr. Lincoln will recognize State secession, or that he will recognize Commissioners from the Southern Confederacy under Jefferson Davis. But all honorable means first should be used by the incoming administration, to avert a civil war. Mr. Lincoln has great difficulties before him, as high as "huge Olympus." So far as we can judge, apart from party bias, he has elements in character of firmness and decision, which are the two touchstones for human success in any situation of life. His views on the slavery question will be given to the American people in the Inaugural Address. The nearer he approaches to the recommendation of the great principle of non-interference by Congress on this subject, the firmer will be his position. Domestic slavery is a local, not a National matter; and when its agitation is once legitimately out of Congressional legislation, we shall have a return to National harmony, without doubt.

Special despatches from Washington state that a majority Report in the Peace Congress was adopted by a close vote. Its details are yet unknown. Jefferson Davis' Inaugural as the President of the six cotton States finds no favor at Washington. The venerable General Wool is very ill with pneumonia or lung fever, always a dangerous disease in the District of Columbia. There are still hopes of immediate compromise. The old story that Fort Sumter is to be soon attacked is again revived. The Force Bill, whose object in calling out the militia and to enforce the revenue laws in the seceding States is under consideration by Congress. A proposition is before the House for the call of a National Convention. Mr. Lincoln is expected at Washington on Saturday.

The State Legislature is quietly progressing in business. Several Horse Railroad bills are reported. An important question is agitating the public mind in reference to the course of these Railroads over public highways, or on their sides; the general sentiment is in favor of the latter. In the middle of highways it has been found by a close examination of the subject by those who know, that it will cost nearly double to build the track originally, and double the cost to keep it in repair. It moreover, renders the track all but useless for the purpose intended, viz: of carrying people quickly and cheaply over the road. By being built in the middle of the highway, it deprives the managers of the track from the power of controlling their speed and subjects them to numerous interruptions and delays. The car cannot be made to work satisfactory on such heavy ascending grades, unless double power is applied. The middle, and only available part of the road is used by the Railroad, by which, though a few may be benefited, a great portion of the public travel by carriages would be impeded. Middle roads throw an additional expense on towns from the great demand of street or road repairs. All these arguments are worthy of consideration by the citizens of your town, as we hope to see the Horse Railroad radiate from the main village of Quincy to Quincy Point Bridge and to the foot of Penn's Hill on Franklin street.

Banking matters find but little favor this winter with the Legislature. So far, all increase of bank capital has been denied, which is very proper. There are rumors that efforts will be made to suppress the circulation of bank bills of a small denomination. It will do very well to stop the issue of all bills under five dollars each if the operation would be equal with the city and country banks. But men, shrewd in finance are unalterable enough to believe that it is a movement of the Boston banks to clear the channel of circulation for their larger bills, simply that the poor stockholders of the city banks may reap the profits now accruing to those of the country banks. There is a slight reaction in many branches of business since my last note, the prospects of a general reaction are not very promising, and if there are not a large number of failures in New England, within sixty days we shall be very agreeably mistaken.

THE TWENTY-SECOND, was a brilliant day over head, and was ushered in by the ringing of bells, which seemed to be a voice from Old Virginia appealing to the patriotism of her ancient ally. The stars and stripes throughout the day floated proudly on the breeze, and in the evening, our military gave a ball, which swelled the tide of enthusiasm, and closed the interesting ceremonies, with renewed feelings of gratitude and devotion to the Union. In some places, Washington's Farewell Address was read, and certain parts of it with marked emphasis.

GODEY FOR MARCH, came to us in all the freshness of the new born spring. The embellishments for this number, we think excel even those of its predecessors. A fine steel engraving—a devotional scene—graces the frontispiece; followed by numerous plates of fashion of unsurpassed beauty; reflecting the latest fashions, in every conceivable style, adapted to the approaching season. Our female friends were in ecstasies with them—they literally devoured them with their eyes; and their affectionate hearts were overflowing with gratitude toward the liberal and generous publisher. The other excellencies of this number, may be sun'd up in a few words—they do not admit of competition; and we therefore were not surprised, in a closer examination of its contents, that Godey's Magazine stands unrivalled among its peers; or that its monthly visits are looked for with such intense interest in every domestic circle.

Turnpike and Bridges.

By the annexed documents, it will be seen that the Commissioners of Norfolk County, have taken action relative to the petition of E. S. Beals and others, of Weymouth, who are making efforts before General Court for legislation to abolish the tolls on the Hingham and Quincy Turnpike and Bridges.

HINGHAM AND QUINCY BRIDGES AND TURNPIKE; REMONSTRANCE.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Court Assembled:—

The County Commissioners for the County of Norfolk, respectfully remonstrate against the adoption of those provisions in the bill reported by the Joint Standing Committee on Roads and Bridges on the petition of E. S. Beals and others, which devolve the burden of expense of the laying out and maintenance of said bridges upon the County of Norfolk.

If the Legislature shall determine the question of the expediency of laying out said Turnpike and Bridges, without the intervention of the Commissioners, the Board of Commissioners respectfully represent that, in their judgment, an unequal and unjust proportion of the damages to be awarded in said case is required under said Bill to be paid by the County of Norfolk; that the same objection applies to the expense of future maintenance of said bridges; that if the policy of indemnifying the Turnpike and Bridge Corporation for the award of damages by a jury is to be adopted in this case, they respectfully represent that it would be expedient to provide for the liquidation of the damages and the expenses of maintenance out of the treasury of the Commonwealth, rather than from the treasury of the County of Norfolk.

And, as in duty bound, will ever pray,

NATH'L F. SAFFORD,
CHARLES F. ENOCH,
LUCAS FOX,County Commissioners for the County of Norfolk.

February 16, 1861.

REMONSTRANCE, BY THE County Commissioners for Norfolk County, Against the Bill reported on Petition of E. S. BEALS and OTHERS, concerning Hingham &amp; Quincy Turnpike &amp; Bridges.

The reasons why such a bill ought not to pass will be readily understood when its provisions are stated:—

The Petitioners represent that the Corporation are now the owners of two expensive Toll Bridges connecting Hingham, Weymouth, and Quincy, and they ask that these may be laid out as public highways, and that the Counties of Norfolk and Plymouth and the towns in which the Bridges lie may bear the heavy burden of expense of paying the Corporation for its franchise and putting and keeping these Bridges in repair for the future. As these Bridges are across tide-waters draw renders must be furnished, and the expenses of maintenance will be large.

The Corporation represent, in substance, that their gross receipts for tolls are about $2,700 per annum. From these revenues they are just able to keep the Bridges and Turnpike in passable repair, and pay a dividend of 7 per cent. on a capital stock of about $16,000. A better state of repairs than now exists will be required if the burden of these Bridges is thrown unfortunately upon the public treasury. But the $2,700 collected in tolls and annually disbursed by the Corporation for repairs and dividends would represent a capital of $45,000 at six per cent., if this burden is to devolve upon the public.

An Act proposes that the County of Norfolk shall bear three-quarters of the burden, and the County of Plymouth one-quarter. A clause in the Act provides that the towns of Weymouth and Quincy shall refund one-fourth of such expense to the County of Norfolk, and the town of Hingham one-fourth to the County of Plymouth.

The Counties are also made liable ultimately for all damages for defects in said Bridges.

Now, this Bill deprives the County Commissioners of all control in the matter of determining whether any public necessity exists for the laying out of these Bridges as highways. It proposes that the General Court shall decide that question.

If the General Court shall decide to lay out these Bridges as highways, it would seem that the heavy burden of expense would more properly devolve upon the Commonwealth; for to the Commonwealth the Bridges would revert when the control of the Corporation over them shall cease.

Upon such reversion it has been usual to establish tolls, in order to raise a fund to keep the Bridges in repair.

Why should such course be abandoned in this instance?

If it be said that the revenues would prove utterly inadequate to raise any fund at all, is not that sufficient reason to deter the public from the gratuitous assumption of such unnecessary and oppressive burdens?

Of the $7,000,000 valuation of Quincy and Weymouth, probably much less than $2,000,000 have any direct or immediate interest in these particular avenues. The valuation of Cohasset slightly exceeds $1,000,000.

With these exceptions there is no reason why so great a burden should be devolved upon the $86,000,000 valuation of Norfolk rather than upon other portions of the Commonwealth.

In the apportionment of these expenses, it would be more just to devolve this burden upon the County of Plymouth than upon the County of Norfolk, but such a scheme or proposition as that should find no countenance, however apportioned.

Under the Bill proposed by the Committee, resort is to be had to a jury to determine the amount of indemnity to be paid to the Hingham and Quincy Bridge Corporation. It is presumable that the jury would accord a fair and full indemnity.

Is this a prudent or economical mode of making roads and bridges free?

The County Commissioners of Norfolk, as Trustees, have acquired the franchise of Neponset Bridge, and are now collecting tolls in order to accumulate a fund to keep that bridge in repair.

No one ever argued that the whole expense of the purchase and repair of that bridge should devolve upon the County of Norfolk, or upon Weymouth, Braintree, Quincy, Milton and Dorchester,—towns interested.

Yet ten-fold stronger reasons would apply for such legislation in that case than can be urged in relation to these Hingham and Quincy bridges.

It is undoubtedly true that several roads in the County of Norfolk have, through the action of the Legislature and the Commissioners, recently become free roads, but we trust that some regard has been had to a fair apportionment of the burdens, and, viewed in any light, the present project seems impracticable, unequal and unjust.

NATH'L F. SAFFORD,
One of the County Commissioners for the County of Norfolk.
FEBRUARY 16, 1861.

GENERAL COURT. Louis Congdon and 45 others, and George A. Adams and 46 others, have petitioned in aid of the petition of E. S. Beals and others of Weymouth.

A bill has been reported in favor of the petition of E. S. Beals and others, that the Hingham and Quincy Turnpike and Bridges should be laid out as a public highway.

A charter has been granted to the petitioners for a horse railroad from this town to Dorchester.

DISUNIONISM. In the Montgomery (Alabama) Convention, Jefferson Davis of Mississippi, has been elected President of the Southern Confederacy, and Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia, Vice President.

CORNHILL HOTEL, BOSTON. The "mine host" of the Hancock House in this town, for the last four years, Mr. Albert Webb, has become the lessee of that splendid establishment in Boston, very favorably known as Young's Cornhill Coffee House, but which under its new management will be recognized as the "Cornhill Hotel." It will be conducted on the European plan. We hope that Mr. Webb, in his more extended sphere of business, will reap a rich reward commensurate with his energy, experience, assiduity and abilities.

MILITARY. Capt. Bumpus of company C, Braintree, Fourth Regiment, Col. A. B. Packard, commanding, has petitioned to be annexed to the First Regiment, now re-organizing in Boston, still leaving eight companies in the Fourth Regiment. This movement, it is reported, meets with favor at headquarters.—Capt. Bumpus has an excellent corps, and is himself an efficient officer, who takes an interest in military matters, and endeavors by attention and talent to advance the volunteer service of the State.

ABBY'S LITTLE SATCHEL.

On the desk it lies before me,
Worn with use, with inkmarks stained—
Filled with school-books, pens and pencils,
And a slate with covered frame.

Here's a small white box within it—
Careless on the desk it lies;
Arranged so neatly, pens and wiper,
And a little knot of thread.

'Tis a common school-girl's satchel,
Careless on the desk it lies;
Yet, whenever I gaze upon it,
Tears unbidden fill my eyes.

Then, before me, comes a vision
Of a black-eyed laughing girl,
Rosy cheeks and hair like midnight,
Bright red lips, and teeth like pearl.

Lo! 'tis a Poet's vision—
For too lovely she for Earth!
Flowers so fair are oft transplanted,
To a land of HEAVENLY BIRTH.

Eighteen months her presence gladdened
Every heart in our school;
Always mindful of her duty,
Careful to observe each rule.

I lift my eyes and almost fancy,
In her seat I see her there;
And Memory paints the smile so pleasant—
Alas! Alas! that vacant chair!

It tells a tale and mournful story
Of fond hopes blasted one by one;
Of weeping friends and hearts made lonely,
While solemn voices whisper—GONE!

Gone from scenes of earthly pleasure—
Gone from home, from school, from friends;
Not fondlest love can stay the arrow,
Which the All-Father's wisdom sends.

Gems so bright are early gathered
To adorn the Heaven above;
Ours the lost,—he, he glory—
Though He smiles us, God is Love!

Cephalic Pills

CURE Sick Headache

CURE Nervous Headache

All kinds of Headache.

By the use of these Pills the periodic attacks of Nervous or Sick Headache may be prevented; and if taken at the commencement of an attack, immediate relief from pain and sickness will be obtained.
They seldom fail in removing the Nausea and Headache to which females are so subject.
They act gently upon the bowels, removing constipation.
For Literary Men, Students, Delicate Females and all persons of sedentary habits, they are valuable as a Laxative, immediately improving the appetite, giving tone and vigor to the digestive organs, and restoring the natural elasticity and strength of the whole system.
The CEPHALIC PILLS are the result of long investigation and carefully conducted experiments, having been in use many years, during which time they have prevented and relieved a vast amount of pain and suffering from headache, whether originating in the nervous system or from a deranged state of the stomach.
They are entirely vegetable in their composition, and may be taken at all times with perfect safety without making any change of diet, and the absence of any disagreeable taste renders it easy to administer them to children.
BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.
The genuine have five signatures of Henry C. Spalding on each Box.

Poetry.

What Flag Shall Wave.

What flag shall wave, when from on high,
Dissonant drags our ensign down,
And where its stars now deck the sky,
Deep clouds of hate shall darkly frown?

What hand, to rend that flag, shall dare,
When all may claim the Nation's sign?
And not a gleam of glory there,
But each proud State may say 'tis mine!

'Tis mine, 'tis thine, 'tis theirs, 'tis ours,
We all have trusted in its might,
And in the Nation's darkest hours,
Our fathers bore it thro' the fight.

The memories of the past are there,
Fast clinging to each sallow fold:
The pious hope, the woken prayer,
From hearts and lips now hush'd and cold.

Our Sires' strong faith, their war-worn years,
Their dying groans, their conquering cry,
Their orphan's wail, their widows' tears,
Great WASHINGTON, there wrote on high.

His sacred shade, in wild alarm,
Would call that traitor hand to stop,
As once God's angel stayed the arm
Of Abram, on the mountain top.

And vale to vale, and crag to crag,
The deep-toned curse would echo far,
On him who rends the Union's flag,
Or from its azure strikes a star.

Then, patriots, since one flag alone
Belongs to this, our Fathers' land,
Still let that one, which o'er them shone,
Shine on their sons, a brother band.

Still let it shine! Its hues shall be
A bow of promise to their eyes,
O'er arching wave, from sea to sea,
The noblest land beneath the skies.

The Four Seasons.

A blue-eyed child that sits amid the noon,
O'erhung with a laburnum's drooping sprays,
Singing her little song, while lofty round
Along the grass the chequered sunshine plays.

All beauty that is throned in woman,
Facing a summer garden's fountains walks,
That stoops to smooth a glossy sapling down,
To hide her blushing cheek from one who talks.

A happy mother, with her fair-faced girls,
In whose sweet spring her youth again she sees,
With shout and dance, and laugh, and bound
And song, Stripping the autumn's orchard-laden trees.

An aged woman, sitting in a wintry room,
Frost on the pane, without the whistling snow,
Reading old letters of her far-off youth,
Of sorrows past, and joys of long ago.

On the Choice of a Wife.

Enough of beauty to secure affection,
Enough of sprightliness to cure dejection,
A docile mind subservient to correction,
Yet stored with sense, with reason, and reflection.

And every passion held in due subjection—
Just faults enough to keep her from protection;
When such I find, I'll make her my election.

On the Choice of a Husband.

Of beauty just enough to bear inspection;
Of candor, sense, and wit, a good collection,
Enough of love for one who needs protection,
To scorn the world, I'll keep her in subjection.

Wisdom to keep her right in each direction,
Nor claim a weaker vessel's imperfection!
Should I er' meet with such in my connections
Let him propose, I'll offer no objection.

"My Word Shall Not Pass Away."

A simple-hearted, simple man
Stood by a river side,
And waited that the rolling flood
Might pour away its tide.

An eager-hearted, earnest child
Knelt by the stream of truth,
And wondered how that stream had ran,
Since time was in its youth.

The river rolled, and waited not,
The traveler turned aside,
The child became a thoughtful man,
And still he knelt and died.

'Tis past,—and where the willow broke
A field in green with sod;
Yet still that silent stream of truth
Is flowing forth from God.

Anecdotes.

Well, my lad, where are you travelling this stormy weather alone? asked an inquisitive landlord in the north of Vermont, during the last war, of a small boy whose father was engaged in smuggling, and had sent him, young as he was, with an important message in advance of the party.

Going to draw a pension, was the reply.
What does so small a boy as you draw a pension for?
Minding my own business, and letting that of others alone!

The landlord smiled.
Eliza, my child, said a prudish old maid to a pretty niece who would curl her hair in pretty ringlets, if the Lord had intended your hair to be curled, he would do it himself.

So he did, aunt, when I was a baby, but he thinks I am big enough now to curl it myself.

A poor soldier, having his skull fractured, was told by the doctor that his brains were visible.

Do write to father, he replied, and tell him of it, for he always said I had no brains.

First boy, state what were the dark ages of the world.

Roy hesitates.
Next Master Jones, can you tell me what the dark ages were?

The ages before gas was invented.
My son, run to the pump and fetch me a drink of water; I am very dry.
So is the pump, father.

BININGER'S

GENUINE

Cognac Brandy

THE infamous practice of adulterating Brandy having become so common that a genuine article is the exception; it is of vital importance to those requiring it for Family use and Invalids, that it should be of undoubted purity and efficacy.

With a view to meeting the popular demand for a reliable Brandy in its natural state, free from alcoholic flavor and impurities, and fully appreciating the fact that it is often recommended by the Medical Faculty, as a sustaining stimulant, when all other remedies fail, we are now bottling and selling at reasonable rates, a Brandy of our own importation, from one of the most responsible houses in France, and known as

It is mild, delicate and fruity, and is designed to be always uniform in quality and character. Put up in pint and quart bottles, in cases containing two dozen pints and one dozen quarts, and is sold by all prominent druggists, grocers and town agents.

PACKARD'S Great Regenerator for the HUMAN HAIR.

It is now too well known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet it is so generally the most excellent, I will publish the following testimony.

Harrison St., Worcester, Mar. 30, 1858.
MR. PACKARD—Sir:—I have given your Regenerator a fair trial and find it all you claim for it. My hair was very gray; it is now restored to perfect color. All the humor is removed from the scalp. In short, I have now a perfect head of hair. I am willing to go before any Justice of the Peace and make oath to the above, if you wish it.
E. BIRD.

What it has done for him it will do for everybody that will use it.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the malignant varieties of disease:
Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Itch, Eczema, Ringworm, Head, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLAND, Ind., 6th June, 1858.
J. C. AYER & Co. Gentlemen:—I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a Scrofulous infection, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. It has affected me in the throat, in the lungs, in the skin, in the bowels, and in the blood. It has caused me to lose my hair, and to become generally debilitated. I have tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was referred to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alternative (Sarsaparilla), for the cure of Scrofula. I tried it, and it did me good. I used it till it cured me. It has now been in small doses of a teaspoonful a month, and used most of the bottles. Now and healthy skin has begun to form under the scalp, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. I can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the saviors of the age, and remain ever gratefully.
ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Peck writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1859, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of your Sarsaparilla. It was a dangerous attack of Malignant Erysipelas, by large doses of the same, says he cures the common Erysipelas by it constantly.

Bronchocoele, Gout or Swelled Neck. Zebulon Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me of a Swelled Neck, which was swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhoea or Whites, Ovarian Tumors, Uterine Obstruction, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of the publisher of your Sarsaparilla, in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alternative in the numerous complicated cases of Scrofula, such as a remedy, which I have used in many cases of Scrofula. I have cured many cases of Scrofula, which had been treated by the most skillful physicians, but without success. The cure was effected by the use of your Sarsaparilla. It is a most valuable medicine, and I can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the saviors of the age, and remain ever gratefully."

Edward S. Maynard, of Newbury, Mass., writes: "A dangerous case of Scrofula, which had been treated by the most skillful physicians, but without success. The cure was effected by the use of your Sarsaparilla. It is a most valuable medicine, and I can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the saviors of the age, and remain ever gratefully."

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Sir: I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and send you the enclosed testimonial of a patient who has been cured by your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in the last few months, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the case of several cases of Scrofula. One of my patients had been suffering from it for years, and it was so bad that he was unable to work. He was cured by the use of your Sarsaparilla. It is a most valuable medicine, and I can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the saviors of the age, and remain ever gratefully."

Miscellaneous.

The Peace Maker.

In the days when our grandmothers spun and wove, like Solomon's prudent women, all the garments for their household, there dwelt in a New England village a girl named Clara B., who used to go from house to house helping the farmer's wives to spin. She took care of her mother, a feeble old woman who owned a little red cottage, built on a sand-hill which overlooked the town. Clara was not remarkable for the depth of her mind, nor yet for the cultivation of what she did possess; but she was remarkable for her stern integrity, her untiring industry, and her strong filial affection. She was a Christian, and strove to live after the example of her Saviour. No unkind, censorious word was ever heard from her lips; and no slander was ever carried by her, like a firebrand, from the house of one employer to that of another. She had the good will, and even the respect of the whole community; and when, after her mother's death, she married a young man who owned a good farm "out West," every one said, "I knew Clara would be taken good care of, she has been such a faithful child to her poor old mother."

All rejoiced in her bright prospects, and she left her native land laden with many substantial tokens of regard, to be married in the neighboring city on her way to her new home. She was not given to letter-writing, and, save that her husband acknowledged the receipt of twenty-five dollars yearly—the rent of her cottage—Clara B. would have been almost forgotten in L.

Twelve years had passed away. Aided by her toil and prudence, the young man had cleared his farm, added more land to it, and replaced the log-house and barn with such substantial frame buildings as made him the great man of the little settlement. Clara had her trials; but the only one which wore on her meek spirit was the sharp dealing and unjust trickery which she detected in her husband's father, who was her nearest neighbor. She saw that it was a mortification to his son, and always avoided any allusion to it, even when she felt her own family wronged by him.

She had three little boys, the eldest of whom was a great help and comfort to them both. Ben Pease, or as he was called at the log school house, "Ben Peace," was always at the head of his classes, always in favor with his teacher, and on good terms with the whole school. Whatever factions existed, or whatever quarrels disturbed the juvenile community, Ben stood aloof and acted the part of peacemaker. So good had his judgment proved to be, that he was generally chosen umpire; and to him, great fellows, as tall as his father, would often explain their disputes and ask his decision.

His good name spread from the school-house through the little town; and, whenever a boy was wanted to work in hay-time or to drive a favorite horse, Ben was always applied to first. Indeed, some of the keener people near them used to say—maliciously, no doubt—"Ben Peace had all the learning and all the sense there is in the family."

However that may have been, he was a good boy, and a great lover of peace. If any disagreement arose between his father and grandfather, Ben always put in a soft word, or strove to turn the conversation into a more agreeable channel. The boy seemed to understand the old man's frailty, and with strange wisdom selected all anecdotes relating to the avaricious and unjust, and all instances of honesty and uprightness with which he met in newspapers or school-books; these he always brought forward when called on to argue him on a rainy day. Ben was news-reader, accountant, and letter-writer for the whole family connection. It was no uncommon thing for the parents to say, "We thought of doing so or so, but Ben thought we had better not."

Before the boy reached his twelfth year, the hard-working father was suddenly killed in felling timber for a neighbor's barn. This was a sad blow to his poor wife, and a great loss to the children; but it was only the beginning of sorrows. The father of course left no will, and Clara was as ignorant of all business as a child. She knew the farm was hers, and felt that with "such a boy" she could carry it on by hiring help, so as to make a living for the family. What then was her amazement one evening, not a week after her husband's death, to hear her father-in-law ask, Clara, do you think you shall ever be able to clear the farm—to get the deed into your own hands?

Clear it? Why, father, replied the honest creature, we have not owed any man a copper these seven years. What do you mean?

Why—why—returned the old man, I thought you knew I had the deed. I've lent Benjamin a good deal of money in my day. You've never lent him a dollar since I came here, although you've borrowed a good deal from him, replied the widow.

Well, said the old man, without looking up, I've got the deed, for I never had my pay for the timber of the house and barn. If you think you can pay up six or seven hundred dollars, I'd as soon let you have the place as any body else.

Clara burst into tears. It can't be possible, she exclaimed, that you mean to cheat these poor children out of the house they father worked so hard to provide for them! But if you have the heart to do it you cannot, for the law will protect widows and fatherless children.

Law? asked the old man. The law will give the farm to the one that holds the deed out. It is worth two thousand dollars to-day, and will bring another thousand when the railroad is done; but I won't talk about selling it yet. You are a smart, capable woman, Clara, and can easily lay up six hundred dollars in a few years to pay for the timber. If you say you'll do it, why, the place is yours; if not, why—you've got a home of your own away off there where you come from.

The poor woman again hinted at the law; but the old man, by cunning and adroit questions, led her to reveal that she had no marriage certificate and never had one. O, then, he said, looking at her with a hawk's eye, you could not hold the farm if the deed was in the house, unless you could prove that you were legally married, either by certificate or witnesses.

Why, father, every body in my native place knows I was married, and will say so. Did they see you married? he asked, looking at her from the corner of his eye.

Alas, no! nobody saw me married!

Then that was unlucky for you, Clara, for the law is dreadful particular. Everything has got to be proved there in black and white. They don't take anybody's word there.

Clara was bewildered. She bridled her tongue, however, in presence of the cruel man, and resolved to expose his villany, and seek protection from her kind neighbors. After his departure, Ben returned from a long walk on which he had been sent, and into his ear the widow poured her new tale of woe.

Why, mother, said the boy, confidently, grandfather must be crazy; father used to tell me everything, and you know I did all his writing—he did not owe a cent in the world. O, Ben! cried the afflicted woman, you know every body round here calls grandfather a cheat; I've always known he would take advantage of any body he could, and your poor father knew it too.

But, mother, we have laws to protect the widow, replied the boy.

But, child, he says the laws ain't good for nothing, unless you've got papers to show for every thing.

Ben looked anxious. Mother dear, after a pause, he said, you did not say anything to make trouble between grandfather and us? that would only make matters worse. If he can get you into a quarrel, that will give him an excuse to sell the place; and besides that, it would add to our own trouble too. If he means to defraud a widow and her helpless children, let him do it all alone; don't let us help him.

The neighbors were consulted, and Ben went privately to the nearest lawyer, and asked him, in confidence, what could be done. Every one thought the farm was the widow's, but no one knew what business transactions had passed between father and son. On his return, Ben spent the evening looking over the few papers his father had left, but found nothing of importance. All kinds of advice flowed in upon them. One neighbor counselled the widow to sue the old man for fraudulent intentions; another urged her to have the schoolmaster write a piece for the county paper, giving names and particulars, and warning people against dealing in any way with such a dishonest man. And another, a woman, saw nothing she could do to help herself, but strongly advised her to go to his house and gratify herself by telling him what she and all the community thought of him; that he was a liar, a cheat, and would be a thief, if he were not too much of a coward. Others thought she could do no better than to keep her house and pay the six hundred dollars, rather than lose all.

But from all these counsellors she turned to Ben, who seemed to her simple mind the very fountain of wisdom. The good seed, which she in her weakness, had sown in his heart, found genial soil there, in which to grow. He was indeed a more competent adviser, young as he was, than many men who are guided solely by passion or impulse.

The affair had now been talked of more than a month, and the brightness of the dying forest warned the widow that she must decide quickly as to the course she should pursue. Conscious of her own weakness she leaned on Ben as her only support and counsellor.

What shall we do, my child? Winter is coming on, and we have no home.

O, yes, we have, mother. We can go to your old home. I should like to go there very much; and I'm so strong now, I could earn a great deal of money. I think, too, that would be the most likely thing to bring grandfather right. It seems that he would be afraid to see us leave our own house. He might know he could never sleep sound again. His conscience is not easy, for he told me last night he would take five hundred dollars. He sees that every body shuns him, and he would gladly give you back the deed, were it not for shame.

Well, then, let us go from here. But my home is so far away, and I have no relatives there now. We can seek a house near by. I can sell my mother's little house, and we can buy a small spot of land and build a cabin on it. That will do till you are a man.

You will return to this place long before I am a man, mother,—that is, if you will avoid one hard word with grandfather. Do not, I beg you, say one angry word to him. Leave him with the widow's God, mother. He watched over your mother, and so he will over mine. I was a very small boy when you taught me, "A father of the fatherless and a judge of the widow is God in his holy habitation;" and I have never forgotten it.

The boy then set out in search of a piece of land for his mother. A good man in the neighboring town, greatly needing the help of such a boy, offered them the first use of a small house he owned, and to the widow at once removed; leaving the empty house for the oppressor.

This was altogether too quiet an ending to a transaction which had cost him so much anxiety. He had hoped for a storm of passion from the widow, and angry and insolent words from the boy, which he might repeat to excite sympathy for himself. He visited his son's family in their humble home, and upbraided them with disrespect in going so suddenly away. He accused them of thinking him dishonest,—of injuring his reputation by not saying at once that his son put the deed of the farm into his hands. But, through all the interview neither mother nor son smirched their lips; and the unjust man went away, angry, because they were not angry.

But he carried away with him the last words of poor Ben: "We are willing to leave all in God's hands, grandfather. He will show us all his right."

No one would hire the place, because every body thought the widow ought to have it; no one would buy it, as the title of the old man to the deed was more than doubtful, and might some day prove to be false.

The winter wore away, and when sowing-time came, grandfather, looking a shade paler and many pounds lighter, appeared at the widow's door. God had been dealing with him, and he found him unholly in his sight. Clara, he said, the house is still empty; no one will take it. Will you bring the children and come back again? and some time when I feel stronger, I will tell you all about the deed. Here it is. Take good care of it, and don't say much about it; for I'm an old man, Clara, and it's cruel to disgrace my grey hairs.

Neither Ben nor his mother asked for any explanation from the old man. It seemed to be generally understood that he had taken the deed on his son's death, and returned it in respect of his own.

Not many weeks after the widow's return to her home, the old man was laid beside his son, in the rude grave-yard of the young settlement; but his name has lived after him in connection with that cruel deed. Blessed is that once young peace-maker, now instilling lessons of love and purity into the minds of his children's children, as they sit on his knee before the broad fire-place where he himself had learned them.

Superior People.

It is curious how men soothe themselves and avoid coming down, or mitigate the pain of doing so by secretly cherishing the belief that in some one little respect they are different from, and higher than all the rest of their kind. And it is wonderful how such a reflection has power to break one's fall, so to speak. You don't much mind being beaten by a commonplace man in all other respects, if only there be one respect in which you can fondly believe you are superior to everybody else. A very little thing will suffice. A man is taller than anybody else in the town or parish; he has longer hair; he can walk faster; he is the first person who ever crossed the new bridge; he was the earliest in the neighborhood who got the perforated postage stamps; he has the swiftest horse in the district; he has the largest cabbage; he has the oldest watch; or one Smith spells his name as no other Smith was ever known to do.

It is quite wonderful how far it is possible for men to find reason for cherishing in their heart a deep seated belief that in something or other they stand on a higher platform than all the remainder of mankind. Few men live who do not imagine that in some respects they stand alone in the world, or stand first.

A Few Words About Coercion.

Does it not look like coercion when from ten thousand to twenty thousand men are in the field, armed, equipped, and avowing their hostility to the Union? If the insurgent States are not practising coercion, we are ignorant of the meaning of the term. But then the federal government must not repel force with force. Oh, no! It must oppose to coercion of the worst character, bland smiles and homied words. The robber must first be shown the keys; then treated to the best and told to go on his way rejoicing. Otherwise, there might be trouble in the house!

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

BORN TO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

Obituary.

Died suddenly, in this town, on Wednesday morning last, Solomon Willard, Esq., aged 77 years.

The golden bowl of life was broken without a moment's warning from the Angel of Death. We sorrow deeply in common with all who knew him, that so good a man has passed away—notwithstanding he has outstretched the span of three score years and ten allowed to mortals.

Now that we shall see his face—always so radiant with kindness and benevolence—no more, we recall to mind the many bright and sterling virtues that cluster around his character, like the beautiful floral wreath, in such rich profusion.

He loved his fellow-men and constantly aimed to do good to all within his sphere of action; thereby carrying out in daily practice one of the high injunctions of our Divine Master. Highly conscientious in every transaction of life, he was, indeed, the noblest of God's works—an honest man.

No tongue could truthfully liep a word against Mr. Willard. His life was so unclouded, and the priceless virtues of benevolence shone so bright in his every day walks, that he had no enemies. Of all men we ever met with, in the performance of good deeds in a humble and quiet way, he was the most disinterested.

There is not a person living in the West District of Quincy, among his many friends and neighbors, who does not grieve with unfeigned sadness at his departure to the unseen world. The tears of many who have partaken of his benefactions will be shed over his tomb.

For more than a generation past, Mr. Willard has resided, universally beloved and respected, in Quincy. He was a native of Worcester County, in Massachusetts, and his family connections were highly respectable. In early life he came to Boston as a mechanic; and subsequently became an eminent architect of the city.

He was one of the earliest projectors of Bunker Hill Monument, and contributed largely towards its erection. The original models of the Monument are still in his office.

In 1826, with the advice and aid of the late Hon. Thomas H. Perkins and others, he designed and surveyed with his own hands the Quincy Granite Railway, the first ever built in the United States. Indeed, he was the architect of many public buildings, including the Town House of Quincy.

His scientific tastes were of a respectable order, as his library will show; particularly in the science of Geology. But his real usefulness and good works are particularly exemplified in the neighborhood where he so quietly and unobtrusively passed the evening of life.

A friend to public improvements, with but limited means, he liberally contributed to the laying out and building many of the streets and avenues that pervade the westerly part of Quincy. Many of which he built, or now stand partially completed at his own expense and personal labor. He was a great benefactor to the beautiful School House on Copeland Street, that so deservedly bears his name. In 1836, he was instrumental with others, in the development of the main street of Granite Village, from the old Plymouth Road to Brantree; and the town, without his knowledge, unanimously gave it his honored name—may it never be changed.

To Mr. James Hall, a venerated citizen now living of 87 years, aided materially by Mr. Willard, are the citizens of this portion of the Town indebted for the Hall Cemetery, another "Sweet Auburn." Days and weeks he has toiled, without pecuniary reward, to lay out and beautify this lasting resting place of the dead. No longer ago than the past season, he was busily engaged for some time on this consecrated spot, that all might be finished to his mind; and as if it would soon be the repository where his own mortal remains would repose, in the midst of an industrial community, who cherished toward him when living, with one accord, respect and gratitude.

NOMINATIONS. At a Union political meeting held at the Willard Hall, West Quincy, on Thursday evening last, the following persons were nominated for Town Officers to be supported on Monday next:

Town Clerk.—John Chamberlain.
Town Treasurer.—Wm. Abernethy.
Selectmen and Assessors.—Noah Cummings, Ebenezer Adams and William S. Morton.

School Committee.—William B. Duggan and George White.
Constables.—Washington M. French, Albert Hayden, George Savil, Algernon S. Sawtell, Isaac H. Wiley, Henry Curtis and Samuel Ames.

FOURTH OF MARCH. Next Monday the Nation changes its rulers. The process is very simple. The usual course on such occasions, is, for the President elect in company with the President, to leave the National mansion, pass down Pennsylvania Avenue to the east side of the Capitol, where, in presence of the assembled people, the oath of office is administered by the Chief Justice of the United States, gently lifting the robes of authority from the shoulders of Mr. Buchanan and placing them on those of Mr. Lincoln. The ceremony is grand and imposing in its simplicity.

KEEP TO THE RIGHT. The Depot Master has hung out his card, admonishing passengers who wish to take passage for Boston and Way Stations, the propriety, after providing themselves with tickets, to pass over to the room on the opposite wing; this he says is the right platform, for that portion of the travelling community, from which the cars may be taken with much less risk and inconvenience. Remember this.

MELANCHOLY. The quiet of our community was unexpectedly disturbed, on Monday last, by the startling report, that one of our most estimable citizens, Charles A. Cummings, had committed suicide. On further enquiry the sad reality was fully confirmed. The shock to the public feeling, was more intense, on account of the unexceptionable character of the deceased, and of his never having in the remotest degree given any indications, that the commission of so awful a deed, had ever taken possession of his mind. On Saturday, he was about his business as usual—and even on the morning of the day of his death, he was round among the neighbors, as serene and amiable as ever. His family saw nothing to excite their suspicions, that all was not right; and no anxiety was felt for him until late in the afternoon—as he was not at home as customary to the noon day meal.—when a search was instituted, and his lifeless remains discovered suspended from a beam in his barn.

Some fifteen years since, Mr. Cummings taught one of our public schools at the West District; he was a good scholar and a practical teacher; highly beloved by those who sat under his instruction, who always had a kind word for "Master Cummings." Later in life he filled many offices of trust; at the time of his decease, he was Collector for the town, and one of the Board of Engineers of the Fire Department. He did not eat the bread of idleness; no gap in his life was left unimproved; his active mind was ever shaping some new enterprise, which has stamped indelibly his memory upon the times. Mr. C. was in the prime of life and usefulness, and enjoyed the society of a large circle of devoted friends, who mourn his loss. We should not forget in our judgment that we are human, but have charity for others, as we hope for charity ourselves. Pecuniary difficulties, it is thought, was the unhappy cause which led to the rash act.

On Wednesday, the funeral services took place at Christ Church, in presence of a large concourse of sympathizing friends, the Masonic Order, to which he belonged, and members of the Fire Department.

For the Patriot. Concerning the Spirit.

MR. EDITOR:—Your contributor, L. S. A., says that the spirit pervades the whole body to its farthest extremities, and that when a limb is amputated from a person, if that limb is pricked with a pin "he will feel it as sensitive nearly, as if it had never been amputated." He says that is "an undeniable fact," and proves that the spirit premeates the whole body.

It is so, I see no reason why the converse of his proposition may not be true, and that the severed limb will feel an injury which the main body may receive.

Then those French and English soldiers, who lost their limbs in the war of the Crimea, must cause something of a sensation among the dry bones of the distant Russia plains, as they go hobbling about on crutches in their French and English homes. If they fall, how it bumps their distant, long cast-off limbs. If any one pricks them with a pin, what a quivering must be seen on the sands of the Crimea.

An anecdote will illustrate: After Benedict Arnold had joined the British, he asked an American soldier who had recently been taken prisoner by a party of British soldiers, what the Americans would do with him (Arnold) if they should catch him? The American instantly answered: "They would bury the limb which was wounded in your country's service with military honors, and then hang the rest of you as high as Haman."

Suppose it had occurred and Arnold had been caught. We can imagine the solemn and imposing ceremonies of a military funeral, and how the limb would be left reposing in the sacred silence of some noble mausoleum. Then we may imagine the other scene: "The war-drum is muffled, and black is the bier; the drop falls and the body of the traitor, minus one leg, is dangling in the air. Anon, the sacred silence of the mausoleum is broken, and the other leg commences a series of pitiful contortions,

"Keeping time, time, time,
In a sort of runcie rhyme," to the struggling of its fellow from the gallows tree. How we pity that poor, sensitive, harmless, honored limb! What a choking sensation it must experience!

Beware! O invertebrate tobacco chewer! lest your spirit should be condemned in the great hereafter to loaf around groceries and oyster saloons, lest you should be found taking possession of some young and interesting medium and compelling her to chew to satiate your rapacious appetite. How sad a fate will be yours! What an enviable pleasure will be hers!

INO.

We have been shown a document signed by the Mayors in office of the cities of the United States and Canada, certifying to the superior excellence of Dr. Ayer's compound Extract of Sarsaparilla and to the value of all his remedies as articles of great public utility. Such evidence from such high sources bears out triumphantly in the position we have long maintained with regard to Dr. Ayer's Preparations, or more particularly our advertisements of them. No publishers need be more opposed than we are to the promulgation of quackery in any shape, but we know when we begin that his remedies were above any suspicion of deception—that they were about the best it is possible to produce for the cure of disease, and that they have the confidence of all communities where they are known. Not alone because the Mayors of the whole country believe them useful to their people, but because we know from experience that they are so to ours, do we believe we are rendering a substantial service to our readers in making their virtues known to them.—Courier, Princeton, Ky.

Quincy Horse Railroad.

The Committee on Railways, &c., to whom was committed the petition of William S. Morton and others for a Horse Railroad from Quincy to Dorchester, report the following bill, which has been accepted by the General Court.

SECTION 1. William S. Morton, John J. Glover, and Robert B. Leuchars, their associates and successors, are hereby made a corporation, by the name and title of the Quincy Railroad Company, with power to construct, maintain and use a railway or railways, with suitable turnouts, from such point or points in the town of Quincy, upon and over the streets or highways therein, to the line separating said town from the town of Dorchester, as shall, from time to time, be fixed by vote of the selectmen of said town, and assented to in writing by said corporation, and thence upon and over either side of the Neponset Turnpike, so called, with authority to pass over such creeks and streams as their road traverses, by suitable bridges, when needed, and thence upon and over the Neponset Bridge, and such streets and highways in said town of Dorchester as shall, from time to time, be fixed by vote of the selectmen of said town of Dorchester, and assented to in writing by said corporation in writing, so as to connect with the Dorchester Avenue Railroad at Glover's Corner or Field's Corner so called, at such points as may be agreed on in writing by said two railroad companies, and assented to by the selectmen of said last named town: Provided, that all tracks of said Quincy Railroad shall be laid at such distances from the sidewalks in said towns as the selectmen of said towns shall, in their orders fixing the route of said railroad, respectively, determine to be for the public safety and convenience: Provided, further, that before the location and construction of any track in any of said streets or highways, of said towns of Quincy and Dorchester, shall give notice to the abutters thereon fourteen days at least before the hearing, that they may show cause, if any there be, why said tracks shall not be so located and constructed.

SECTION 2. The location of said railroad over said Neponset Bridge, and the manner in which the same shall be built, and the construction of a draw or draws in said bridge, and the mode in which the same shall be tended, managed and opened for the passage of vessels and the navigation of said portion of said bridge on which said railroad is located, and runs, shall be subject to the approval of the county commissioners of the county of Norfolk, while the said bridge continues to be a country road.

SECTION 3. The said Quincy Railroad Company shall have the right, at the points of connection with the said Dorchester Avenue Horse Railroad to enter upon and travel over with their cars and vehicles the tracks of the said Dorchester Avenue Railroad, and any other railroad now connecting therewith in the city of Boston, upon terms to be agreed on in writing by the respective companies interested; and in case of disagreement as to the mode of connection, or the manner, time, or extent of use of said railways respectively, or the compensation to be paid therefor, the same shall be adjusted and determined by three commissioners, to be appointed by the supreme judicial court upon petition of either of the parties interested; and the compensation of all commissioners appointed by said court, shall be paid by the parties in interest, in equal shares.

SECTION 4. Nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent the lawful authorities in said towns or city from taking up any of the streets or highways traversed by said railroad or its cars, for the purpose for which they may now lawfully take up the same.

SECTION 5. Said railroad shall be operated by horse power only, and the selectmen of the said towns and the mayor and aldermen of said city, may at all times make such regulations to the rate of speed and mode of use of the tracks laid or used by said Quincy Railroad within their respective highways and streets as they may deem best for the public safety and convenience; and they shall also respectively have the power at any time after the expiration of one year from the opening of said railway for use upon any street or highway on which the same may be located under this act, to order that the whole or any part thereof shall be discontinued, and thereupon as to such part, the location shall be deemed to be revoked; and the tracks of said railway shall thereupon forthwith be removed in conformity with such order, at the expense of said Quincy Railroad Company.

SECTION 6. Said Quincy Railroad Company is hereby authorized to purchase and hold such real and personal estate within said towns and city as may be needful or convenient for the purposes of its railroad; and to procure a new uniform. The terms will be that adopted by the regiment at a meeting of its officers a few days since—grey with scarlet trimmings. We are glad to see this movement made, as it ensures the existence of a military company among us, and hope that it will receive the hearty countenance and assistance of our fellow citizens. There are young men enough in our town to enable the corps to be the largest and best in the regiment—and a little exertion on the part of the members and friends of the Company, is all that is needed to place it on a most prosperous footing. The events of the past year have shown that emergencies may arise when the civil power will be compelled to rely for support upon the military, and the promptitude with which the citizen Soldiers of our Commonwealth, (our own among them) have within a few weeks responded to a call from the Executive, show that they are to be relied on in times of danger, and are ready to uphold the laws of the land against all who would overturn them. We heartily wish the Hancock Light Guard success in their undertaking, and commend their cause to all who believe in the necessity of a military organization and desire its perpetuation.

SECTION 7. Said Quincy Railroad Company shall maintain and keep in repair such portion of the streets and highways in said towns, and of said Neponset Bridge, and of any other bridge, as shall be used for its track, and shall not encumber any other portion thereof; and shall be liable for any loss or injury that may be sustained by reason of any carelessness, neglect or misconduct of its agents or servants in the construction, management or use of said railway, streets and bridges; and in case any recovery shall be had against either of said towns or said city, or against any corporation, by reason of such carelessness, neglect or misconduct, said Quincy Railroad Company shall be liable to pay to said towns, and city and corporation, respectively, the amount so recovered, and all reasonable cost of defending the suits in which such recovery may be had, provided that said Quincy Railroad Company have due notice from said towns or city, or other corporation, of the pendency of such suits, and due opportunity to take upon themselves the defence thereof, which they are hereby empowered to do.

SECTION 8. Any person who shall wilfully obstruct said company in the use of the track hereby authorized, or the passing of the cars thereon, or shall aid and abet therein, shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the common jail not exceeding three months. If said Quincy Railroad Company or any of its agents or servants wilfully obstruct any street or highway, or the passing of carriages thereon, said company shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

SECTION 9. The towns of Quincy and Dorchester may at any time during the continuance of this charter, and after the expiration of ten years from the opening, for use, of said railroad, purchase of said company all its franchise, rights and property, by paying to said company therefor such sum of money as will reimburse to each person who may then be a stockholder therein, the par value of his stock together with a net profit of ten per cent. per annum from the time of the issue or transfer of the stock to him, deducting the dividends received by such stockholder thereon.

SECTION 10. The capital stock of said Quincy Railroad Company shall not exceed one hundred thousand dollars, to be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each, and no shares shall be issued for a less amount, to be actually paid in on each, than the par value of the shares which shall be first issued.

SECTION 11. Said Quincy Railroad is hereby authorized and empowered to issue bonds in sums not less than one hundred dollars each, for the purpose of constructing and equipping said road, the amount thereof not to exceed the capital stock paid in and to be approved, certified, recorded and secured, in the same way as the Cambridge Horse Railroad bonds heretofore authorized by law.

SECTION 12. Said Quincy Railroad shall be deemed a railroad corporation so far as to make the annual returns to the legislature which are or may be required to be made by law, but shall not be subject to the other provisions of law relative to railroad corporations except as provided in section six.

SECTION 13. The Quincy Railroad Company is hereby empowered to lease or sell its franchise, rights and property, to the said Dorchester Horse Railroad Company or to any other connecting horse railroad company, and in case of such sale the purchasing company shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges, and be subject to all the liabilities of said Quincy Railroad Company in virtue of this charter.

SECTION 14. This act shall take effect from and after its passage.

For the Patriot. Quincy Horse Railroad.

MR. EDITOR:—I was much pleased with the observations of your "Boston Correspondent" last week, on the subject of Horse Railroads. He understands the subject thoroughly, and treats it with his usual ability.

The reasons he urges against Horse Railroad tracks in the middle of highways, are just those which have induced the Quincy Horse Railroad Company to build their track on the side of the highway, if they build one at all. They have availed themselves of the experience of the most competent railroad men round Boston and elsewhere, and have arrived at the conclusion that their contemplated Railroad, built in the middle of the highway, could neither be constructed, managed, or run, with any prospect of advantage or accommodation to the public, or profit to the company.

I wish to state therefore authoritatively, through your paper, that if they are refused a location on the side of the highways—save in the centre of the village—they must abandon the enterprise, at least for the present.

I deem it just to the citizens of Quincy, as well as to this Company, to make this statement public; inasmuch, as a statement was made at the last Town Meeting, to the effect that this Company desired to build their track "in the middle of the highway and nowhere else;" and many have supposed this statement to be correct. But it was made without authority or foundation. As the Quincy Railroad Company never intended to lay any such track, nor do they believe that any sane body of men could be got to invest their money in such an enterprise.

Yours, truly, R. B. LEUCHARS.

For the Patriot. Military.

At a meeting of the Hancock Light Guard at their Armory, on Thursday evening, the following resolutions were taken to procure a new uniform. The terms will be that adopted by the regiment at a meeting of its officers a few days since—grey with scarlet trimmings. We are glad to see this movement made, as it ensures the existence of a military company among us, and hope that it will receive the hearty countenance and assistance of our fellow citizens. There are young men enough in our town to enable the corps to be the largest and best in the regiment—and a little exertion on the part of the members and friends of the Company, is all that is needed to place it on a most prosperous footing. The events of the past year have shown that emergencies may arise when the civil power will be compelled to rely for support upon the military, and the promptitude with which the citizen Soldiers of our Commonwealth, (our own among them) have within a few weeks responded to a call from the Executive, show that they are to be relied on in times of danger, and are ready to uphold the laws of the land against all who would overturn them. We heartily wish the Hancock Light Guard success in their undertaking, and commend their cause to all who believe in the necessity of a military organization and desire its perpetuation.

POLITICAL. The political world is in a remarkable state of calm, notwithstanding war are on the eve of an important election; but if report speaks true, Monday will not pass without its usual excitement. Besides other exciting subjects the principle of rotation in office is to be strictly enforced.

Thirty-five men were killed last year, in duels, in the United States. All the fools are not dead yet, however.

Hon. Lewis Cass is now in the seventieth year of his age.

A single seventy-four gun ship, beside all her cost of construction and equipment, cost in time of peace, while afloat, $200,000 per annum—eight times the salary of the President of the United States.

A Country Town.

How quiet is a country town,
No pavement's constant rattling!
Quiet! done completely brown,
There's little else but tattling.

The faces of the men are brown,
And wear a story telling look—
You'll see them as they're walking down,
Now mind! and read them like a book.

The girls have cheeks of various hues,
From golden white to ruddy;
And moods have they! sometimes the blues,
And in the brownest study.

But oh! 'tis spring, the blooming trees,
Their leafy branches widely spreading,
Are all alive with birds and bees!
And jolly as a wedding.

But lo! a stranger comes to town,
With city clothes, and city airs;
With mighty pomp he's up and down,
Our leading, shady, thoroughfares.

Another theme is on the tip
Of Madame Grundy's tongue!
But, she of course, lets no word slip,
Till all the start'ling tale is sung.

But then with busy lips and ears,
We hear that Mr. . . . is related
To Mr. Sims, or Mr. Sears;
(Yet in confidence, 'tis stated!)

And rich! and oh! such splendid hair!
Such wealth of glossy, gorgeous curls,
And then his p's a millionaire!
And tip-toe are the girls!

Seventy-Six.

What heroes from the woodland sprung,
When, through the fresh-awakened land,
The thrilling cry of freedom rang,
And to the work of warfare strong
The yeoman's iron hand!

Hills flung the cry to hills around,
And ocean's mist replied to mart,
And streams, whose springs were yet unfound,
Pealed far away the starting sound
Into the forest's heart.

Then march the brave from rocky steep,
From mountain river swift and cold,
The borders of the stormy deep,
The vales where gathered waters sleep,
Sent up the strong and bold,—

As if the very earth again
Grew quick with God's creating breath,
And, from the sods of grove and glen,
Rose ranks of lion-hearted men
To battle to the death.

The wife whose babe first smiled that day,
The fair, fond bride of yester eve,
And aged sires and matron gray,
Saw the loved warrior haste away,
And deemed it sin to grieve.

Already had the strife begun;
Already blood, on Concord's plain,
Along the springing grass was seen,
And blood had flown at Lexington,
Like brooks of April rain.

The death stain on the vernal sward
Hallowed to freedom all the shore;
In fragments fell the yoke abhorred—
The footsteps of a foreign lord
Profaned the soil no more.

Jenny.

I'm not the most able in telling
A story in language supreme;
But sometimes I love to be dwelling
With song o'er a fanciful theme.
'Tis not the line by the river,
'Tis not of the birds in the grove,
Nor the bells of the village—forgive her—
She knows not the value of love.

Oh, earth has its beautiful sunbeam,
And so hath my heart, when I see
From the light of her countenance one beam
Bestowed with a smile upon me.
I list to her musical laughter;
'I wish you'd begone now," she says;
But the smile that so quickly comes after
A contrary feeling portrays.

And what, if while toiling, and caring,
We revel in fancies—our own?
'Tis not like the idle one sharing
In gossip that's best left alone.
In solitude single to be;
And laugh at a duty so small;
They are less in the world's estimation,
Who adhere to no duty at all.

I know there is gold in the nation,
I know there is beauty at court,
Yet happiness owes its creation
To means that look little or nought,
No tending how long I may tarry,
In solitude single to be;
But if I have my choice when I marry,
Then Jenny's the maiden for me.

Anecdotes.

A country apothecary, not a little distinguished for his impudence, with the hope of disconcerting a young clergyman, whom he knew to be a man of singular modesty, asked him in the hearing of a large company—
Why the parsons of old lived to such an extreme age?
To which the clergyman replied—
I suppose the parsons took no physic.

An attorney brought an immense bill to a lady, for some business he had done for her. The lady, to whom he had once paid his addresses, murmured at the charges.
Madam, replied the limb of the law, I wanted to convince you that my profession is lucrative, and that I should not have been a bad match.

Sir, said a little blustering man to his religious opponent, to what sect do you think I belong?
Well, I don't exactly know, replied the other; but to judge from appearance, I should say you belong to a class called the insect.

Your honor, said a lawyer to the judge, every man who knows me knows that I am incapable of lending my aid to a mean cause. That's so, said his opponent; the learned gentleman never lends himself to a mean cause; he always gets cash down.

OLD KENTUCKY

BOURBON

"1849 RESERVE"

THE Established popularity of this Choice

OLD BOURBON as a medicinal agent, renders it superior to any other in detail the characteristics which distinguish it from the ordinary grade of Kentucky Whiskies.

Being distilled in 1848, and manufactured expressly for us with great care, it can be relied upon as a strictly pure stimulant, and peculiarly effective for the treatment of Lung Complaints,

Dyspepsia, Derangements of the Stomach, Nervousness, &c.

As a curative agent it has a tendency to recreate and strengthen; while age having contributed its genial charm and enriched it with a delicious flavor and an oily body, it affords a pleasant incentive to the preservation or recovery of health, through the agreeable medium of a well preserved palate.

It is now well known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet to satisfy the most credulous, I will publish the following testimony.

Harrison Sq., Dorchester, Mar. 30, 1859.
Mr. Packard—Sir:—I have given your Regenerator a fair trial and find it all you claim for it. My hair was very gray; it is now restored to perfect color. All the humors are removed from the scalp. In short, I have now a perfect head of hair. I am willing to go before any Jury of the Peace and make oath to the above, if you wish it.

Miscellaneous.

Lincoln's Inaugural Address.

Fellow Citizens of the United States:

In compliance with a custom as old as the Government itself, I appear before you to address you briefly, and to take in your presence the oath prescribed by the Constitution of the United States to be taken by the President before he enters on the execution of the duties of his office.

I do not consider it necessary at present for me to discuss those matters of administration about which there is no special anxiety or excitement.

RIGHTS OF THE SOUTH NOT ENDANGERED.

Apprehension seems to exist among the people of the Southern States that by the accession of a Republican administration their property and their permanent peace and security are to be endangered. There has never been any reasonable cause for such apprehension.

Indeed, the most ample evidence to the contrary has all the while existed and been open to their inspection. It is found in nearly all the published speeches of him who now addresses you. I do but quote from one of those speeches, when I declare that I have no purpose, directly or indirectly, to interfere with the institution of slavery in the States where it exists. I believe I have no lawful right to do so, and I am sworn to uphold the elective mode of doing so with full knowledge that I had made this and many similar declarations and had never recanted them; and more than this, they placed in the platform for my acceptance as a law to myself and to me, the clear and emphatic resolution which I now read:

Resolved, That the maintenance inviolate of the rights of the States, and especially the right of each State to order and control its own domestic institutions according to its own sense of justice, shall be constantly maintained; and that the balance of power on which the perfection and endurance of our political fabric depend, and we denounce the lawless invasion by an armed force of any State or Territory, no matter under what pretext, as the greatest of crimes.

I now reiterate these sentiments, and, in doing so, I only press upon the public attention the most conclusive evidence of which the case is susceptible, that the property, peace and security of no section are to be in anywise endangered by the now incoming administration. Add to this that all the protection which, consistently with the Constitution and the laws, can be given, will be cheerfully given to all States which lawfully demand, for whatever cause, as cheerfully to one section as to another.

THE EXTENSION OF FUGITIVE SLAVES A CONSTITUTIONAL OBLIGATION.

There is much controversy about the delivering up of fugitives from service or labor. The clause in the Constitution is plainly written in the Constitution as any other of its provisions: "No person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall in consequence of any law or regulation thereof be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due."

It is scarcely questioned by any citizen that this provision was intended by those who made it for the reclaiming of what we call fugitive slaves; and the intention of the lawgivers is the law. All members of Congress swear their support to the whole Constitution—to this provision as much as to any other.

To the proposition, then, that slaves whose cases come within the terms of this clause, shall be delivered up, their oaths are unanimous. Now if they would make the effort in good temper, could they not with nearly equal unanimity frame and pass a law by means of which to keep good that unanimous oath?

There is some difference of opinion whether this clause should be enforced by National or by State authority, but surely that difference is not a very material one. If the slave is to be surrendered it can be of but little consequence to him or to others by which authority it is done, and should any one in any case be content that his oath should go unkept on a merely unsubstantial controversy as to how it shall be kept?

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW SHOULD BE HUMANE.

Again, in any law upon this subject, ought not all safeguards of liberty known in civilized and humane jurisprudence to be introduced, so that a free man be not in any case surrendered as a slave? and might it not be well at the same time to provide by law for the enforcement of that clause in the Constitution which guarantees that the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States?

I take the official oath to-day with no mental reservations and with no purpose to construe the Constitution or laws by any hyper-critical rules, and while I do not choose now to specify particular acts of Congress as proper to be enforced, I do suggest that it will be much safer for all, both in official and private stations, to conform to and abide by all those acts which stand unrepealed than to violate any of them, trusting to find impunity in having them held to be unconstitutional.

THE UNION PERPETUAL.

It is seventy-two years since the first inauguration of a President under our national Constitution. During that period fifteen different and greatly distinguished citizens have in succession administered the executive branch of the government. They have conducted it through many perils, and generally with great success. Yet, with all this scope for precedent, I now enter upon the task, for the brief Constitutional term of four years, of the Federal Union, heretofore only menaced, is now formally attempted.

I hold that in contemplation of universal law and of the Constitution, the union of these States is perpetual. Perpetuity is implied, if it is expressed, in the fundamental law of the national governments. It is safe to assert that no government proper ever had a provision in its organic law for its own termination. Continue to execute all the express provisions of our National Constitution, and the Union will endure forever, it being impossible to destroy it except by some unauthorized act of those who administer it, and not provided for in the instrument itself.

Again, if the United States be not a Government proper, but an association of States in the nature of a contract merely, can it be a contract peaceably unmade by less than all the parties who made it? One party to a contract may violate or break it, so to speak, but does it not require all to lawfully rescind it?

Descending from these general principles, we find the proposition that, in legal contemplation, the Union is perpetual, confirmed by the history of the Union itself. The Union is much older than the Constitution. It was formed in fact by the articles of association in 1774. It was matured and continued by the Declaration of Independence in 1776. It was further matured and the faith of all the thirteen States expressly pledged and engaged that it should be perpetual, by the articles of confederation in 1778, and finally in 1787.

One of the declared objects for ordaining and establishing the Constitution was to form a more perfect Union; but if destruction of the States be a lawful purpose, by a part only of the States, the Constitution is not a contract, but a mere paper, having lost the vital element of perpetuity.

SECESSION INCONSTITUTIONARY—THE UNION UNBROKEN—THE LAWS WILL BE ENFORCED.

It follows from these views that no State upon its own mere motion can lawfully get out of the Union—that resolves and ordinances to that effect are legally void, and that acts of violence within the Union are acts against the United States, are insurrectionary or revolutionary, according to circumstances.

I therefore consider that in view of the Constitution and the laws, the Union is unbroken, and to the extent of my ability I shall enforce the Constitution as I understand it. I do not believe it is my duty to enforce upon me, that the laws of the Union be faithfully executed in all the States. Doing this I deem to be only a simple duty on my part, and I shall perform it as far as practicable, unless my rightful masters, the American people, shall by some overt act, or declaration, expressly forbid me to do so.

BLOODSHED UNNECESSARY. I trust this will not be regarded as a menace, but only as the declared purpose of the Union, that it will constitutionally defend and maintain itself. In doing this there needs to be no invasion, no using of force against any one of the States, and no civil war.

THE PORTS TO BE HELD AND THE REVENUE COLLECTED, BUT NO INVASION.

The power conferred to me will be used to hold, occupy and possess the property and places belonging to the government, and collect the duties and imposts; but, beyond what may be necessary for these objects, there will be no invasion, no using of force against any one of the States, and no civil war.

THE FEDERAL OFFICES IN THE DISTURBED STATES.

Where hostility to the United States in any interior Territory shall be so great and so universal as to prevent competent resident citizens from holding the federal offices, there will be no attempt to force obnoxious strangers among the people for that object. While the strict legal right may exist for the government to force the exercise of these offices, the attempt to do so would be so irritating, and so nearly impracticable withal that I deem it better to forego for a time the uses of such offices.

POSTAL FACILITIES TO BE CONTINUED.

The postal system, unless repelled, will continue to be furnished in all parts of the Union so far as possible. The people everywhere shall have that sense of perfect security which is most favorable to calm thought and reflection.

The course here indicated will be followed unless current events and experience shall show a modification or change to be proper, and in every case and exigency my best discretion will be exercised according to circumstances actually existing, and with a view to a peaceful solution of the national trouble and the restoration of fraternal sympathies and affections.

APPEAL FOR THE UNION.

That there are persons in one section or another who seek to destroy the Union at all events, and are glad of any pretext to do it, I will neither affirm nor deny, but if there should be such I need address no word to them. To those, however, who really love the Union, may I not speak? Before entering upon so grave a matter as the destruction of our National fabric, with all its benefits, its memories and its hopes, would it not be well to ascertain precisely why we do it? Will you hazard so desperate a step while there is any possibility that any portion of the ill you fly from is due to honest error? If you can, do the certain ill you fly from greater than all the real ones you fly from? Will you risk the commission of so fearful a mistake?

All profess to be content in the Union if all Constitutional rights can be maintained. Is it true, then, that any right plainly written in the Constitution has been denied? I think not. Happily the human mind is so constituted that no party can reach the audacity of doing this. Think if you can of a single instance in which a plainly written provision of the Constitution has ever been denied.

If by the mere force of numbers a majority should deprive a minority of any clearly written Constitutional right, it might in a moral point of view justify revolution; it certainly would, if such right were a vital one. But such is not the case; all the vital rights of minorities and of individuals are so plainly assured to them by affirmations and negations, guarantees and prohibitions in the Constitution, that controversies never arise concerning them. But no organic law can ever be framed with a provision specifically applicable to every question which may occur in practical administration; no foresight can anticipate, nor any document of reasonable length contain, express provisions for all possible questions.

Shall fugitives from labor be surrendered by National or by State authority? The Constitution does not expressly say. Must Congress protect slavery in the Territories? The Constitution does not expressly say.

From questions of this class spring all our constitutional controversies, and we divide upon them into majorities and minorities. If the minority will not acquiesce, the majority must, or the government must cease. Plainly the central idea of secession is the essence of anarchy.

SECESSION A TWO-EDGED SWORD.

If a minority in such a case will secede, rather than acquiesce, they make a precedent which in turn will divide and ruin them, for a minority of their own will secede from them until a majority refuse to be controlled by such minority.

For instance, may not any portion of a new confederacy a year or two hence arbitrarily secede again, precisely as a portion of the present Union now claims to secede from it? All who cherish disunion sentiments are now being educated to the exact temper of doing this. Is there such perfect identity of interests among the States to compose a new Union as to produce harmony only, and prevent renewed secession? Plainly the central idea of secession is the essence of anarchy.

A majority held in restraint by Constitutional checks and limitations, and always changing easily with the deliberate changes of popular opinion and sentiment, is the only true sovereign of a free people. Whoever rejects it soverely flies to anarchy or to despotism. Anarchy is impossible. The rule of a minority, as a permanent arrangement, is wholly inadmissible; so that, rejecting the majority principle, anarchy or despotism in some form is all that is left.

I do not forget the position assumed by some, that constitutional questions are to be decided by the Supreme Court, and do not deny that such decisions must be binding on any case upon the parties to a suit, as to the object of that suit; while they are also entitled to very high respect and consideration in all parallel cases by other departments of the government. And while it is obviously possible that such a decision may be erroneous in any given case, still the evil effect following it, being limited to that particular case, with the chance that it may become a precedent for other cases, is better than the evil of the evils of a different practice.

At the same time, the candid citizen must confess that if the policy of the government upon vital questions affecting the whole people is to be irrevocably fixed by the decisions of the Supreme Court, the instant they are made in ordinary litigation between parties in personal actions, the people will have ceased to be their own rulers, having to that extent practically resigned their government into the hands of that eminent tribunal. Nor is there in this view any assault upon the Court or the judges; it is simply an assertion of the plain truth, that if the duty from which they may not shrink, to decide cases properly brought before them, and it is no fault of theirs if others seek to turn their decisions into political purposes.

THE REAL DISPUTE.

One section of our country believes slavery is right and ought to be extended, while the other believes it is wrong, and ought not to be extended. This is the only substantial dispute. The Fugitive Slave clause of the Constitution and the law for the suppression of the foreign slave trade, are each as well enforced, perhaps, as any law can ever be in a country where the moral sense of the people imperfectly supports the law itself. The great body of the people abide by the dry, legal obligation in both cases, and a few break over in each. This, I think, cannot be perfectly cured, and it is a mistake to complain that the law is not enforced. The sections then before the foreign slave trade, now imperfectly suppressed, would be ultimately revived without restriction in one section, while fugitive slaves, now only partially surrendered, would not be surrendered at all by the other.

SEPARATION IMPOSSIBLE.

Physically speaking, we cannot separate; we cannot remove our respective sections from each other, nor build an impassable wall between them. A husband and wife may be divorced and go out of the presence and beyond the reach of each other, but the different parts of our country cannot do this; they cannot but remain face to face, and intercourse—either amicable or hostile—relations—must continue between them.

Is it possible, then, to make that intercourse more advantageous or more satisfactory after separation than before? Can aliens make treaties easier than friends can make laws? Is separation more faithful to the moral sense of justice than no separation at all? Between aliens there is no law, can any friends? Suppose you go to war, you cannot fight always; and when, after much loss on both sides, and no gain on either, you cease fighting, the identical questions as to terms of intercourse are again upon you.

AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION.

This country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing Government they can exercise their constitutional right of amending or their revolutionary right to dismember or overthrow it. I cannot be ignorant of the fact that many worthy and patriotic citizens are desirous of having the National Constitution amended.

While I make no recommendation of amendment, I fully recognize the authority of the people over the whole subject, to be exercised in either of the modes prescribed in the instrument itself. And I should, under existing circumstances, favor rather than oppose a fair opportunity being afforded the people to act upon it. I will venture to add that to me the Convention mode seems preferable, in that it allows amendments to originate with the people themselves, instead of originating by others not especially chosen for the purpose, and which might not be precisely such as they wish to either accept or refuse.

I understand a proposed amendment to the Constitution, which amendment I have not seen, has passed Congress, to the effect that the Federal Government shall never interfere with the domestic the oil is pumped up by steam power. Of all the wells that have been sunk at Tidonto, Titusville and Oil Creek, three out of five have produced oil. One that will produce five barrels a day is a good paying well. The excitement is as great at Tidonto as it was when gold was found in California. The little town is now crowded with people. Two years ago there were not over twenty houses there. One old man who has lived there some time, owned a farm on the banks of the Allegheny, from which he obtained but a scanty subsistence, and which was worth but little before oil was found, now leases it and receives a portion of oil for his rent, by which he realizes about one thousand dollars a day.

A company has been formed in Ridgeway, and next week will begin to bore for oil, and if it be found, there will be a mighty rush in this direction. A Pennsylvania Geologist says that there is oil on the Clarion River any where at the depth of from four to six hundred feet.

While on my excursion to the oil regions, I never heard one word said about politics. They take no interest in disunion, secession, corn-dodgers, Lincoln, Buchanan, "Seventeen," "conciliation," compromises or any thing else, so long as they can "strike it."

Yours truly, G. W. M.

ELECTION CAKE. We were made the recipient one day this week, of a nice sheet of March meeting cake, "smoking hot" was very good, and our children gave evidence of the last fact by the way it disappeared.

The kind donors will please receive our thanks, and we hope that their labors may meet with abundant success.

UNION MEETING IN BRAINTREE. There was a large meeting of the residents of Braintree and adjacent towns, at the Town Hall, on Friday evening of last week, to express their wish for the perpetuity of the Union by compromise and to endorse the stand taken by Hon. Charles F. Adams, Representative in Congress. Hon. J. H. D. Blake of Braintree presided. Vice Presidents were selected from Braintree, Randolph, Weymouth, and from this town Messrs. Jeffrey R. Brackett, Francis Williams, Jonathan Jameson, George White, James A. Stetson, and Peter Butler.

George Cahill, of this town, was one of the Secretaries. Speeches were made by the President, G. H. Gordon, Edward Avery, Esq., Hon. Leverett Saltonstall and Hon. Caleb Stetson. A series of resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting were unanimously adopted.

Farming in Quincy.

The "Transactions of the Norfolk Agricultural Society" contain the annexed extract which is made from the Report of the Supervisory Committee:

"Hon. Charles Francis Adams, of Quincy, is one of the largest landholders, owning in various farms in this town, about one thousand acres. His residence is that which was his father's and grandfather's—John Quincy Adams and John Adams, former Presidents of the United States. The birth-place of the latter distinguished gentleman, we shall have occasion to mention as we proceed with our remarks. The Committee were gratified to see many fine and some rare species of trees, which were planted by the ancestors of the present proprietor, and not less gratified at the sight of others, which under his own direction, have added beauty and interest to the place. Several acres of land lying on each side of a fine stream of water, have within a few years been converted from an unsightly waste to a beautiful meadow, producing large crops of good hay."

"But Mr. Adams's principal farming operations are at Mount Wollaston, under the superintendence of his son. The farm consists of about four hundred acres. It is delightfully situated in regard to the view from it of Boston harbor with its numerous islands, and the surrounding country. It comprises the celebrated eminence on which Morton, that 'pestiferous fellow' to the Puritan settlers, established himself. Standing on the top of the 'Merry Mount,' and casting our eyes over the picturesque scene of land and water, we could but admire the taste which led that gay adventurer to select this spot as his residence."

"The soil of the farm is mostly warm, and readily produces fine crops of Indian corn and rye, and in moist seasons, heavy crops of clover and grass. At the time of our visit, a second crop of clover was being cut from a field of twenty acres. Several of the Committee expressed the opinion that they had never seen a better second crop of clover—the yield being estimated at a ton to the acre. The first crop had been much heavier."

"The live stock of the farm consists of about fifty head, most of which are cows, the bulk from them being sent to Boston. The cows have generally been selected from the common stock of the country, but a few Ayrshires have lately been kept, the products from which have been such as to induce Mr. Adams to try the breed more extensively. He purchased in 1859, the Ayrshire bull 'Treason,' imported the previous year by the Massachusetts Society for promoting Agriculture, and is rearing several heifers, the progeny of this bull from selected cows of the herd."

"The barns on the farm are commodious and convenient. The stock is not kept at the barns, except in the winter season, being pastured in summer. Much of the fodder is cut for the stock—a two-horse endless chain power, by which threshing and other work may be performed, operating the cutter."

"In another part of the town, near Braintree, the Committee called at another of Mr. Adams's farms—one on which stands the ancient mansion (ancient for our country) in which the two Presidents, John and John Quincy Adams, were born. Its style of architecture by no means agrees with the fashion of this generation, but it is still in good condition, and under the management of a neat New England housewife, its interior presents an appearance of comfort which may often be sought in vain in more modern and pretentious dwellings."

"The farm, consisting of about two hundred acres, has been leased for several years to Mr. Charles A. Spear, whose management presents such an example of the profits of farming as is seldom seen in this country. He pays a rent which is considered equal to a fair interest on the value of the farm—not of course, what some of it might be worth for house-lots—and makes for himself a satisfactory profit—thus making tenant farming profitable to both landlord and tenant. By the improvement of some portions of the farm and greatly increasing the growth of grass, he has been enabled to more than double the number of cattle kept. The improvements have been expensive, but have still been made to pay. On some boggy and wet lands, which were formerly actually worthless, so far as regards the production of a crop, he has expended one hundred dollars per acre in drainage and covering with earth—mostly gravel—yet it has for five years paid the interest of more than two hundred dollars an acre. It has produced an average of more than three tons (at two cuttings) of good hay to the acre each season. The produce of the farm is converted chiefly into milk."

DEMOCRACY. At a meeting of the Democrats of this town, held in the Lyceum Room on Saturday last, the following gentlemen were chosen a Democratic Town Committee for the year ensuing, viz:

Wm. B. Dugan, Jonathan Jameson, Abner B. Packard, Abram M. Alphonse, Arthur P. Hayden, Henry G. Wildman, Edmund B. Taylor, Amos A. Mears, Richard Newcomb, Patrick McDonnell, John Chamberlain, and John A. Green.

DEPUTY SHERIFF. Our readers will be pleased to learn that our townsman, Washington M. French, has received and accepted the appointment of Deputy Sheriff, for Norfolk County. We congratulate Sheriff Thomas on the acquisition to his corps of deputies, of so faithful and efficient an officer. Mr. French has held the office of Constable for the past six years, and the heavy vote which he received for re-election, on Monday last, is most conclusive evidence of the high estimation in which his services are held by his constituents.

ROBBERY. The stable of John J. Glover, in the north part of this town, was forcibly entered last Monday night, and robbed of some harnesses, robes, &c. The same stable was robbed on the fifth of November last, and one of the same harnesses was then stolen.

Interesting Obsequies.

On Friday, the 1st inst., the mortal remains of Solomon Willard, Esq., were committed to the tomb. As an evidence of the universal respect cherished towards this good man, all work was suspended on the Quarries; the places of business in the neighborhood were closed and their doors craped. The Willard School House was draped in mourning—the Engine House was appropriately dressed and its bell chimed a solemn requiem as the procession, estimated to have been composed of a thousand persons, passed by.

Early in the afternoon the citizens of the West District and vicinity gathered in large numbers at and near the house of Mr. Samuel Eli, the late residence of the deceased; notwithstanding the weather was unpropitious and the traveling quite uncomfortable.

The funeral services were performed with solemnity and appropriateness by the Rev. Mr. Wells, pastor of the Unitarian Church. A procession was then arranged under the direction of Frederick A. Trask, Esq., Chief Marshal, assisted by nine aids with their badges of mourning. The Quincy Brass Band, who kindly volunteered their services, headed the funeral cortege, chanting with sweetness and pathos solemn dirges. Then followed the hearse with pall-bearers selected among his near neighbors and friends. The children of all departments in the Willard School acted followed, under the direction of George H. Locke, Esq., the School Committee, aided by the teachers.

We believe the only relative present was a brother of Mr. Willard, who strongly resembled him. The services of the Quincy Brass Band added much interest to the occasion and were exceedingly well performed.

The procession, supposed to be about one-third of a mile in length, moved through Willard, Copeland and Cemetery streets, to the burying ground, where the body was deposited in the tomb of his long cherished friend, Mr. James Hall. The citizens had an opportunity to look for the last time upon his remains. The venerable countenance, sleeping in death, always of an intellectual cast, was serene and placid, as if he must have changed mortality for immortality without a moment's pang of suffering.

The absorbing theme of conversation during the afternoon was upon the many virtues of the deceased; and at no previous funeral ceremony, have we ever witnessed more sincere tears shed, springing from the hearts' fountains of a host of long tried and devoted friends. Truly a worthy man has fallen full of years in Israel—leaving behind him to endure forever a good name, which is better than great riches. He merits a mausoleum to his memory, by the voluntary contribution of thousands.

NARROW ESCAPE. At South Braintree, thirty-four guns were fired on the 4th of March, in honor of President Lincoln's inauguration. An extra charge was used for the last round, which not only made a tremendous noise but split the cannon in pieces. Happily no one was injured. A young man by the name of Mr. Simons, who had taken no interest in the proceedings and who was standing at a considerable distance, was astonished to have a piece of ragged iron weighing three pounds just graze his head, and bury itself in the ground near him.

ANNUAL FAST. His Excellency Gov. Andrew, with the advice and consent of his Council, has appointed Thursday, April 4th, as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer.

PUBLIC BENEFACTORS. We think our readers will agree with us that the popular Wine Importers, Messrs. A. M. Bininger & Co., No. 19 Broad street, New York, have inaugurated a new era throughout the East, in the introduction of their pure and wholesome bottled liquors into the hands of our druggists and town agents.

This old established and opulent house, consider that good policy as well as humanity interest them in selling only the best and purest goods; and the general appreciation and success which has rewarded their efforts in the large sales of their choice liquors in this section, is a compliment both to themselves and the discriminative taste of those that require pure stimulus for medical purposes. We notice in one of our exchanges—the Providence (R. I.) Journal—the following truthful allusion to this respectable firm:

"BININGER'S LIQUORS. There is no business in which the buyer is compelled to rely more blindly upon the good faith and honor of the seller, than in the liquor trade. Few persons are competent judges of the quality and purity of liquors, and modern ingenuity has contrived adulterations which cannot be easily detected by the taste, and which may yet prove very hurtful."

"The house of A. M. Bininger & Co., of No. 19 Broad street, New York, has been established for eighty years. They have built up a character which has secured the confidence of the public in a remarkable degree, till their reputation has come to be the part of their capital which they would least of all trifle with. There is no doubt that their articles are just what they profess to be, and full reliance can be placed upon their representations. The New York Commercial Advertiser, which our readers know is one of the most careful of newspapers, says:—

"The name of A. M. Bininger & Co., No. 19 Broad street, is a guarantee of the exact and literal truth of whatever they represent."

THE PRESIDENT'S INAUGURAL AND HIS CABINET. We have placed on first page of to-day's paper, the important Inaugural Address of President Lincoln, in order that our readers may form their opinions of its political tendencies and Union sentiments.

Secretary of State—WILLIAM H. SEWARD of New York.

Secretary of the Treasury—SALMON P. CHASE of Ohio.

Secretary of War—SIMON CAMERON of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of Navy—GIDEON WELLES of Connecticut.

Postmaster General—MONTGOMERY BLAIR of Maryland.

Secretary of the Interior—CALEB B. SMITH of Indiana.

Attorney General—EDWARD BATES of Missouri.

THE ACTION OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE. The Peace Congress adjourned on Wednesday of last week, after adopting the Guthrie propositions as amended by Mr. Franklin of Pennsylvania. They establish the line of thirty-six degrees and thirty minutes, with prohibition north of it; and the present status of slavery south of it; intervention by Congress in the territorial legislatures to be prohibited, and states to be formed and admitted with or without slavery; the federal courts to have cognizance of the rights of slaveholders taking their slaves into such territory. This applies only to present territory, and all future acquisitions except by discovery or for national purposes, are to be made only by the concurrence of two-thirds of the senators from the free and the slave states; with other provisions against the abolition of slavery in the states, the revival of the foreign slave trade and for the rendition of fugitives.

For the Patriot.
Query.

If one leaps from the steeple of the Stone Temple to the ground, is the converse true, that he can leap back? If one experiences pain from an injury inflicted on the leg soon after its amputation, does it follow that the leg will experience pain from an injury inflicted on the main body? where is the centre of attraction?

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Pictures.

BY LINDA LINDAN.

Come and see these lovely pictures
All so beautiful and bright!
Quickly come, for they will vanish
With the coming warmth and light.

See this landscape; towering mountains,
Crowned with tall and stately pines;
In the valley stands a cottage,
Covered o'er with creeping vines.

Near it winds a rippling brooklet,
Where the sparkling waters play—
See! they dash down yonder mountain;
Foaming cascades, white with spray!

Rolling onward, these bright waters
Many a willow's root do love;
While the graceful, drooping branches
Bend to kiss the limpid wave.

Here, the ferns are thickly growing,
Near a calm and placid lake
While across the sleeping waters,
Dying sounds the silence break.

See the deer before them fleeing
While the horses follow near;
And our hearts throb with pity,
For the hunted, frightened deer!

Here's a picture of the heavens,
Where the constellations bright,
With the lesser stars of even,
Cluster round the queen of night.

'Neath them is a village, lying Calm and peaceful as the night,
While o'er all below seems falling
Their own soft and mellow light.

With these brilliant, glowing pictures,
Works of art can't be compared;
And the Master hand that wrought them,
Shedeth beauty everywhere.

But the pencilings that charm us,
And surprise us far the most,
Are the strange ones sketched in darkness,
By the magic power of Frost!

The World for Sale.

[From an old Manuscript.]

The world for sale! Hang out the sign;
Call every traveller here to me;
Who'll buy this brave estate of mine,
And set my weary spirit free?

It's going!—yes, I mean to fling
The bubble from my soul away;
I'll sell it whatso'er it bring,
The world at auction here to-day.

It is a glorious thing to me,
Ah, it has cheered me so sore;
It is not what it seems to be,
For sale! it shall be mine no more.

Come turn it o'er and view it well,
I would not have you purchase dear;
It's going—good!—I must sell
Who bids will buy the splendid treat!

Here's Wealth, in glittering heaps of Gold,
Who bids, but let me tell you fair,
A base lot was never sold:
Who'll buy the heavy loads of Care?

And here spread out in broad domain
A goodly landscape all may trace;
Hall, cottage, tree, field, hill and plain,
Who'll buy himself a burial place?

Here's Love—the dreamy potent spell,
That beauty flings around the heart;
I know its power, alas! too well,
It's going—Love and I must part.

Must part? what can I more with love,
Allover the merchant's reign;
Who'll buy the pleasure-dying dove?
A breath of bliss, a storm of pain.

And friendship—the rarest gain of earth,
Who'er hath found the giver his;
Faint, false, fickle, and in little worth,
Who bids for friendship as it is?

'Tis going—good!—hear the call,
Once, twice, thrice, it's a very low,
'Twas once my hope, my stay, my all,
But now the broken staff must go.

Fame!—hold the brilliant meteor high,
Ye millions, now's the time to buy;
How dazzling every gilded name,
How much for fame, how much for fame!

Hear how it thunders! would you stand
On high Olympus, far renowned?
Now purchase, and a world command!
And then be with its crazy crowd!

Sweet star of hope! with ray to shine
In every sad foreboding breast,
Save this depending one of mine—
Who bids for man's last friend and best.

Now ever may unite as one,
Ambition, Fashion, Show and Pride,
I part from all forever now;
Grief in an overwhelming tide.

Has taught my haughty heart to bow.
By Death's stern shaft of all bereft,
I weep, yet humbly kiss the rod,
The best of all I still have left.

My faith, my Bible, and my God.

Anecdotes.

A sailor, a giant of known bravery, was in a boat at the siege at Copenhagen, kept down his head while a shot was flying over the boat.

For shame! hold up your head, thundered the officer at the stern.

I will, sir, when there's room for it, was the laughing response.

I do wish I could be cured of lying in bed so late in the morning, said a lazy husband, lounging upon his pillow.

Well, I will try the water cure, said his wife, pouring a bucket full on him.

Friend, the Bible tell thee to swear not at all.

Oh, well, I don't swear at all; I only swear at those who I am mad at.

AYER'S

CATHARTIC

PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the result of serious illness. Some fit of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease.

A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. Then, if not relieved, react upon the family, and the succeeding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, the system is in a state of diseased action, and the natural action of the system, and with it the innocent feeling of health cease. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deeper-seated diseases. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.
DR. AYER: Your Pills are the purgative of all that is great in medicine. They are so gentle, and so free from all morbid action upon the bowels, and yet so effective in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Prolonged Stomach.
DEAR DR. AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say that I have cured a great many. I place great dependence on an effective cathartic, and your Pills are the best I have used. I believe in it, and I do that your Pills afford us the best we have. I of course value them highly.

Freemont, Pa., Dec. 1, 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose of one of your Pills. It seems to arise from the first stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect,

other "deities to do him a pleasur," they would have sent them also. The worthy bailiffs could find no more savory present in all the fish markets of Yarmouth.

At the marriage of Henry V., the guests were treated with "roasted perpes," a dish fashionable in the fifteenth century. We find it again in the first course at the coronation of Henry VII. The king was probably fond of this dish, for it was served up at his table on the feast-day of St. George, and my lord cardinal courted his Majesty's favor by sending a fine porpoise to the palace. The cooks not only roasted and boiled it, but made it into pies and pastries; and a learned "Maister Coke" gives a receipt for a delicious "pudding of porpesse," whilst another tells how to serve it up in fernery; and the wheat was to be seethed in milk, in which finely chopped almonds had been boiled to thicken it; the porpoise was to be dished up smothered in this delicate sauce, which was also colored with saffron.

A poet in 1452 gives directions how to carve "salte porpesse and seale." In the "Boke of Kervyn" mustard is recommended as the best sauce for porpoise, which was to be carved after the manner of venison; and the proper term to employ in asking the carver to help the guests was to bid him "undertraunce that porpus."

This coarse animal was esteemed as food until late in the sixteenth century; it was often on the table of Henry VIII.; and Wesley, Somerset, and other lords of the Star Chamber, having in 1509 a snug little official dinner together, feasted sumptuously on a porpoise, which cost eight shillings. Even Queen Elizabeth, who was rather choice in her appetite, had porpoise among her Friday diet; and it was sold as food in the market of Newcastle as late as 1575, from which time it appears to have fallen into disrepute. —"Our English Homes."

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March 16th, 1861.

THE STORM on Saturday last swept over our village in a way that seemed as if all the elements of secession had been concentrated into a focus and let loose on our devoted heads. The wind was strong at the south-west, blowing a perfect gale. In its course, sheds were lifted from their foundations and turned over like cakes on a griddle; trees were uprooted, and signs torn from their fastenings, much to the annoyance and inconvenience of their owners, who were not prepared to strike their colors in so despotical and unceremonious a manner. A venerable elm, said to be near two hundred years old, in the yard of Charles E. Miller, bowed its head to the storm. In other times, before Hancock and Washington streets were opened, and when the Boston road wound its way across the Miller farm, the village store flourished beneath its branches, not like our modern ones—but in the primitive style of other days; where chalk and cheese, pig-tail-tobacco, Groceries of all kinds, Dry Goods, etc. were usually kept, and a welcome tap-room, always open for the visitor, before or after purchases, to pledge his friendship in an ovation to Bacchus, without the fear of being poisoned or violating a puritanical law. On Elm street, also, an ornamental tree on the premises of Miss Adams' was broken off at the trunk and fell upon the dwelling, but without doing any serious injury.

A HOUSE OF MOURNING. Our neighbor, Col. Abner B. Packard, has within a few days been sorely afflicted with domestic trials. Death, the respecter of no person, has entered his family, and removed from its midst, two most interesting children—both daughters, one aged three and the other six years. His eldest child, a promising boy, nine years old, and an infant, are both down with the same complaint—Scarletina—in its most malignant form.—May a kind Providence in its mercy, spare them.

MARCH is a blustering month; blowing first hot then cold—putting one's teeth on edge; sometimes with mild breezes from the South—and anon with frozen breath from the North. Thursday we experienced one of these changes. It commenced snowing in the morning, and continued moderately throughout the day and up to Friday noon, making our streets musical again with the chiming of the merry sleigh bells, admonishing us that winter was not yet over.

They consist of modern styles, rich and gorgeous colors, and fine qualities. The imperfections are scarcely perceptible, not injuring the appearance or durability of the goods. ## Boston Correspondence

BOSTON, MARCH 14, 1861.

Spring business does not open with much encouragement; but it is not too late in the day yet. April will probably be more genial for trade and enterprise, if money continues as plenty as it now is. A glance at State street shows, that for the first time since last October, the banks in Boston now hold in their strong vaults over five million of specie. This will keep them exceeding easy so far as coin is concerned. But it is hard work to obtain good, negotiable paper, there being absolutely no demand for money.

The week has begun here and in New York with a buoyant stock market, more especially in Federal securities, in some measure influenced by the intention of evacuating Fort Sumter. With this repletion of money, the industrious classes will in the end be benefited. And the thousands of worthy mechanics out of employ, and down to the heart in spirits, should keep up good hearts, as a general demand for employment must gradually follow a healthy and easy condition of the financial circles.

The agricultural community will soon have enough to do by farming operations; and it is certainly good policy, for every man, whatever his calling may be, and however small his patch of land is, outside of the city, to plant his grounds to the utmost capacity. A gentleman of Milton informs us that from one acre and thirty-four rods of land near his house, he first obtained ninety-nine bushels of good corn, and he took the second premium at Dedham. By a rotation of crops, he next obtained rye and straw worth a hundred dollars, and the last year gathered some four tons of English hay from his fertile lot. He is not a farmer. Every mechanic, having a garden lot will find planting a sure remuneration for labor.

The lecture season here is about closed, and the places of public amusement, with the exception of the Boston Museum, are not largely patronized.

The visit soon of Senator Crittenden and family to Boston, will make quite a sensation. His reception will be very enthusiastic, and his noble efforts to save the Union, are worthy of all praise.

Matters at the State House are progressing in such manner as leads to the belief that the Legislature will rise early in April. Debates now exist relative to the passage of a bill for the extension of the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad to Newport; the outside pressure against the project is very strong. The extension however is only the work of time. The Bill concerning the Habeas Corpus and Personal Liberty has passed the House by the decisive vote of 114 yeas to 63 nays, showing the relative strength of conservatism and radicalism.

Rumors are afloat, but wanting in confirmation of the intended evacuation of Fort Sumter by the present administration. This step, if taken, would cause a wide feeling of regret and disappointment among the adherents of President Lincoln, and may lead to a serious rupture in the Republican party. All opinion should be suspended until we get more light on the subject. In justification of this step, it is argued by the Republican newspapers, that the problem of keeping the Fort is a difficult one. That Major Anderson is but poorly supplied with provisions and men. That Fort Sumter is in a state of siege—that unless reinforced or supplied, the forces there will soon become exhausted. Surely the crisis seems to be approaching, nearer than was anticipated.

For the Patriot
Surrender of Fort Sumter.

It is said the Cabinet at Washington are divided in their opinion in regard to the policy of this measure. The more conservative portion are for its adoption, while the radicals go for extreme measures. It makes no difference which horn of the dilemma they may take—in either event they will find themselves in a tight fix. If they surrender the Fort, it will cause a rupture in the party, if they attempt to reinforce it, blood must flow, a civil war will follow, and they will be swept from the face of the land. Never did an administration come into power so weak and paralyzed; no army or navy to support it—six-eighths of the people in hostile opposition to it, and the intelligence, patriotism and moral worth of the country determined to leave it to its own fate. They have cown to the wind, they must now reap the whirlwind. They are a proscribed race. Washington drew a black line round them, and warned us to beware of geographical parties. Six States have already left the Union, and ere a twelve month rolls round, the probability is, that a Southern Confederacy will be established, embracing a majority of the States. Nothing can avert this calamity, but for the people to take the matter in hand—go over the election again, and place at the head of the Government, one that will harmonize and draw together once more all sections of the country.

An English paper says, that in punishing the eyeholes of needles by hand, children, who are the operators, acquire such a dexterity as to be able to punch a human hand and thread it with silver for the amusement of visitors.

Farming in Quincy.

The "Transactions of the Norfolk Agricultural Society," contain the annexed extract, which is made from the Report of the Supervisory Committee:—

"The farm of Jacob F. Eaton, Quincy, consists of forty acres, all of which, except an acre and a half, is adapted to tillage. It is a milk farm, and the number of cows and other stock kept, is unusually large in proportion to the extent of land—being twenty-nine head of cattle and eight horses. The farm has produced all the fodder required for wintering this stock, with the addition of forty dollars worth of grass bought and the salt grass of ten acres of marsh. Besides this, it has afforded summer forage sufficient to half support this large stock. The cattle are pastured on a tract that only yields about half grass enough for their support, and they are therefore fed at night in the barn, with green corn.

"For winter fodder Mr. Eaton relies much on barley, cut in the milk and dried. The barley hay is cut through a cutting machine, and cotton seed cake meal is mixed with it at the rate of two quarts per cow, morning and evening. The cows get one foddering of salt hay and one of upland hay, uncut, each day. This is found to be a good mode of feeding. The cotton-seed meal has been used for several months, and Mr. Eaton is well pleased with it. The cattle were in excellent health and condition, in December, when our notes were taken. He formerly fed with brewers' grains to much extent, paying ten cents a bushel for them, which he thought cheap; but latterly, by a change in the brewers' process—the grains being cut to pieces—the nutriment is nearly all taken out, and though but eight cents a bushel is the price, Mr. Eaton thinks them entirely too dear at that.

"During the last season, Mr. Eaton has kept one hundred and thirty-five hogs, which are fed on the swill collected by the City of Boston. An important object in the keeping of these hogs, is the increase of manure, to be used in increasing the products of the farm. He top dresses grass land with ten to fifteen cart loads of manure to the acre, and for extra crops manures much heavier—sometimes, as for roots, and Indian corn, as high as forty loads to the acre. The root crop is chiefly carrots, which are fed mostly to horses, at the rate of six or seven quarts to each horse per day.

"We have said that an acre and a half of Mr. Eaton's farm is not subject to tillage. It is devoted to a more profitable purpose, as it produces three good crops annually—two in summer and one in winter—the latter, probably, the most profitable. The two summer crops are hay, and the winter crop is ice. In answer to our inquiry as to the effect of winter fowage on the hay crop, Mr. Eaton stated that the crop had rather increased in quantity, and that the quality was not deteriorated. It is not only the high manuring of some of the surrounding land may have had an influence in these results. We should add, that Mr. Eaton bought this farm eight years ago, giving three hundred dollars an acre for some of it, and that it did not then produce hay enough to keep ten cows.

"The farm of J. W. Robertson, Quincy, adjoining that of Mr. Eaton, before noticed.—The homestead consists of about seven acres. He keeps about forty head of cattle—all cows, except one or sometimes two yoke of oxen—and seven horses. The main object is milk. He has one hundred and forty hogs, which are fed on Boston swill. We should state that most of the hogs kept by Mr. Robertson and Mr. Eaton have been bought at Brighton markets, but Mr. Robertson is making the experiment of rearing some. His mode of feeding stock is similar to that followed by Mr. Eaton, except that he uses Indian corn meal instead of cotton-seed. His premises, like those of his neighbor, Mr. Eaton, present an attractive appearance in regard to the character and good condition of the buildings, fences, and the general neatness observed in all parts."

MILTON. At the annual meeting, on Monday last week, the following gentlemen were elected town officers:—
Selectmen and Assessors.—Samuel Cook, Timothy Tucker, George K. Gannett.
Town Clerk and Town Treasurer.—Jason Reed.

School Committee.—Horace Chapin, Joseph R. Webster.
Constables.—Samuel Everett, George W. Tarbox, James L. Vialle, Charles Bradice.

BRAINTREE. The old board of town officers were generally re-elected, at the annual March Meeting, a list of which is annexed:—
Selectmen, Assessors, and Overseers of the Poor.—David H. Bates, N. H. Hunt and Phillips Curtis.

Town Clerk.—Nash Torrey.
Treasurer.—Jonathan French.
School Committee.—Asa French.
Constables.—Joseph R. Frazier, William F. Locke, N. M. Hobart.

WAR! WAR!! Friend Packard we perceive has issued his war bulletin for the spring campaign. The compromises he submits as a peace-offering to the community are certainly very flattering, and must, we think, receive the support of every friend of the Union. The reinforcements promised, and hourly expected, will enable him, he says, to carry on the siege against all combined opposition,—and that no point will be surrendered in his endeavors to conciliate the public, so long as he has a single shot left in the locker.

President Lincoln's Cabinet.

The following brief sketches of the members of the new Cabinet may be of interest:—

WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Secretary of State, is a native of New York, born in 1801, and is therefore sixty years old. He graduated at Union College in 1820; was elected to the New York Senate in 1830; was chosen Governor of New York in 1838; resumed his profession, the practice of the law, in 1843. In 1849 he entered the United States Senate, where he has since continued.

SALMON P. CHASE, Secretary of the Treasury, is a native of New Hampshire, born in 1808, and is therefore fifty-three years old.—He completed his education at Dartmouth College, and studied law with the celebrated William Wirt of Virginia. He was generally identified with the Democratic party, although he voted for Harrison in 1840, and subsequently became a Free Soiler. He was a United States Senator from 1849 to 1855. In the latter year he was elected Governor of Ohio, and re-elected in 1857. He was chosen to the new Senate.

CALDER B. SMITH, Secretary of the Interior, was born in Boston, Mass., in 1808, and is of the same age therefore with Mr. Chase. He was educated at the Cincinnati College, studied law, and went to Indiana. In 1832 he began editing a Whig journal, and in the following and several subsequent years was a member of the State Legislature. He was a Representative in Congress in 1843 to 1849; was Presidential Elector in 1840 and 1856; and was a member of the Board for investigating Mexican claims, appointed by President Taylor.

SIMON CAMERON, Secretary of War, a native of Pennsylvania, was born in 1799, and is therefore sixty-two years of age. He was a printer in early life and subsequently edited a Democratic journal. He engaged in several financial pursuits with success. He was elected United States Senator in 1845, served till 1849, and was re-elected in 1857.

MONTGOMERY BLAIR of Maryland, who is Postmaster General, is son of Francis P. Blair, General Jackson's old editor and chief adviser, and brother of Frank P. Blair, Jr., now a member of Congress from Missouri.—He graduated at West Point, left the army for the law, lived in St. Louis, was made judge there, married a daughter of Judge Levi Woodbury of New Hampshire, was appointed by President Pierce the Government Solicitor for the Court of Claims at Washington, and was removed from that office by President Buchanan.

GILEON WELLES, Secretary of the Navy, was an old Jacksonian Democrat and the trusted, personal friend of the "Hero of New Orleans." He has held several offices of responsibility, and was for many years connected with the press. He has held a leading place in the politics of Connecticut, being recognized as the guiding genius of the Republican party of that State.

EDWARD BATES, Attorney General, a native of Virginia, was born in 1793, and is therefore sixty-eight years old. 1814 he went to Missouri, where he has since resided, and studied law. He became State's Attorney, and afterward District Attorney for Missouri, and frequently served in the State Legislature. He was a member of the lower House of Congress from 1827 to 1829, and acted with the Whig party. Since the formation of the Republican party in Missouri, he has been its leading member, and his name rallied much strength in the Chicago National Convention.

Andrew Johnson, the patriotic United States Senator from Tennessee, commenced life as a practical shoemaker.

Twenty-five New Hampshire men are members of the Massachusetts Legislature.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Happy Moments

BY LINDA LINDAM.

Earnest praise and deep thanksgiving,
Through my soul doth sweetly thrill,
For the overflowing gladness
That this day my heart doth fill;
For the inward peace that's reigning
In my oft-anxious breast;
For the spirit calm and tranquil,
Bringing happiness and rest.

Sweet and holy thoughts come o'er me,
Soothing as refreshing showers,
In the sultry days of summer,
To the parched and thirsty flowers,—
Banishing all earthly sorrows,
Anxious fears and blighting care,
Giving birth to blest emotions,
Grateful praise and humble prayer.

Oh! that the deep joy might never,
Never from my soul depart;
Then would perfect peace and gladness,
Reign triumphant in my heart,
No murmuring thought would ever
In my bosom find a place,
But life's path I'd tread, rejoicing
In my Father's boundless grace.
Loomis, Feb. 1861.

The Matrimonial Rule.

"This morning '—o'er the new-waked earth,
The sun his brightest radiance flings,
And nought is heard save sounds of mirth,
And all around with gladness rings.

anon light clouds begin to rise,
While eddying breezes sweep along;
Dark, and more dark, they veil the skies,
And storm winds drown the voice of song.

So, lady, do we often see
The morn of matrimonial life
All smiles, all joy, all gaiety,
Its noon obscured by feuds and strife.

But would you know a charm of power
To assure the sunshine of the heart,
To break the tempest that will lower,
To blunt the point of discord's dart—

BEAR AND FORBEAR—no wiser given
This short rule, when practised well,
Makes marriage 'e'en on earth a heaven;
Neglected—turns it to a hell.

At Sea.

The night is made for cooling shade,
For silence and for sleep;
And when I was a child, I laid
My hands upon my breast and prayed,
And sank to slumbers deep.
Childlike as then, I lie to-night,
And wish my lonely cabin light.

Each movement of the swaying lamp
Shows how the vessel reels,
As o'er her deck the billows tramp,
And all her timbers strain and clump.
With every shock she feels,
I start and shudder, while it burns,
In its hinged socket turns.

New swinging low, and slanting low,
It almost level lies,
And yet I know, while to and fro
I watch the swinging pendulum go,
With restless fall and rise,
The steady shaft is still upright,
Poising its little globe of light.

O, hand of God! O, lamp of peace!
O, promise of my soul!
Though weak and tossed, and ill at ease,
Amid the roar of swirling seas—
The ship's convulsing roll—
I own, with love and tender awe,
You perfect type of faith and law!

A heavenly trust my spirit calms;
My soul is filled with light;
The ocean sings his solemn psalm;
The wild winds chant; I cross my palms;
Happy as if to-night
Under the cottage roof again
I heard the soothing summer rain.

An Easy Lesson in Chemistry.

Some Water and Oil
One day and a broil,
As down in a glass they were dropping,
And would not unite,
But continued to fight,
Without any prospect of stopping.

Some Pearlash o'erheard,
As quick as a word,
He jumped in the midst of the clashing;
When all three agreed,
And united with speed,
And soap was created for washing.

Anecdotes.

An old Dutchman who had recently joined the temperance society, was taken sick, and sent to the doctor to prescribe for him, who ordered him to take an ounce of brandy per day. The old chap overhauled his arithmetic, and found in table of apothecaries' weight, "eight drams make one ounce."

Alas! says the Dutchman, that is six demperance for me. I didn't get but six drams before, and now I get eight.

A devotee bewailed to her confessor her inordinate love of play. The confessor pointed out to her that she should especially regret the loss of time it entailed.

Alas, yes! my father, replied the penitent, one does lose so much time in shuffling the cards!

Have you much fish in your basket? asked a person of a fisherman, who was returning. Yes, a good deal, was the rather slippery reply.

I believe the jury has been inoculated with acidity and a lawyer said his opponent, but the bar is of opinion that you had it in the natural way.

OLD KENTUCKY
BOURBON
"1849 RESERVE"

The Established popularity of this Choice OLD BOURBON as a medicinal agent, renders it superfluous to mention in detail the characteristics which distinguish it from the ordinary kind of Kentucky Whisky.

Being distilled in 1848, and manufactured expressly for us with great care, it can be relied upon as a strictly pure stimulant, and peculiarly effective for the treatment of Lung Complaints, Dyspepsia, Derangements of the Stomach, Nervousness, &c.

As a curative agent it has a tendency to recreate and strengthen; while age having contributed its genial charm and enriched it with a delicious flavor and an oily body, it affords a pleasant incentive to the preservation or recovery of health, through the agreeable medium of a well preserved palate.

Put up in a variety of attractive forms, in iron bound cases of one or two dozen bottles each, and sold by all prominent druggists, grocers and town agents.

DR. M'LANE'S

LIVER PILLS,

Hepatitis or Liver Complaint,
DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increase on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, in cases of AGUE and FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

Address all orders to
FLEMING BROS., PITTSBURGH, PA.

P. S. Dealers and Physicians ordering from others than Fleming Bros. will do well to write their orders distinctly, and take none but Dr. M'LANE'S, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa. ## Miscellaneous.

The Young Philosopher.

Mr. Solomon Winthrop was a plain old farmer—an austere precise man, who did every thing by established rules, and could see no reason why people should grasp at things beyond what had been reached by their great-grandfathers. He had three children—two boys and a girl. There was Jeremiah, seventeen years old, Samuel, fifteen, and Fanny thirteen.

It was a cold winter's day. Samuel was in the kitchen reading a book, and so interested was he that he did not notice the entrance of his father. Jerry was in an opposite corner engaged in ciphering out a sum which he had found in his arithmetic.

Sam, said the father to his youngest boy, have you worked out that sum yet?
No, sir, returned the boy, hesitatingly.
Didn't I tell you to stick to your arithmetic till you had done it? uttered Mr. Winthrop in a severe tone.

Samuel hung down his head and looked troubled.
Why haven't you done it? continued the father.

I can't do it, sir, tremblingly returned Samuel.
Can't do it? and why not? Look at Jerry, there, with his slate and pencil. He had ciphered further than you have long before he was as old as you are.

Jerry was always fond of mathematical problems, sir, but I cannot fasten my mind on them. They have no interest for me.
That's because you don't try to feel an interest in your studies. What book is that you are reading?

It is a work on philosophy, sir.
A work on fiddlesticks! Go, put it away this instant, and then get your slate and don't let me see you away from your arithmetic till you have worked out those roots. Do you understand me?

Samuel made no answer, but silently he put away his philosophy, and then he got his slate and set down in the chimney corner. His father left him and he felt that it was without cause.

Sam, said Jerry, as soon as your father had gone, I will do that sum for you.
No, Jerry, returned the younger brother, but with a grateful look, that will be deceiving father. I will try to do the sum, but I fear I shall not succeed.

Samuel worked very hard, and all to no purpose. His mind was not on the subject before him. The roots and squares, the bases, hypotheses and perpendiculars, though comparatively simple in themselves, were to him a mingled mass of incomprehensible things and the more he tried, the more he became perplexed and bothered.

The truth was his father did not understand him.
Samuel was a bright boy and uncommonly intelligent for one of his age. Mr. Winthrop was a thorough mathematician—he never yet came across a problem he could not solve, and he desired that his boys should be like him, for he considered that the acme of educational perfection lay in the power of conquering Euclid, and he often expressed his opinion that, were Euclid living then, he could give the old geometerian a hard tussle.

He seemed not to comprehend that different minds were made with different capacities, and what one mind grasped with ease, another of equal power would fail to comprehend. Hence, because Jeremiah progressed rapidly in his mathematical studies, and could already survey a piece of land many angles, he imagined that because Samuel made no progress in the same branch he was idle and careless, and treated him accordingly. He never candidly conversed with his younger son, with a view to ascertain the true bent of his mind, but he had his own standard of the power of all minds, and he pertinaciously adhered to it.

There was another thing that Mr. Winthrop could not see, and that was, that Samuel was continually pondering upon such unprofitable matter as was interesting to him, and that he was scarcely ever idle; nor did his father see either, that if he ever wished his boy to become a mathematician he was pursuing the very course to prevent such a result. Instead of endeavoring to make the study interesting to the child, he was making it obnoxious.

The dinner hour came, and Samuel had not worked out the sum. His father was angry, and obliged the boy to go without his dinner, at the same time telling him that he was an idle, lazy child.

Poor Samuel left the kitchen, and there he sat and cried. At length his mind seemed to pass from the wrong he had suffered at the hand of his parent, and took another turn, and the marks of grief left his face. There was a large fire in the room below his chamber, so that he was not very cold, and getting up he went to a small closet, and from beneath a lot of old clothes he took forth some long strips of wood and commenced whittling. It was not for mere pastime that he whittled, for he was fashioning some curious affair from those pieces of wood. He had bits of wire, little scraps of tin plate, pieces of twine, and dozens of small wheels that he made himself, and he seemed to be working to get them together after some peculiar fashion of his own.

Half the afternoon had thus passed away, when his sister entered his chamber. She had her apron gathered up in her hand, and after closing the door softly behind her, she approached the spot where her brother sat.

Here, Sammy—see, I have brought you something to eat. I know you must be hungry.

As she spoke she opened her apron and took out four cakes, a piece of pie and some cheese. The boy was hungry, and he hesitated not to avail himself of his sister's kind offer. He kissed her as he took the cakes, and thanked her.

O, what a pretty thing that is you are making! uttered Fanny, looking upon the result of her brother's labors. Won't you give it to me after it is done? Not this one, sister, returned the boy, with a smile, but as soon as I get time I will make you one equally as pretty.

Fanny thanked her brother, and shortly afterwards left the room, while the boy went on with his work.

Before long, the various materials that had been subject to Samuel's jackknife and pinners had assumed form and comeliness, and they were joined and grooved together in a curious manner.

The embryo philosopher set the machine—for it looked very much like a machine—upon the floor, and then stood off and gazed upon it. His eye gleamed with a peculiar glow of satisfaction, and he looked proud and happy.

While he stood and gazed upon the child of his labors, the door of his chamber opened and his father entered.

What—are you not studying? exclaimed Mr. Winthrop, as he noticed the boy standing in the middle of the floor.

Samuel trembled when he heard his father's voice, and turned pale with fear.

Ha! what is this? said Mr. Winthrop, as he caught sight of the curious construction on the floor. This is the secret of your idleness. Now I see how it is you cannot master your studies. You spend your time in making play houses and fly pens. I'll see whether you'll learn to attend to your lesson or not. There!

As the father uttered this common injunction, he placed his foot upon the object of his displeasure. The boy uttered a quick cry, and sprang forward, but too late. The curious construction was crushed to atoms—the labor of long weeks. Looking at the mass of ruin, and then covering his face with his hands, he burst into tears.

Ain't you ashamed? said Mr. Winthrop, a great boy like you to spend your time in making clap-nets and then cry about it, because I chide that you should attend to your studies.

The boy was too full of grief to make any explanation, and without a word he left his chamber; but for long days afterwards he was weary and down-hearted.

Samuel, said Mr. Winthrop one day, after the Spring had opened, I have seen Mr. Young and he is willing to take you as an apprentice. We can get along on the farm, and I think that the best thing you can do is to learn the blacksmith's trade. I have given up all hopes of ever making a surveyor out of you, and if you had a farm you would not know how to measure it or lay it out. Jerry will soon be able to take my place as surveyor, and I have already made arrangements for having him sworn and obtaining his commission. But your trade is a good one, however, and I have no doubt you will be able to make a good living at it.

Mr. Young was a blacksmith in a neighboring town, and he carried on quite an extensive business. Moreover, he had the reputation of being a very fine man. Samuel was delighted with his father's proposal, and when he learned that Mr. Young also carried on quite a large machine shop, he was in ecstasy. His trunk was packed—a good supply of clothes having been provided; and after kissing his mother and sister and shaking hands with his father and brother, he mounted the stage and set off for his new destination.

He found Mr. Young all he could wish, and went into business with an assiduity that surprised his master.

One evening, after Samuel Winthrop had been with his new master six months, the latter came into his shop after all the journey-men had quit work and gone home and found the youth busily engaged in fitting a piece of iron. There was quite a number of pieces on the bench by his side, and some were curiously riveted together and fixed with springs and slides, while others appeared not yet ready for their destined use. Mr. Young ascertained what the young workman was up to, and he not only encouraged him in his undertaking, but he stood for half an hour and watched him at his work. Next day Samuel Winthrop was removed from the blacksmith's shop to the machine shop.

Samuel often visited his parents. At the end of two years his father was not a little surprised when Mr. Young informed him that Samuel was the most useful hand in his employ.

Time flew fast. Samuel was twenty-one. Jeremiah had been free almost two years, and was one of the most accurate and trustworthy surveyors in the county.

Mr. Winthrop looked upon his elder son with pride, and often expressed a wish that his other son could have been like him. Samuel had come home to visit his parents, and Mr. Young had come with him.

Mr. Young, said Mr. Winthrop, after the tea things had been cleared away, that is a fine factory they have just erected in your town.

Yes, returned Mr. Young, there are three of them and they are doing a very heavy business.

I understand they have an extensive machine shop connected with the factories. Now if my boy Sam is as good a workman as you say he is, perhaps he might get a first rate situation there.

Mr. Young looked at Samuel and smiled.
By the way, continued the old farmer, what is all this noise I hear and see in the paper about those patent Winthrop looms? They tell me they go ahead of anything that ever was got up before.

You may ask your son about that, said Mr. Young. That is some of Samuel's business. Eh? What! My son? Some of Sam's—

The old man stopped short and gazed at his son. He was bewildered. It could not be that his son—the idle son—was the inventor of the great power loom that had taken all the manufacturers by surprise.

It is simply this, father, that the loom is mine, returned Samuel with conscious pride. I have invented it, and taken a patent right, and have already been offered ten thousand dollars for the patent right in two adjoining States. Don't you remember that clap-net you crushed with your foot, six years ago?

Yes, answered the old man, whose eyes were bent to the floor, and over whose mind a new light seemed breaking.

Well, continued Samuel, that was almost a pattern, though of course, I have made much alteration and improvement, and there is room for more.

And that was what you were studying, when you used to stand and see me weave, and when you fumbled about my loom so much? said Mrs. Winthrop.

You are right, mother. Even then I had conceived the idea which I have since carried out.

And that was why you could not understand my mathematical problems, uttered Mr. Winthrop as he started from his chair and took the youth by the hand. Samuel, my son, forgive me for the harshness I have used towards you. I have been blinded, and now see how I misunderstood you. While I have thought you idle and careless, you were solving a philosophical problem I could never have comprehended. Forgive me, Samuel—I meant well enough, but lacked judgment and discrimination.

Of course the old man had long before been forgiven for his harshness, and his mind was opened to a new lesson in human nature. It was simply this:

Different minds have different capacities, and no man can ever be driven to love that for which he has no taste. First, seek to understand the natural abilities and dispositions of children, and then, in your management of their education for after life, govern yourself accordingly. George Combe, the greatest moral philosopher of his day, could hardly reckon in simple addition, and Colburn, the mathematician, could not write out a common place address.

Snow Storm in the Olden Time.

The year 1717 is memorable in the history of New England, on account of the unusual quantity of snow which fell Feb. 20th and 24th of that year. In those two storms the earth was covered with snow from ten to fifteen, and in some places to twenty feet deep. Many houses of one story were buried, and, in numerous cases, paths were dug from house to house under the snow drifts. The visits were made by means of snow shoes, the wearers having first stepped out of their chamber windows. One gentleman wishing to visit his "lady love," walked three miles with snow shoes, and entered her residence as he had left his own, namely, by the chamber window. He was cordially received, as he was the first person the family had seen from abroad for a week! Cotton

Mather has left a manuscript account of "this great snow," and the many marvels and prodigies attending it.

Set a pitcher of ice water in a room, inhabited, and in a few hours it will have absorbed from the JUNIOR.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March 23d, 1861.

WORTHY OF RECORD. If the events of the present week do not find a place in the Farmer's Almanac, we shall think the editor derelict in duty; they should be placed in parallel lines with the "Landing of the Pilgrims" and Cotton Mather's flogging of the witches; and if, as some think, the evacuation of Fort Sumter or the return of the natal day of Ireland's Patron Saint, has had any thing to do with raising this breeze, the divil, say we, take them. Talk of planting; why what would Mr. Helper have to say now about our bay crop? The prospects are, instead of being so engaged in such rural occupations, that "Maggie Lection," and the august ceremony of Mr. Andrew taking the gubernatorial chair, will be celebrated amidst the surroundings of winter. But to be serious; never within our recollection, have we experienced at this season of the year, such a succession of boisterous and tumultuous weather. The quantity of snow fell is great, which is piled up in heaps in our thoroughfares, rendering them nearly impassable. An embargo is also laid on the travel of the Old Colony Railroad; depriving us for the time, of that communication with the city. The truth is, we are a used up people—and if the "Storm King" will now abandon the field, we will acknowledge beat, and tender him a most hearty adieu.

MURDER CASES IN NORFOLK COUNTY.—Two murder trials will take place at the May term of the Superior Court in Dedham, viz.: the trial of George C. Hersey, for poisoning the Turrell girls at Weymouth; and of Edward R. Pope of this town, for shooting Francis D. Fortier.

THREE NEW TERRITORIES ORGANIZED. The bills organizing the Territories of Colorado, Nevada and Dakota passed both Houses of Congress, and were signed by President Buchanan. This increases the number of the Territories of the United States to seven, including the previously existing ones of Washington, Nebraska, Utah and New Mexico.

BUSINESS. Small; comparative smaller; superlative smallest. To this point we have arrived at last—and if relief does not come soon, our mechanics will be obliged to enter the professional ranks, and instead of being any longer producers, will become the consumers of wealth. Such a general stagnation in every branch of business never was before known. There must be a screw loose somewhere, to paralyze so generally the industrial arm of the country. Can't President Davis or Lincoln solve this problem? here is a subject worthy of their great minds.

FORT SUMTER. This Fort, the cause of much trouble, has doubtless been evacuated. This step was considered best on many accounts; it could not be maintained without great loss of human life, and its abandonment it was hoped would be accepted as a peace-offering to harmonize past difficulties. By some it will be considered as a determination on the part of the Lincoln administration to allow the seceding States, in future, to pursue the even tenor of their way without molestation. Perhaps this is the wiser course; time will determine. It is evident we are in the midst of a revolution, but we trust a bloodless one.

MINISTER TO ENGLAND. This very important mission, in the peculiar crisis of our country's political affairs, has been confided to our eminent townsman, Hon. Charles Francis Adams. No statesman in the country, under all the circumstances, could have been selected so exactly qualified for the place. A scholar, a gentleman, and a statesman, crowned with hereditary honors, he will add new glories to American diplomacy and sustain the elevated character of this high position so worthily filled by his distinguished ancestors.

The Boston Daily Journal, noticing this selection, thus comments:—

"The appointment of Charles Francis Adams to the Court of St. James will be regarded as peculiarly felicitous. His is one of those cases where a man 'treads in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessors' naturally and worthily. The first American Minister to England was John Adams, appointed in 1785, after having negotiated a peace. At the close of the last century, we had as a Minister at the same Court, John Quincy Adams, whose extremely valuable and arduous career abroad was commenced under the urgent recommendation of Washington. Now the son of the latter and the grandson of the former will fill the same office with, we have no doubt, equal efficiency and merit. The appointment reflects high honor on Massachusetts."

There are living five Ex-Presidents of the United States—Van Buren, Tyler, Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan.

Fast Day Proclamation.

Governor Andrew has issued the following Proclamation for a day of public fasting, humiliation and prayer:

"The season has arrived when it becomes the people of Massachusetts, obediently to the pious and venerable custom of the Commonwealth to unite in the observance of their Annual Fast.

"I do therefore, with the advice and consent of the Council, appoint Thursday, the Fourth day of April next, a day of Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer.

"And I respectfully request the people of every persuasion, with one consent, to lay aside all unnecessary and inconsistent avocations of business and pleasure, to repair to their usual places of public worship, and to dedicate the day to earnest self-examination and to the service of God in the exercise of devotion.

"Let us penitently confess, renounce and forgive our sins, and imploring forgiveness of the same, through the infinite and Divine Mercy, seek for strength of purpose, purity of heart, disinterested affection and abiding faith, rightly to discern, obediently and faithfully to observe all the duties and obligations of our future lives.

"Let us recognize the Providence of the Almighty Ruler of heaven and earth, in all the affairs of nations and of men.

"Let us humble ourselves in the recognition of our own vanity and foolishness, whenever we have set up our own wisdom or will against His Supreme intelligence, love and power.

"Let us remember that the Divine requirement to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with God, rests upon all men everywhere, and upon all nations; that there can be no national wickedness without individual guilt; no real calamity independent of human folly or misconduct, and no suffering unendurable save the misery of remorse.

"Let us carry on our hearts, before Him who is 'no respecter of persons,' the cause of our country, the rights and welfare of all her people, of whatever section, race, color, or condition.

"And let us be willing, in all respects, to do and to receive, and even to desire, whatever he shall deem best for us, who ruleth all things well."

WEST DISTRICT. At a District meeting held on Saturday evening last, at the Willard School House, the following Officers were elected:

Moderator, Phineas G. Sanborn.
Clerk, Samuel Ames.
Prudential Committee, Whole number of votes, was 135
William Chesley had 127 and was chosen.

Voted, To adjourn.

DAMAGES. In the Supreme Judicial Court at Dedham, Judge Metcalf, presiding, the case of R. M. Todd of Milton, vs. O. C. & F. R. Railroad was tried and a verdict rendered.

This was a suit to recover damages for injuries sustained by plaintiff while riding in the cars of this corporation. His arm rested upon the window seat, and came in violent contact with the swung-open door of a baggage-car, injuring it seriously and permanently.

The question to be decided was if proper care was used by the plaintiff, in keeping his arm within the line of the window. The jury gave him two thousand dollars damages.

CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS. It is settled that drunkenness is a physical as well as a moral disease, and it is now so treated. The following is the receipt of John Vine Hall, the father of the commander of the Great Eastern, which has enabled so many men to overcome the malady: Sulphate of iron, 5 grains; magnesia, 10 grains; pepper mint water, 11 drachme; spirit of nutmeg, 1 drachm; twice a day.

For the Patriot Reply to "Query."

MR. EDITOR: The query of L. S. R., in your columns of the 9th ult., embraces several distinct inquiries, neither of them having any relation whatever, one to the other.

Every surgeon of experience and observation knows well enough, that a leg or an arm after amputation from the parent stem of trunk, is dead matter; and that the excised part, like all dead animal matter, is given up to chemical affinities. Pain or suffering, the lopped off part has none; and the idea or notion, that the living parts of body and mind of the subject having endured the calamity of such necessity, suffers from disturbance, or any other use made of the dismembered part, is a fallacy—a perversion of fact, and contrary to all our usual modes of reasoning in regard to the never failing and eternal principles of truth.

L. S. R. with a seeming gravity, befitting a curious philosophy, asks, "Where is the centre of attraction?"

As God created man, and endowed him with all the faculties and powers appropriate and necessary to his physical and mental structure and organization, it may fairly be presumed, that vitality itself, or the essential properties of life, is the centre or moving force of every living thing—human beings included. And it would well become us all, whether or not of chemical, mechanical or other proclivities relative to "cause and effect," always to keep this great and important truth in view. It would tend to teach and exhibit to us our "darkness visible," so that, our individual existence on earth, close when it may, shall approximate to our activity here, and become a useful lesson toward "Progress" in the right direction.

Bath, March 13th, 1861. HUFELAND.

For the Patriot Theory versus Practice.

MR. EDITOR: In a late number of the Patriot, "L. S. R." I perceive has again made his bow to the public. His new philosophy must find vent or the frail vessel which contains it would burst. His egotism and impudence brings to mind an incident, related to me, which took place in "Old Virginia." A colored preacher, who officiated as spiritual confessor for his benighted brothers and sisters, was seen one day to abstract, without permission of the owner, a barrel of tar, from the premises of a neighbor, with the intention of appropriating it to his own use. This got wind, and spread through the plantations over which he held parochial charge, like wildfire. Things looked dark—a crisis was impending, and unless something was done, "Othello's occupation was gone." But he took courage and resolved to breast the storm.

Accordingly, on the following Sunday, he repaired to the house of worship, ascended the pulpit, and there met the angry gaze of the assembled multitude. Silence for a few moments reigned, but soon murmurs of a threatening import began to be audible. He saw a hurricane of passion rising, and he was determined to nip it in the bud. So, in a stentorian voice, he called the name of Caesar Jackson, the complainant, who answered to the summons, when the following colloquy ensued:

Caesar Jackson, said the garrulous parson, have you lost any thing—recollect in whose presence you stand.

Now Caesar was a modest man, who stood in awe of the influence of his interrogator, and he timidly replied, that he did not know, but he believed he had.

What may it be? enquired the minister.

The article was named.

Who you think had him?

This question was artfully put, and to the mind of Caesar, who knew the man he had to deal with, was intended to crush him. He therefore evaded a direct reply, and said he did not know any thing about it, more than he saw it moving off one morning, and he did not believe it was any where now.

Then if you no see him, and know nothing of him, what all dis fuss about? enquired the arrogant priest, and he led off in a vehement tirade, about the great sin of total depravity, and the necessity for immediate repentance. This turned the current of opinion, demolished every hope of poor Caesar, who, from that day lost cast with the Society, and ever after bore the name of a bad nigger.

Whenever I hear an enthusiast upon theoretical abstractions, hurling his anathemas at those who will not square their lives and conduct by his standard of morality, I always think of my cable friend of the "Old Dominion," and that the age of humbug is not yet at an end.

COMMON SENSE.

GENERAL COURT. This body moves rather slow in the despatch of business.

The resolve in favor of David E. Parmenter and others for military services, was refused a third reading, but upon motion of Mr. Marsh of this town, the vote was reconsidered and the resolve advanced a stage.

The bill for buying the Hingham and Quincy turnpike with the bridges, and making them free, has been defeated. ## Poetry.

The Martyrs of Opinion.

The martyrs of opinion,
How silently they die!
No monument upraised to heaven,
To tell us where they lie.
They live a life of fearful gloom,
They fall like stricken deer;
Dark scorn consigns them to the tomb,
Their burial-rite, a sneer!

The sword devours its millions;
The plague hath swept away
Its host of human worms
And mingled them with clay.
But after these comes a fall,
The hours with joy are rare;
Opinion's edge is never dull,
And never ends her strife.

Talk of the rack, the dungeon,
The Moloch tyrant's sway,
The art of torture grows more nice
In this improving day;
With stern orders fenced round
Sits custom like a fate;
Move but an inch beyond her bounds,
And fashion shuns the gate.

The Few.

I care not for the "coming man,"
Nor fear the coming woman;
The one who does the best he can,
He is the great—the true man.
They are but few.

No "lower crust," no "upper ten"—
No "unpretending" know they
No rank at all but rank of men,
Just "near the angels" show they,
The lofty few.

Condemned, unheard, misunderstood,
They guide along the valley,
For know the good they do—or would—
Around whom angels rally;
The unknown few.

How still they move! the noisy world
Goes round as if without them;
From fortune's wheel they're often whirled
With scarce a shriek about them;
The suffering few.

Some drag diseases length'ning chain;
Some chase with vain endeavor,
And some live down a life long pain
Triumphant late—forever!
Victorious few.

I care not for mighty man;
I worship not the many,
Contented with the lowly span
That gains me love of men,
The loving few.

True Loveliness.

She who thinks a noble heart
Better than a noble mien—
Whom virtue more than art,
Though "his love in fashion seen—"
Whom'er her fortune be,
She's the bride—the wife—for me!

She who deems that inward grace
Far surpasses outward show,
She who values less the eye
Than that which the soul can throw,
Whom'er her fortune be,
She's the bride—the wife—for me!

She who knows the heart requires
Something more than lips of dew—
That when Love's brief rose expires,
Love itself dies with it too—
Whom'er her fortune be,
She's the bride—the wife—for me!

Angry Words.

Angry words are lightly spoken,
In a rash and thoughtless hour,
Brightest links of life are broken,
By their deep, insidious power.
Hearts inspired by warmest feeling,
Ne'er before by angry stirred,
Of rare past human healing,
By a single angry word.

Poison drops of care and sorrow,
Bitter poison drops are they—
Weaving for the coming morrow
Saddest memories of to-day.
Angry words! oh, let them never
From the tongue unbridled slip,
May the heart's best impulse ever
Check them ere they soil the lip.

Love is much too pure and holy,
Friendship is too sacred far,
For a moment's reckless folly
Thus to desecrate and mar.
Angry words are lightly spoken,
Brightest links of life are broken,
By a single angry word.

Anecdotes.

A devotedly pious man who lived some six miles from the house of worship, once complained to his pastor of the distance he had to go to attend public worship, while many others had but a few steps to walk to enjoy divine ordinances.

Never mind, said the good minister, remember that every Sabbath you have the privilege of preaching a sermon six miles long—you preach the Gospel to all the residents and people you pass.

What would our wives say if they knew where we were? said the captain of a schooner when they were beating about in a thick fog, fearful of going ashore.

Humph! I shouldn't mind that, replied the mate, if we only knew where we were ourselves.

How much did ye ask for them buttons? inquired an Irish customer.

Fifteen cents.

I didn't say fifty, I said fifteen, replied the honest dealer.

Be dad, an' I'll give ye tin cents then.

A witty fellow slipped down on an icy pavement. While sitting, he muttered:

I have no desire to see the town burned down, but I sincerely wish the streets were laid in ashes.

BININGER'S
GENUINE
Cognac Brandy

The infamous practice of adulterating Brandy having become so common that a genuine article is the exception; it is of vital importance to those requiring it for Family use and Invalids, that it should be of undoubted purity and efficacy.

With a view to meeting the popular demand for a reliable Brandy in its natural state, free from alcoholic flavor and impurities, and fully appreciating the fact that it is often recommended by the Medical Faculty, as a STIMULANT, when all other remedies fail, we are now bottling and selling at reasonable rates, a Brandy of our own importation, from one of the most responsible houses in France, and known as

It is mild, delicate and fruity, and is designed to be always uniform in quality and character. Put up in pint and quart bottles, in cases containing two dozen pints and one dozen quarts, and is sold by all prominent druggists, grocers and town agents.

The above is also for sale in original packages, viz.: Eighth and Quarter Cases.

PACKARD'S Great Regenerator for the HUMAN HAIR.

It is now too well known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet to satisfy the most credulous, I will publish the following testimony.

Harrison Sq., Dorchester, Mar. 30, 1859.
MR. PACKARD—Sir: I have given your Regenerator a fair trial and find it all you claim for it. My hair was very gray; it is now restored to perfect color. All the humor is removed from the scalp. In short, I have now a perfect head of hair. I am willing to go before any Justice of the Peace and make oath to the above, if you wish it.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged? Do you feel languid and uncomfortable? These symptoms are from the presence of biliousness. Some fit of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be removed by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the system. They will purify the blood, and break up the bile, and restore health again. They stimulate the functions of the body, and give vigor and activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease.

A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. These, if not relieved, result upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangement, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous disorders. The same purgative effect exists in all cases of similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and by the same means. Some who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

From Forwards from Dr. Lewis, Feb. 4, 1855.
Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of various ailments upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long and grievously afflicted with biliousness and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

At a Family Physician.
From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic I have used. They are mild, but very certain and effective in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.
From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.
Dear Sir: I cannot answer you what complaint I have cured with your Pills, but I can tell you that I have cured a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effective cathartic in my daily treatment of disease, and believe that your Pills are the best we have, of course value them highly.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Sir: I have been recently cured of the Stomach Ache, any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seemed to arise from a full stomach, which they cleanse at once.
ED. W. PERL, Jr.,
Quincy, March 3.

Billious Disorders—Liver Complaints.
From Dr. Theodore Bell, New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effective for the cure of bilious complaints than any other medicine I have used. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

Dysentery, Diarrhea, Relax, Worms.
From Dr. J. C. Ayer, New York City.

Your Pills have a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best agents I have ever found. Their action upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhea. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.
From Dr. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

Dr. Ayer: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the most effective I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends.

WABAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Dec. 24, 1855.
Dear Sir: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M.D.
From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of constipation. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the precursor of others that are worse. I believe confidence to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent promoters of the natural secretion when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effective to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic I have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hackett, of the Methodist Epist. Church, PULASKI HOUSE, SAVANNAH, GA., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORABLE SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your pills have brought me if I did not tell you of it. You, a cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Nevertheless, the best of the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were truly marvelous. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1855.
DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that has afflicted me for years.

VINCENT SLIDELL.
Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skillful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its toxic use. Those contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Miscellaneous.

For the Patriot.
Fifty Years Ago.

MR. EDITOR:—Fifty years ago, the first of April, 1811, I, the undersigned, came to Quincy to keep school. At that time there was but one public annual Grammar School in the town; that school I kept for the term of three years. The building, in which that school was kept, was located on the side of the street, near the house known as the Seth Burrell place, and nearly opposite the building now owned and occupied by the Quincy Stone Bank. The school-room was on the lower floor of the building, which was not very conveniently arranged for the accommodation of the scholars. The seats and writing desks were long and calculated for four to eight scholars on a seat; the room was very cold,—there being only a single board partition across the north side, between the school room and a large entry leading to the Town Hall,—and warmed by wood burnt in a large old-fashioned fireplace and a small cast iron box stove. Every cold morning the ink was all froze up, and the scholars were obliged to stand around the fire half the forenoon to get warm—being wholly unprepared to attend to their studies. Not a particle of paint was ever put on the inside of the room. The accommodations there would poorly compare with the very convenient and commodious school rooms in Quincy at the present day. There were no maps, globes, blackboards, or apparatus of any kind to aid the scholars in their studies and adorn the school room, such as the children of the present generation are enjoying.

The children from all parts of the town—North and South, East and West—came to this school. The daily average number of scholars, who attended the school while under my instruction, was from seventy to ninety, some days over one hundred. The whole number during the three years about two hundred and twenty-five.

It was the custom at that time, for three or four of the winter months, to divide the school, and a portion of the largest scholars went up into the Town Hall, over the school room, where temporary benches were fitted up, and another teacher employed. These scholars attended more particularly to mathematics. A Mr. Gould of South Boston was the teacher in the upper school one winter, and a Mr. Draper one or two winters, at the time I was in the school.

My immediate predecessors in the principal school were Mr. Alpheus Cary, then of this town, who kept about two years and Mr. John Whitney, from Northboro', who kept about three years; and my successor in 1814 was Mr. William Seaver, also from Northboro', who, as the inhabitants of Quincy can testify, was a popular and faithful teacher in this town for about twenty years.

The school house was burnt in 1815. A new house was soon built, with two school rooms on the lower floor and a Town Hall above, which was located on the southerly side of the old burying ground, near the dwelling-house of the late Samuel Copeland. Some years afterwards it was moved on to Coddington Street, and the school continued there. A few years ago the old building was sold and moved away, and the present new and commodious school house erected nearly on the same spot.

There were also at the time of which I am speaking, three small school houses in Quincy, where women schools were kept for three or four months in the summer season, one at "Bent's Point," so called, one at the "Farms" near the house of the late Thomas Adams, and one at the North part of the town opposite the house of the late William Newcomb. And at that time, and for a number of years, Mrs. Bass, wife of the late Dea Jonathan Bass, kept a school for small children, a portion of the year employed by the town and part of the time a private school, which was kept in a part of their dwelling house, which then stood where Adam Curtis & Co.'s Boot Manufacturing now stands on Franklin Street. Mrs. Bass was quite celebrated as a teacher of small scholars.

Mr. Elliot Valentine, also from Northboro', came here I think in 1816, and kept school one or two years. Mr. Abraham Bartlett, also from Northboro', came here about 1820, and kept school in Quincy very successful about fifteen years.

I have said above, that fifty years ago there was but one public annual school in Quincy, now there are six public annual District Grammar Schools, with their Intermediate and Primary schools, beside a High School; all of which are provided with commodious, convenient and elegant school houses.

The whole number of children who attended the schools in Quincy at the time I kept I have not the means of knowing, but probably not more than 275. The number of children now, between the ages of five and fifteen years, according to the last returns, is about 1400.

The expenditures of the town for schooling at that time were very limited. The compensation to teachers, both male and female, very small. I was paid but three hundred and thirty dollars for the first year, and boarded myself. There was one month's vacation in whortleberry time. The second year my salary was raised to four hundred dollars, which was more than the town had ever before paid. Female teachers were paid about three dollars a week and boarded themselves. The whole expenditures of the town for schooling including fuel not more than $750 a year. Now the town appropriates $9,000 a year for schooling.

What vastly greater opportunities and means for attaining an education, the children in Quincy are now enjoying, compared with those who attended school half a century ago. May they realize, duly appreciate and use their privileges to the best advantage to themselves.

The population of Quincy at the time I came here, 1811, was about 1,300; at this time, according to the census taking in 1850, is 6,800.

I will here relate a little incident: Some three years ago, I went into the counting room of a merchant in Boston, of whom I had been accustomed for many years to buy goods to sell, and there happened to be standing at the desk, a gentleman apparently settling an account or bill, and on his hearing me addressed by the merchant as Mr. Brigham, he turned towards me and asked "if I was the Mr. Brigham who once kept school in Quincy." I answered yes, I once kept school there (not recognizing the gentleman). "Well," said he, "I went to school to you there, and I recollect very distinctly that you one day gave me a good whipping, and you did right, for I deserved it. I am glad you do it, and I thank you for it, for you made me a good boy. I never played truant afterwards." To which I replied: "I was very glad to hear him say what he did, for it gave him such salutary and beneficial effect."

Having preserved a list of the names of the scholars who attended the school during the time I kept, 1811, 1812, and 1813, I have thought that if I were to publish them with this brief and imperfect history of the schools and school houses in Quincy, half a century ago, they might be read with some interest by the inhabitants of this town. I therefore subjoin them:

Probably there were some others who came to school to me whose names are omitted on my catalogue.

Of the above named persons fifty-five are still living in Quincy. Ninety-nine went away to reside in other parts of the country; how many of these are still living, I have not the means of knowing. According to my best knowledge seven-thirds of the whole number, and probably more, have been called from the sphere of their earthly labors to the duties of the Higher Life.—I have passed that bourne from which no traveler returns."

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, March 21, 1861.
The inclement weather of the week, has had a prejudicial influence on trade and mechanical business; both being very dull. Matters were a sombre aspect. The present month of March, meteorologically has been as severe as any former March known to the oldest inhabitant,—a winter still lingering in the lap of spring "with a vengeance."

A large amount of business has been performed at the State House, but not of great interest. There is a prospect that the Provincial Statutes will be republished. A Rescissive has been passed or reported to collect and report the State Papers on secessions. It is proposed to provide by law for the election of Committees on the abatement of taxes in the several towns of the Commonwealth. In the House, an order was adopted limiting speeches to fifteen minutes in length.

We state with high satisfaction, the appointment of the Hon. Charles Francis Adams as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Great Britain; being the highest grade of foreign mission in the gift of the President. Among his illustrious predecessors in that office, were his grandfather and father. The selection of Mr. Adams by Mr. Lincoln, reflects honor upon Massachusetts, being one eminently fit to be made from the purity of character and known ability of Mr. Adams. He is a ripe scholar and possesses a high order of talents, which for many years have been cultivated with assiduity, and especially developed in his brilliant Congressional career. His acceptance to this high post leaves a vacancy in your District which must of necessity soon be filled, as there are strong prospects of an extra Session of Congress. In the political circles here, the names of Messrs. Salmonstall and Claflin of Newton, Weld of West Roxbury, Eldridge of Canton, Safford of Dorchester, George White of Quincy, J. M. Churchill of Milton, have been favorably spoken of as candidates to succeed Mr. Adams in Congress. The exigency of public affairs is such, that it is supposed Mr. Adams will soon leave for Europe. It is probable, that one of the sons of Mr. Adams will be Assistant Secretary of Legation. The salary of a Minister to England or France is $17,500 per annum; but it by no means meets the ordinary expenses of the office, as it is well known, that Mr. Lawrence, Everett and others expended large sums over the Government pay in their diplomatic career at the Court of St. James. Mr. Adams goes as Ambassador to England under trying circumstances, but will be found equal for any emergency. Efforts will without doubt be made both in Great Britain and France by Representatives from the Succeeding States for recognition and the formation of commercial treaties with the Southern Confederation—and there are well grounded apprehensions that such will be the case, at least with France. The policy of the English Cabinet is so wily, always looking at commercial grandeur, that gives us little faith in any of her professions of diplomacy and good faith to our Union.

The Minister and his Flock.

A minister, so called, is an angel of truth, or a devil at will; some however, dodge both, by straddling the fence, their mouth crammed with bating, directing their remarks to the extremities of the feet rather than the head. He is a minister if he but tumbles through a college, conducted through a theological university, and to cap the climax, is empowered to put on the white "kerchief" and the gown of ordination; his remarks are then listened to with the most profound respect, and his very body almost worshipped. You will pardon me reader, for having lost a part of my worship in these individuals, as I have made the important discovery recently, that one may be a true minister without passing through the above penciled track, and still be as equally competent to instruct the people concerning the welfare of their soul. A minister's influence in times past has been very great, but it is rapidly losing its savor, and will continue so to do, until they pay more attention to the true interests of humanity. The world would have suffered less, and been less corrupt, if the pulpit had performed its duty—had preached Christ's precepts and life more, and his body less; had preached the salvation of the soul, as resting on our own merits more, and its dependence on the merits of another, less. Of what use, what benefit, is a man to society, to the world, if he must ride on one back through life? Is he not rather a burden, a hindrance? and must he not be equally so, when he passes on to the future world, if he places his whole reliance on another to carry him through? Judging such persons by their fruits, what are the fruits? Are they professions, or are they acts? Will you then be saved by your professions, your faith in Him? or will you be saved by your fruits—your acts? "Many," says He, "will say to me in that day: Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name?" And then will I profess unto them I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Though you commence at the dawn of your life, and continue to its setting, in saying "Lord, Lord," proclaiming your professions, your faith, what does it amount to? by your fruits, your acts, ye are known—ye must rest on your own merits. Oh, ye infidels, who profess Christ, yet disbelieve his precepts. What is His answer when the two sons of Zebedee requested Him to allow one to sit on his right hand and the other on the left in the kingdom of heaven? He says, "to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared." How then, can you expect to be saved by your professions, your faith merely, to be provided with a place by Him, when he tells you it is not His to give? "It shall be given to them for whom it is prepared"—who are the best prepared? "By their fruits ye shall know them." Yet after all his sayings you place your whole dependence on Him for a passport; have you not awakened sufficiently from your stupor to perceive that you will reach Heaven only by your own merits, by the amount of good you have rendered to humanity? When ministers tell you "they have the charge of your soul," the spiritual part, (what is there left of the soul?) why set ye down, saying, oh, take it, take it, only leave to me my purse. Will you thus give up all right and title in your soul? Why do you not possess a soul of your own, and cling to it, and let its welfare be guided by your reason? Let your reason thoroughly dissect the ideas advanced to you; the good and the truth retain, but the rest, bury ye, and suck no longer its dry bones.

The pulpit, what is it, generally speaking? the tomb of mummies. What ought it to be? the fount of living principles, the rectifier of wrongs. When its minister tells you that he intends not to speak of social or political evils, I am unable to perceive what else is left concerning the interests of humanity for him to discourse upon; whether evils drag'd into the political arena, or social evils which comprise all the rest, it is the duty of the minister to strive to rectify. To omit discoursing on the evils of the people, is a sin of omission, and are you not told that the sins of omission are as great as the sins of commission. But says the preacher to himself, a living I must obtain, hence I must be particularly careful and not obstruct the glittering stream of cash as it flows gently from the parishoner's fount.

Why allow your brains to become so crammed with bills and coin, as to force your reason, your conscience, into your pockets. He that makes himself a slave to popularity, not only stunts his own growth, but is a curse to the rest of the human kind. Are you obliged to remain in the ministry to obtain your bread? No! go ye into the fields and till the soil, you will thus be of some use to the world, instead of a detriment, as you now are. There are some few ministers who are worthy their calling; their labors are directed to the working out the great problem of humanity, which is to elevate, to lift human kind out of this hell on earth, and establish in its place a heaven, whereby the people of the earth can realize Christ's saying: "The kingdom of heaven is within you." And but for these few, true Christians, the whole catalogue of "Reverends," would be swept into the abyss of obscurity. Reader, allow not your fear, your prejudice, to blind your reason; rest not satisfied with the idea that your fathers lived and believed thus and so, hence the same track you must follow. Progress is God's law, hence ideas become changed. He who will not follow his reason, dissecting every idea advanced before its acceptance, is but a shadow of a man. The pulpit needs to be born again; live, thinking, practical men, ought to be placed therein; such, and only such, readers, deserve your support,—all others deserve merely your contempt. L. S. R.

The art of not hearing should be taught in every well-regulated family. It is full as important to domestic happiness as a cultivated ear, for which so much money and time are expended. There are so many things which are painful to hear—many that we ought not to hear—very many which, if heard, will disturb the temper, corrupt simplicity and modesty, detract from contentment and happiness; that every one should be educated to take in and shut out sounds, according to their pleasure.

shuts my ear and I hear no more. If, in my quiet voyage of life, I find myself caught in one of those domestic whirlwinds of scolding, I shut my ears, as a sailor would unfurl his sails, and making all tight, scud before the gale. If a hot and restless man begins to inflame my feelings, I consider what mischief these fiery sparks may do in the magazine below, where my temper is kept, and instantly close the door.

Does a gridding, mischief-making fellow begin to inform me what people are saying about me, down drops the portculia of my ear, and he cannot get in any farther. Does a collector of a neighbor's scandal ask my ear as a warehouse, it instinctively shuts up. Some people seem anxious to hear everything that will vex and annoy them. If it is hinted that any one has spoken evil of them, they set about searching the matter and finding out. If all the pretty things said of one by heedless or ill-natured idlers were to be brought home to him, he would become a mere walking pincushion, stuck full of sharp remarks. I should as soon thank a man for emptying upon my head a bushel of nettles, or setting loose a swarm of ants in my chamber, or raising a pungent dust in my house generally, as to bring in all the tattlers of careless and spiteful people. If you would be happy, when among good men, open your ears; when among bad, shut them. As the throat has a muscular arrangement by which it takes care of itself, so should the ear be trained to automatic dullness of hearing. It is useless to hear what your servants say when they were angry; what your children say after they have slammed the door; what your neighbors say about your children; what your rivals say about your business, your dress, or your affairs.

This art of not hearing, though untaught in the schools, is by no means unknown or unpractised in society. I have noticed that a well bred woman never hears an impertinent or vulgar remark. A kind of discreet deafness saves one from many insults, from much blame, from not a little apparent conivance in dishonorable conversation.

There are two doors inside my ears—a right hand door leading to the heart, and a left hand with a broad and steep passage out into the open air. This last door receives all ugliness, profanity, vulgarity, mischief-making, which suddenly find themselves outside of me. Judicious teachers and indulgent parents save young urchins a world of trouble by a convenient deafness. Bankers and money-lenders often are extremely hard of hearing, when unsafe borrowers are importunate. I never hear a man who runs after me in the street, bawling my name at the top of his voice; nor persons that talk evil of those that are absent; nor those who give me unasked advice about my own affairs; nor those who talk largely about things of which they are ignorant.

If there are sounds of kindness, of mirth, of love, open fly my ears. But temper or harshness, or hatred, or vulgarity, or flattery, shut them. If you keep your garden gate shut, your flowers and fruit will be safe. If you keep your door closed, no thief will run off with your silver; and if you keep your ears shut, your heart will lose neither its flowers nor its treasure. — Henry Ward Beecher.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March 30th, 1861.

"BORN TO MASTER, OR NO SERVANT WE."

"TO READERS." "L. S. R." has replied to his several opponents in last week's paper, but his answer was received too late in the week for insertion to-day.

"R. R. D." of St. Louis, (Mo.) will receive early attention.

We should be glad to have "Linda Lindan" furnish the articles to which she alluded in a late letter.

FIFTY YEARS AGO. Our venerable friend, Josiah Brigham, Esq., has, from the storehouse of his memory, furnished an article on the educational resources of Quincy, fifty years ago, which may be found on the first page of our paper of to-day. The disadvantages there enumerated, which that generation, compared with the present, had to encounter, in the up-hill road to academic honors, are all true to the letter; the only incentive then to progress and development, were the birch and fable—and which, in many cases were pretty freely used; we speak from experience. Mr. Brigham, we believe, is a native of Northboro', Worcester county, in this State—but at an early period he cast his lot among us. In his career as an humble teacher of our public school, he was eminently successful; this he continued to follow for a number of years, but was finally induced to leave it for the more lucrative business of mercantile enterprise. Here, from small beginnings, he raised himself to affluence; carrying with him the esteem of the citizens of his adopted town, who bestowed on him many honors as a mark of their regard. A few years since, he severed all connection with trade and commerce, and retired to his home, to spend the remainder of his life in the quietude of a well-spent life.

DEATH OF A WORTHY CITIZEN. Rev. Thomas Whittier, one of the most esteemed and well known Universalist ministers in New England, died at his residence in Cambridgeport, on Thursday night, of last week, in the sixty first year of his age. His life was a very active one. He was a pupil of the late Hoses Ballou, and the instrument in the hands of the people, to expunge, from the statutes, that obnoxious law, known as the Third Bill of Rights, for the collection of ministerial taxes.

DANCING SCHOOL. Our juveniles will be very happy to learn that Mr. Russ B. Walker, our well known teacher, begins a course of lessons this morning, at Marietta Hall. His uniform success and pleasant manners have made him a general favorite, and he stands almost without a rival in the profession. The hard earned reputation of Mr. Walker, and the satisfaction he has given his former patrons, is a sufficient guarantee that his present term will be all he promises.

SPRING MEDICINES. The preparations of Dr. J. O. Langley, advertised in to-day's paper, have stood the test of time; they combine a judicious selection of roots and herbs, peculiarly adapted to the changes of the seasons, and especially as a gentle and renovating spring medicine, and have been in use for years, in this vicinity, to our knowledge, without the least complaint being made against them.

UNITED STATES CENSUS. The official census of the United States is completed. It shows a total of thirty-one million, four hundred and twenty-nine thousand, eight hundred and ninety-one (31,429,891). Of these 3,951,801 are slaves.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MARCH 28, 1861.

An article on the political phases of the country has recently appeared in one of the Boston dailies, high in the confidence of the Republican party, which is of a significant feature; it begins with saying that Government is in a fix; that there is no authority for collecting the revenue in the ports of the seceding States—nor is there any for blockading of those ports. It argues that the foreign trade of the country will float into the said ports, and free trade will virtually become the law of the Old and New Confederacy. That foreign merchandise with the proposed free trade of the seceding States, can, by re-shipment from those States, reach the North and great West free of all duty; thus waging a war of extermination on our National revenue—the only source of maintaining our Government, from the President down to the humblest official. It asks, what is to become with the office holders, high and low, who have been (as he says) so great, but are now of no more importance than the rest of mankind. The writer condemns the late Congress for closing its existence without preparing for these emergencies now impending. In the next Congress the Republicans would be no stronger, if so strong—save the Senate—than the last. There are symptoms, says he, of a breach—and pretty alarming symptoms they are too. The extreme right of the Republican party is backing down all the way and for the full length. The extreme left is adhering to every thing and would not yield an inch. Compromise, says the writer, means surrender, and surrender means that the South shall rule. The proposed abandonment of Fort Sumter, he asserts, is received with savor at the North, and the good results growing out of a proposed National Convention are questionable. After winning success, he maintains, that it is the duty of the ascendant party, to show themselves equal to the task that has been thrust upon them. This is a dark picture of a great party now in National power, drawn we have reason to believe, from a talented and honest minded man of its own ranks. But we can hardly agree with the inference of the writer that we have no government. The moral power of our Republic is still for union. The people of the South are becoming satisfied that the North is willing to do just of domestic slavery by Congress is all they want. This is the great National panacea for a re-union, and in our humble judgment, the only remedy. Over thirteen hundred thousand, good men and true, spoke at the polls in November last, in advocacy of the great principle of non-intervention—they were defeated but not annihilated, and are not only stronger in the faith than ever, but are daily getting adherents to their ranks from union men of every party. Slavery in our country is a local not a National question, to be managed by the people in their own way where it exists. It is not a legitimate matter of Congress, except for the suppression of the foreign slave trade, and the adoption of a fugitive slave law.

The State Legislature will finish its Session by Fast Day, if not sooner. It has tried hard to tinker on the General Statutes, with but little purpose. The usual budget of special laws, for which our State is noted, will go through the ordeal successfully. The fate of the new Usury Law is uncertain. The abolition of Capital Punishment, a favorite measure of Gov. Andrew, is likely to fail this Session.

Bank matters have fared hard, for the good reason that no new banks or increase of bank capital are now needed by the good people of the Commonwealth; money on good paper being more plenty than borrowers. The bad weather of March has had a depressing effect on business—it is dull here and no mistake. The inclement weather of the month has not only abridged active business, but has produced a general complaint of catarrhal affections, which will disappear with many only, at the approach of warm weather.

ANOTHER CHANGE. We think, it may now be safely said that winter has fairly left us. Before the searching rains, which we have experienced during the week, the snow has entirely disappeared, leaving the cold, grey earth again visible; but a few warm suns will add new life and animation to the scene, and call into requisition the services of the husbandman.

THE NEW TERRITORIES. The territory of Colorado embraces what was commonly known as Pike's Peak. It contains 100,000 square miles, and has a population of 25,000. It is made from parts of Nebraska, Kansas, and Utah. Its Capital is Denver City. The territory of Nevada extends south as far as New Mexico, and north as far as Oregon taking in Carson's Valley and Washoe silver mines. In addition to its mines it is a fine agricultural country. Virginia City is its Capital.

Decatur borders on British America, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska. It is between the parallels of 42° 15' and 49°, has 70,000 square miles, and very few inhabitants.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, MARCH 23d, 1861.

FRIEND GREEN: I can of course write of nothing from here, but the alarming position of our country; every day the fact is more apparent, that the Republicans, with the exception of Mr. Seward, and a few such, are in favor of breaking up the Union; when we look back upon the ridicule with which they assailed the Union-men during the late campaign, calling them old logies, fossils, union savers, and dreamers of dangers that never could happen; and then at their course after the election, and during the secession movement, when they cried so loudly for coercion, which was the surest way of hastening and completing the separation; and now that the Union is really dissolved, at their opposition to a reconstruction,—we cannot but see that there has been a fixed determination among such men as Wilson, Sumner, Hale and others, to form a Northern Confederacy, where they can reign supreme. In the conviction that they can never have weight or influence in the councils of the whole country, they are determined to ruin it, that they might become great men in a small section of it; in the spirit of personified ambition, they prefer to reign in hell than serve in heaven. Look over the editorials of the Republican papers for the last week, and you will see this preference unblushingly expressed; they even choose that New England be shut out from the reconstructed Confederation, that they may play the "grasshopper sitting on a rail." But may we not hope that the sober minded men of New England will so conduct themselves, that they be welcomed into the new Confederation which is to arise from the ruins of the old one, through the influence of the Central States, to whom we now look for the best influences.

The scramble for office here is most disgusting; one would think that every person who voted for Lincoln (if he considers he had less than one third of the votes), was an applicant, beside a number of your townsmen who are after the post office; which, by the way, will probably be continued under the attentive care of the good Deacon; there are over forty petitions for the Collectorship in your District; and I cannot tell from here, how many have besieged the Boston Custom House for their neighborhood; let us all hope for the future, and receive kindly the

For the Patriot.

The Willard Grammar School.

The following is a copy of the Protest sent to the Selectmen of Quincy, in relation to the Willard Grammar School:

"To the Honorable Board of Selectmen of the Town of Quincy, the undersigned would respectfully represent that they are members of the School Committee of said Quincy:

"That on Friday, March 22d, a meeting of said Committee was notified to elect teachers for the schools:

"That the day was so tempestuous that three of the Committee, who were desirous of being present, were unable physically from the state of the roads to reach the place of meeting:

"That the rules of the Committee require that the names of all candidates, for position as teachers in the schools, shall be submitted to the Committee by the Sub-Committee for action; and that a written ballot shall be necessary to the choice of any one of such candidates—they receiving a majority of such ballots:

"That at said meeting there were no names submitted for the consideration of the Committee by the Sub-Committees, or any other person, nor was any written ballot taken:

"That by a mere show of hands upon a mere motion, it was declared, in direct violation of the rules of the Committee, that Mr. Seth Dewing, Jr., was elected teacher of the Grammar School in the West District.

"We, the undersigned protest against this pretended election, and declare that it is in violation of our rules, irregular and void. And we would further respectfully declare to your Honorable Board:

"That the Statutes of this State require a certificate of qualifications and good character to be obtained by each teacher from the School Committee, and this must be an act of the Committee, not of any one or more individual members, properly certified by the Secretary of the Committee, as their act:

"That the certificate filed with you by a member of the Committee is not the act of the Committee, but a mere private expression of opinion in which we cannot join:

"That we, therefore, protest against the reception of this certificate, because it is not the opinion of a majority of the Committee, and also because it is not and cannot be the act, or certificate, of the Committee as required by law, in as much as we protest that we do not and cannot agree to such certificate:

"And we further aver that at a regular meeting held this day, Mr. Dewing's name was regularly proposed among other candidates for election, to the post of teacher of the Grammar School in the West District. Upon the motion of Dr. Duggan, and at the domination of Mr. Chealey, the District Committee of the West District, Mr. Dewing had no votes in his favor, and three opposed to his election, and was not elected.

"We therefore protest that Mr. Dewing was not regularly elected on March 22d, 1861; that the certificate filed with your Honorable Board is not the opinion of a majority of the Committee, and not an act of the Committee, and that the said Dewing was not elected upon a fair and regular ballot, and that he is not the teacher of said school.

D. H. BILLS, Chairman,
EDMUND POPE, Secretary,
GEORGE H. LOCKE.

NEW SPRING GOODS. The severe weather of the past fortnight has prevented many of our ladies from examining the extensive and beautiful assortment of Dry Goods recently added by Caleb Packard to his rare stock; which he is selling at his unusually low prices. He has some excellent prints at four cents per yard, and other things as reasonable.

For the Patriot.
President Abraham Lincoln.

TUNE—Auld Lang Syne.
His trust is in his Father—God,
And in his fellow-men;
He bears the balance and the rod,
Before their searching ken.
The emblems of a nation's power,
Her strength and justice wield;
And he's the man and now the hour,
For Freedom's battle field.
Be faithful in your country's sight,
Ye sons of patriot sires;
Sustain your Chief to guard the right,
With zeal that never tires.
Tho' treason lift her murky brow
In all its hideous form,
The nation's Chief shall wear the foe
To fear the nation's arm.
He comes no shaver in their spoil,
No pander to their will;
Traitors may go, the nation's soil
Shall bear our banner still.
And one and indivisible
The nation will remain,
Despite of mad-men's power or skill
To break the union chain.
F. M. Adlington.—Weymouth.

Katie Lee and Willie Gray.
Two brown heads with tossing curls,
Red lips shutting over pearls,
Bare feet white and wet with dew,
Two eyes black and two eyes blue;
Little boy and girl were they,
Katie Lee and Willie Gray.

They were standing where a brook,
Bending like a shepherd's crook,
Flashed its silver, and thick ranks
Of green willow fringed the banks:
Half in thought and half in play,
Katie Lee and Willie Gray.

They had cheeks like cherries red;
He was taller—most a head;
She, with arms like wreaths of snow,
Swung a basket to and fro,
As she loitered half in play,
Chattering to Willie Gray.

"Pretty Katie," Willie said—
And there came a dash of red
Through the brownness of his cheek—
"Boys are strong and girls are weak,
And I'll carry, so I will,
Katie's basket up the hill."

Katie answered, with a laugh:
"You shall carry only half;
And then teasing back her curls,
"Boys are weak as well as girls."
Do you think that Katie guessed
Half the wisdom she expressed?

Men are only boys grown tall,
Hearts don't change much, after all,
And when, long years from that day,
Katie Lee and Willie Gray
Stood again beside the brook,
Bending like a shepherd's crook,—

Is it strange that Willie said—
While again a dash of red Crossed the brownness of his cheek—
"I am strong and you are weak;
Life is but a slippery steep,
Hung with shadows cold and deep:

"Will you trust me, Katie dear?
Walk beside me without fear;
May I carry, if I will,
All your burdens up the hill?"
And she answered with a laugh,
"No, but you may carry half."

Close beside the little brook,
Bending like a shepherd's crook,
Washing with its silver hands,
Late and early at the sands,
In a cottage, where, to-day,
Katie lives with Willie Gray.

In a porch she sits, and lo!
Swings a basket to and fro,
Vastly different from the one
That she swung in years ago;
This is long, and deep, and wide,
And has—rockers at the side!

Night.

How beautiful is night!
A dewy freshness like the silent air,
No must obscure, nor cloud, nor speck nor stain
Breaks the serene heaven:
In full-orbed glory yonder moon divine
Rolls through the dark blue depths.
Beneath her steady ray
The desert circle spreads,
Like the round ocean, girdled with the sky.

Anecdotes.

I will bet you a bottle of wine that you shall descend from that chair before I ask you twice.
Done, said the gentleman, who seemed determined not to obey the summons so obediently.
Come down.
I will not, was the reply.
Then stop till I ask you a second time.
The gentleman, having no desire to retain his position until that period, came down from the chair, and his opponent won the wager.

Let go the job there! quick! let go! shouted the captain of an eastern packet to a rowing boat, as a sudden squall came up.
What's all that yelling about? I ain't touched yer job! honestly retorted Jonathan.

My dear fellow, have you been rubbing your nose with a cake of vermillion? asked a brother artist of Stipples, as he met the latter with a flaming complexion.
No, said Stipples, I never painted my nose with water colors.

You a dentist, Bob? I did not know you were in that trade.
Yes, said Bob, I follow no other business but setting teeth—in beef, potatoes, bread, and such like.
